When John Buchan, the English novelist and historian, was a guest of the Toronto Women's Press Club, he remarked that he had read several of Miss Wilson's poems and was very anxious to meet her. They met the day "Eager Footsteps" came off the press. Miss Wilson autographed a copy of her book for the noted Britisher, who then responded by breaking all the accepted precepts of the art of autographing. He signed his name on the flyleaf of a copy of her own work and presented it to her, remarking that this was a most unique kind of plagiarism.

Miss Wilson comes of a literary family. Her father, Robert Burns Wilson, was one of the most distinguished poets the southern states have given to America, while the novels of her uncle, Thomas Nelson Page of Virginia, have been read eagerly by two generations. She is fond of all kinds of animals, particularly babies, horses, puppy dogs and kittens.

WHAT is the difference between a client and a customer? Better try one of the big department stores. Possibly it depends on the size of the order.—Los Angeles Daily Times.

Sir Thomas Always Was Progressive

SIR THOMAS LIPTON, who made one of his frequent flying Canadian tours only a few days ago, was never backward in testing out the possibilities of new discoveries. This old photograph, which has just been dug out of oblivion, shows him at the beginning of the motor era, investigating the horseless carriage in which he has just invested.

The Law Was Repealed Here's the Reason Why

When Ex-Premier Murray of Halifax Was Given a Personal Demonstration, His Views Changed

SOME years ago, when Hon. George H. Murray, dean of provincial leaders, was premier of Nova Scotia, prohibition leaders visited him and asked a revision of the prohibition statutes by which officers could search the grips of travelers for liquor. Mr. Murray objected, but finally consented to the insistent demands of the drys.

Now the then premier was a constant traveler and made many trips from Sydney to Halifax. On one of these, the red-cap, as usual, grabbed his bag and started down the platform with it. The premier followed slowly. Imagine his indignation when he reached the train to find that two officers had taken charge of his baggage and were searching it.

"I was certainly mad to be one of the victims," the premier remarked afterwards. The liquor sleuths, of course, when they saw him, recognized the premier, apologized, and retreated in confusion, but the result of the incident was a revival of Murray's original ideas on the subject and the repeal of that clause in the statutes.

Ah, What Do You Expect If a Prof. Wears Braces?

A Living Example of the Phrase, "You Think You Know, But You Don't"

THOSE who know Professor H. E. T. Haultain, of the faculty of mining, Toronto university, will readily agree that his mien differs considerably from that of the accepted academician type. Breezy of address, ready and willing to exchange repartee, or to crack a joke with a subordinate, he achieved great popularity with his staff for his informality of manner while in charge of the vocational training of Ontario's disabled soldiers. And above all he hated "swank" in office procedure, for during the summer months he frequently transacted business in his shirt sleeves.

It was while he was so attired—and wearing braces, not a belt—that a well-dressed stranger entered the Spadina offices of the D.S.C.R. and accosted the coatless professor as he stood by the elevator.

"Say, old man," said the visitor, in the belief that he was addressing a minor employe, "I want to see the boss of this concern right away. Here's my card, and here's a cigar for your trouble."

Without a word, the professor took card and cigar, led the other through a maze of offices to his own sanctum, motioned him to a chair, and then sat down on the opposite side of the desk.

He studied the card for a moment. "Now, what can I do for you, Mr. Blank?" he enquired, with a twinkle in his eye.

"Great Scott!" gasped the amazed visitor. "Who are you?"

"The man you asked to see," replied the professor, who thereupon calmly lighted the cigar which had been proffered him as a tip.

DICK WHITTINGTON, JUNIOR OWES ALL TO THE P.O. CAT

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, noted American author and, before the Curtis absorption of the New York Evening Post, an outstanding feature of that paper, tells in his own inimitable style the secret of success of a well-known British editor whose name he carefully keeps hidden.

"He came down from Scotland as a youngster," says Morley, "to look, for a newspaper job. He tapped at all the doors, and found no entry. His small fund of money soon ran out, and he felt himself beaten. There seemed no room for him on Fleet street, and one night he wrote home asking for money enough to get back to Scotland. He went to the postoffice to buy a stamp for the fatal letter. On the counter sat a big black cat, comfortably licking her fur. In an idle moment the young man held out the stamp to see if the cat would moisten it for him. She did so, seeming to relish the sweet taste of the gum. He affixed the stamp and was about to drop the letter down the slit—

"Then he put the letter back in his pocket, ran to a desk in the corner and then and there wrote a brief story about the Stamp-Licking Cat at the Fleet street postoffice. How the postal authorities, always solicitous of the public convenience, had laboriously trained the animal to sit on the counter and lick stamps for customers. How the cat was specially nourished with a saliva-stimulating diet, and that a project was under way to mingle a little oil of catnip with the government's stamp-gum. And so on.

"The first newspaper editor to whom he offered this agreeably preposterous little yarn accepted it with glee. It was the journalistic coup of the week. Illustrated papers wired for photos, and the postoffice was crowded with people asking to see the cat. The S. P. C. A. hurried round to see if it was a matter within their jurisdiction. The sale of stamps at that office increased 40 per cent. And the author of the story has never since been without a job. It is the story of Dick Whittington over again, you see. I told you, didn't I, that England is all a kind of fairy-tale."

BUGS FOR FOOD

BY collecting beetles and other insects, the farmer can not only rid himself of the possible damage that they do, but can find a profitable use for the beetles. Chemical tests show that a common German variety of beetles contain 70.5 per cent. water. But of 100 parts of the dry residue of 29.5 per cent. it has been found that 55.2 per cent. is nitrogenous substance and 10.9 per cent. fat. When dried and ground coarsely the beetles may be mixed with the same quantity or double the quantity of crushed barley and form an excellent pig feed. Powdered dried beetles have been found to contain as much as 55.6 per cent. of nitrogenous substances and 25.5 per cent. of fat. The beetles are also valuable as fertilizer. That the values involved are by no means inconsiderable is evident from the fact that in one year, in the province of Saxony alone, 3,000 tons of these beetles were mixed with chalk and used as fertilizer.—Die Gartenlehre.

HE MAY MAKE ENEMIES BUT HE CAN'T KEEP THEM

Charles Hanna, Canada's Baby M.P., Is a Champion Joiner and Also an Aspiring Poet

OUT of the mist appears the figure of Charles E. Hanna, M.P. elect. The battle of West Hastings brought him into the public eye.

Everyone remembers that dramatic moment in the House of Commons when E. Guss Porter, M.P., his charges against Hon. James Murdock having failed, resigned his seat and went back to his constituents whom he had served for 23 years.

He went back and stood for re-election. Against him appeared a Belleville hardware merchant, practically unknown outside the riding. This hardware merchant won, when by all the rules he should have been snowed under.

This, in short, is the story of Charles E. Hanna's sudden leap into the spotlight. He is the hardware merchant.

The campaign was one of the bitterest ever fought in Canada, and the bitterness was reflected strongly in the two daily newspapers of Belleville. The Conservative paper hammered Hanna, the Liberal candidate, unmercifully for weeks.

Yet on the day following his victory, Mr. Hanna entered the doors of that newspaper, walked up to the editorial room and shook hands all around.

"I told you I'd shake hands after it was over," he said, his smile flitting to all corners of the room which was once Sir Mackenzie Bowell's private office.

This illustrates one factor which contributes largely to his great popularity in the district. Mr. Hanna can make enemies where a point is to be won, but he finds it difficult to keep them.

Adding also to his popularity is his spirit of unselfishness. The Belleville Kiwanis club, of which he is a member, was holding its regular weekly meeting. A request came for one Kiwanian to show the club's interest in the Boy Scouts by attending a scout meeting. First to volunteer was Charles Hanna.

An Ardent Fan

IF the Belleville baseball team is playing a game away from home, Charles Hanna's truck will generally be found parked near the ball ground. He has taken a load of fans to see the game.

can always inject fun into the particular task he has in hand. With all the demands made upon him during the election campaign, no one took more fun out of the fight than Charles Hanna himself.

When in charge of arrangements for the United Empire Loyalist celebration in Belleville early last summer, he had a heavy weight of responsibility on his shoulders. Yet when the first street parade was scheduled Charlie Hanna was found sitting on an old fashioned cart, driving a yoke of oxen. From his lips there dangled a long straw.

Not satisfied with being a Mason, labor man, retail merchant, Kiwanian, school trustee, Oddfellow, Y.M.C.A. director, Chamber of Commerce director, fall fair president, Health Board chairman and prominent member of sundry other organizations, he aspires to be a poet.

In the spirit of good fun that prevails at the Wharf Street Debating club he has composed a poem a year for presentation at the annual meeting of this unique society. That is until this year.

Appearing before the members last week, Mr. Hanna apologized for not carrying out his usual part in the program. He had been too busy electioneering to wait upon the Muse he said.

Incidentally, among his other successful enterprises he managed the Belleville section of the recent dominion wide marbles and jacks contest among the members of the younger generation.

No one feels hurt now when Mr. Hanna leaves a meeting suddenly or drops into a banquet just after the meal has been served. West Hastings people are accustomed to his ways. With no other motive than that of keeping in touch with as much of the community's activities as possible, he will be found often at three or four meetings in an evening. And the strange point in this connection is that Mr. Hanna's arrival is always noticed, but few are made aware of his departure.

One evening at the Great War Veterans' club someone started up the song: "What's the matter with Charlie?" Everybody looked around for Mr. Hanna. He had gone.

"How in heck did he get away?" said one veteran. Nobody knows.

Wit Among the Swiss

WHETHER the Swiss can be witty is generally held to be a moot point, says Mr. St. Loe Strachey, who, however, brings forward one anecdote as affirmative evidence.

A German officer reproached one of the Papal Swiss Guards for being a mercenary.

"You fight for money," he said, "while we Germans fight for honor."

"Certainly!" agreed the Swiss. "Everybody fights for that which he needs most."

TIGERS STOPPED BY CANADIENS

SCORE WAS 6 TO 2

MONTREAL, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press). — Hamilton's winning streak was halted at four straight games, the Tigers meeting their first defeat in the National Hockey League this season when they were trounced by the Canadiens here Saturday night 6 to 2. Six thousand fans witnessed the Stanley Cup holders demonstrate unquestioned superiority over Jimmy Gardner's sextette in the scrappiest struggle seen on the ice here this winter.

Hamilton counted the first goal of the struggle early in the tilt, but after ten minutes of play they lost command and in the two final periods were no match for the speedy aggressive Canadiens.

Seventeen penalties were handed out by Referee Dr. O'Leary in what proved the most strenuous and bitterly-fought game locally this season.

The game had no sooner started than it became apparent that heavy play was to rule. Body-checking was of the stiffest, sticks were carried high, cross-checking and tripping were mixed in with other minor tricks, both sides equally culpable. All penalties were minors until the last. Just before the game ended Sprague Cleghorn was given two minutes for a minor offence. He started to argue the point with Referee O'Leary who brought the penalty up to a major. Cleghorn skated after the official to demonstrate further and shoved him from behind, the arbiter just as promptly ordering the Canadien captain off for the remainder of the match.

Burch and the two Greens scintillated in the first session and stood up well against the dazzling play of the Canadien forwards, Morenz, Joliat and Billy Boucher. Burch plugged along doggedly throughout, but the two Greens found the going too heavy. Try as they did they could not get by Sprague Cleghorn and Billy Couto, their short, quick passing game being successfully broken up by the heavy body-checking of the stalwart local defence men.

On the other hand, once the Canadien forwards found the measure of Langlois and Ken Randall, they found little difficulty in getting close on top of Forbes in the Tiger net and peppered him with shots. Frequently finding his defence circled or spit asunder, Forbes started to rush out of his net to attempt to block shots and left the Canadiens with an easy target. In the second and third quarters it was just a parade for the local team when they wanted goals.

Barring his fray with Referee O'Leary, Sprague Cleghorn turned in a magnificent game. Besides his sturdy play in breaking up rushes of the Hamilton attack, he featured in the Canadien goal-getting. He scored Canadiens' second goal, to give the locals the lead in the first period and led the attack early in the second session that left Couto in position to bring the margin to two goals. Later he went through alone in a swerving, tricky thrust that added further to the lead and settled beyond all question the result of the game.

DOMINION BANK WIN FIRST HALF OF BANKERS' LEAGUE

The Dominion Bank sprung a big surprise on the Toronto Bank in the Bankers' League, when they stepped right into the Toronto outfit and walloped them for three straight, and by so doing gave the championship of the first half to the Royals.

At the start of the games Saturday afternoon at the Water Street Alleys the Toronto outfit looked like sure winners of the first half, for they were sitting pretty on the top of the heap. But the Dominion gang upset the dope. They waded right into the Toronto outfit and knocked them sailing off the top pedestal, and let the Royal Bank slide gently into the coveted position. It was a great climax to a hard fought first half.

The Bankers' League was a great success. It supplied some thrilling games and was hard and closely fought. The closeness of the league can be noticed in the standing, two teams finishing a tie for second, and three teams a tie for fourth place.

	Won	Lost	P.C.
Royals	14	7	.667
Commerce	13	8	.619

BELLEVILLE WANT GAMES WITH PETES

Lake Shore Club Favor Intermediate Group With Locals.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 15.—Belleville hockey officials and fans are very anxious to have Peterboro Intermediates in the same group as the locals for more reasons than one.

Peterboro have for the past few years been in a "soft" group with Lindsay, the town that sponsors junior hockey and the smaller town of Lakefield.

They grab off their group in practice games so to speak, without injury or hard battles and are all primed for the next contender.

Belleville has always been in a tough group and by the time they have disposed of the Kingston, Brockville and Cornwall rough riders they show the scars of hard battles.

It is also felt here that with Peterboro in this group, the Arnott arena would not accommodate the crowds which would clamor for admittance, so great would be the interest.

COBOURG CHURCH LEAGUE

Re-organizing of Teams Promises Good Season's Hockey.

COBOURG, Dec. 13.—At a meeting of the Inter-Church Hockey League re-organization was effected with very enthusiastic prospects for a successful team. It is expected that there will be Junior and Juvenile teams on the Inter-Church League the coming season. Following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Rev. Canon Savers.
Hon. Vice-President—C. R. Gummow.
President—Mr. W. Sparling.
Vice-President—Wilfred Gerin.
Secretary—Murray Walsh.
Treasured—H. C. Higginbottom.

SPEED OF 126.9 MILES

CULVER CITY, Calif., Dec. 15.—Bennett Hill, driving his car at an average speed of 126.9 miles an hour won the 250 mile race under the auspices of the American Automobile Association here Sunday, negotiating the distance in one hour, 58 minutes, 18 3-5 seconds.

Harry Hartz, was second, Tommy Milton, third, Fred Comer, fourth and Williiam Shattuck, fifth.

Hill shattered the 250 mile average, 118.17 miles, made by Tommy Milton at Charlotte, N.C., last year. Hill and Milton made no stops.

Though Hill took first honors in today's race, the result of the speed classic was to put the 1924 American Automobile Association classic in the hands of Jimmy Murphy, billed a few months ago at Syracuse.

Earl Cooper, the only driver in the race with a chance to win the championship, lost that cance when he dropped out of the race at the end of the 17th lap on account of engine trouble.

Harry Hartz' feat in nosing out Milton for second place after having been forced to drop precious seconds in the pits for a tire change, was the sensation of the race. Averaging around 133 miles an hour, the handicapped driver, thrust back the miles with only 20 still to go until in the last quarter he overtook and squeezed past Milton.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

SOO INTACT FOR THE S.P.A. FINAL

PETES A SURPRISE

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—Three important games will be played at the Arena this week with the climax coming on Saturday night when the Soo play the winners of Tuesday's fixture between Parkdale and Peterboro in the final S.P.A. game.

Last year's S.P.A. final provided one of the best games of the season when the Olympic team trimmed the Greyhounds in the final period of a hectic encounter in which the northerners looked just as good as the world champions in the first two sessions. Contrary to last season, however, when the all-star Canadian representatives reigned favorites, conditions will be reversed and George McNamara's speed champions will likely be on the long end. It is expected that Parkdale will be the O.H.A. representatives and if the Paddlers capture Tuesday night's affair, the final of the series should be in the same class as one of the final games of the season.

Soo Regulars Are Intact.

Despite the loss of Cain and Coob to the pros the Soo are in the fortunate position of being able to present the regular line up which was good enough to carry off the Canadian honors last year. Flat Walsh will again give an exhibition of his fancy diving around goal assisted by those doughty foremen "Babe" Donnelly and Stan. Brown and abetted in their design of carrying off the Sportsmen's silverware by the three veteran musketeers, Phillips, Woodruff and Lessard. A pro club would give a fortune to get such a squad and any member of the sextet would make a valued addition to any team in the Calder circuit.

Are Favored For Allan Cup.

The Soo squad will likely be again favored to go through to the Allan Cup finals, and the game will provide good criterion as to what the chance of the O.H.A. representatives will be if they should fight their way through to the play-offs.

Pitted against either of the semi-finalists, the Greyhounds will have their work cut out to win, as the O.H.A. representatives not only have the material, but an advantage in the number of games that they have put under their belt.

Parkdale Likely Opponents.

From present indications Parkdale would look to have the best chance of stopping the northern flyers. Certainly in Watson, Romeril, Jeffrey and Lount they have a front line that looks to be the class of any in the O.H.A. But Watson, Smith and McCaffrey had the time of their lives looking after the Soo trio, so that the local quartet will have their work cut ou next Saturday. However, whatever the result may be the fans should be provided with as lively a tilt as they will witness in some time

But if the Paddlers are foolish enough to get the idea that their game on Tuesday night will be only a pastime, Peterboro will have the task of keeping out the northern invaders. It is hoped that the Greyhounds will be able to be at full strength, but Phillips and possibly some of the others may not be able to play. The crack centre player had his hand lacerated by a dog bite while Eddie Burk, who will likely be the chief substitute on the forward line, was laid out by a flying puck.

Petes Furnish Surprise.

Peterboro has been the surprise package in the O.H.A. race. It was thought that Niagara Falls would experience little difficulty in putting them under cover but an unexpected stop to the progress of the Falls sextet. With a real good team at any time the boys from the Lift Lock city have been strengthened by the addition of McLeod and Bailey, so that they are quite capable of giving any senior team a battle. Tuesday's game will be a real test as to their probable strength in the senior group in which they have been placed. For a team that has had no practice they have furnished a marvelous exhibition and will have plenty of local support in their future games here.

CHANGE OWNERSHIP.

Game With St. Patrick's Did Not Produce Much Hockey.

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Change of ownership in the local club, the addition of Happy Day to the team, and the presence of five former local players on the Montreal team combines to attract the largest crowd of local professional season to the Arena on Saturday night, where they saw Montreal outplay St. Patrick's by the score of 3 to 1, and climb up onto the third rung of the championship ladder alongside St. Patrick's, and will be further crowded to-night when the winner of the Ottawa-Boston game clambors up. The game in which the Irish lost sole possession of third place did not produce much hockey in the accepted term of the word, but it was exciting throughout.

Another member of the team that won the world's championship for St. Patrick's in 1921-22 has been disposed of by the local owners, the deal having been completed on Saturday, whereby William ("Red") Stuart was sold to Art Ross's Boston club for an unstated amount. Stuart's departure vesterday left Roach and Dye the sole survivors of the Irish championship team.

VISITING BRITISH PROS.

LEFT, MITCHELL; RIGHT, DUNCAN

Golfing at the southern and Pacific coat resorts this winter will have an international flavor.

George Duncan and Abe Mitchell, noted Britishers, are invading the states for a three-months' campaign.

Duncan is called England's leading stylist, now that Vardon has passed from the front ranks.

Mitchell is one of the game's longest drivers.

They will play in the winter tournaments as well as in matches against Hagen, Walker, Sarazen and other top-notchers.

NEW AMATEUR RULE FOR TENNIS STARS

Drafted by Committee, But Requires Two-Third Vote.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The proposed new amateur rule of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, governing activities of player-writers, has been unanimously adopted by the executive committee of the U.S.L.T.A. The new rule, drafted by a special committee, contains four provisions which definitely limit the activities of players who write for pecuniary benefit.

Before the measure can be enforced it must be presented to the association at its annual meeting and a two-thirds favorable vote obtained.

The new rule, adopted as a compromise measure, clarified the player-writer situation and leaves no doubt as to the limits a player-writer can go. The four provisions which are considered the most important follow:—

"A person will be considered to have forfeited his amateur status by committing any of the following acts:—

"By permitting or sanctioning his name to be advertised as the author of books or articles on tennis of by receiving payment or consideration for 'commensurate' services which he does not actually render.

"By using or sanctioning after February 1925, the use of his titles or statement of his reputation won on the tennis courts in connection with books, newspaper, magazine or other written articles, motion pictures of himself, lectures, or radio talks for which he is to receive any payment or compensation.

"By writing for pay or for a consideration current newspaper articles covering a tournament or match in which he is entered as a competitor."

SASKATOON WIN AGAIN

SASKATOON, Sask, Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press). — Saskatoon is yet unbeaten in the Western Canada Hockey League as a result of a 4 to 1 victory over the Victoria Cougars here Saturday night.

FABLES ON HEALTH

"Ever try sea bathing in winter?" Mr. Mann of Anytown smiled and shivered at the question.

"I mean, in your own bathroom," continued the questioner.

Mr. Mann shook his head.

Salt water baths, mixed in one's own bathtub, are quite stimulating and restful.

In nervous disorders physicians frequently prescribe that the patient mix sea salts in hot water before retiring, dip a towel well in the solution and ring it out, letting the towel absorb the salt during the night.

On the following morning the patient after several minutes' exercise, rubs his open-pored body briskly with the towel and a most stimulating and nerve-soothing effect is secured.

A pleasant reaction is to be had from sprinkling sea salt in the bathtub and, in many cases, it has been found helpful in cases of run-down constitutions.

GRANDMOTHERLY

They are not the Russian revolution. They are the enemies of the revolution. They misrepresent the revolution. Soviet Russia has sustituted the tyranny of Trotzky and Kameneff for the tyranny of the czars.

"In place of the cruelties of the Okhrana, the dreaded secret police of the czars, we have the dreaded cruelties in the Che-ka, the Soviet police. If anything there is less liberty of thought in Russia now than there was in the days of the czars.

"In making searing attacks upon these people I am not playing the game of capitalist governments. I am playing the game of revolutionary truth. The Soviets, as constituted, are totally misrepresentive of the deep human desires of the Russian moujiks who, though uneducated in book learning, are fundamentally among the most capable people in the world. Anarchist philosophy—the kind I tried to preach in America—has always been misrepresented in the press. In its essence it means the purest form of co-operation, where people are free and where there is no state compulsion. That is the vision the Bolsheviki have betrayed.

"You ask me about a statement I made the other night at the banquet in my honor. I said I had been approached regarding my possible return to the United States, but that I had said once for all that if I returned I would not return on any terms whatsoever. Don't misunderstand. The government officially made no such advances. But people did come to see me to feel out how I felt about it.

If She Came Back to U.S.

"If I came back to America I would most certainly try to take up my life where I left it off. I would write. I would talk. But there would be some changes. Life and actual experiences have taught us revolutionists something. You see none of us had ever been in a real revolution. It took actual experience in Russia to teach us what we had forgotten—that it is easier to destroy, to tear down, than to build up. In Russia the people tore down the old monarchy. But they have not been able to build up the new thing of which they had a vision. The Bolsheviki intervened.

"I think, too, the people of the United States must be wiser than they were I was condemned for denouncing war as something wicked. I said nothing good came out of war. Well has it? Is the world any better? Isn't it true that there is more hatred, more narrow nationalism than before the war? Are not the Ku Klux Klan in America, the Hitlerites in Germany, the Awakening Magyars in Hungary all the outgrowths of the war?

"You ask me whether all these things make me a pessimist. Optimist—pessimist—they are words. No one can be entirely one or the other in this world, any more than he can be all saint or all sinner.

"Regardless of how one feels, one must go on battling for his ideals, Renoir, master of modern French painting, worked with crippled fingers till he dropped. Beethoven, although deaf, composed divine melodies he could never hear. They had ideas they had to give expression to. So in a modest way it is with me I am ar fighter. I have spent all my I am a fighter. I shall die fighting. There can be none of this by sit-by-the-fire stuff for me."

Runaway Horses.

When Mr. Thos. Kerr was returning from Allan's Mills on Wednesday evening, his feet became quite cold, so he decided to walk up a long hill just this side of the mill. After he had been walking for some time his team decided to travel on without him, so they started off on the run, and knowing that their driver was not present, they more than exceeded the speed limit.

Mr. Kerr cut across country but did not succeed in heading them off. The wagon and harness were slightly injured, although the horses were not badly cut, except for a cut on one of their heels.

A public meeting was held in the Union School-House on Monday evening last week to discuss building a Community Hall. Mr. F. D. IANY ATTRACTIONS

AKEFIELD, Dec. 13.—The Fair Nations, held in the Lakefield morial Hall on Thursday afternoon evening, was an unqualified suc- financially and from the point of g a remarkably attractive spec- e, and also for the fact that all workers filled their posts so effi- tly. Mrs. L. H. Grahame was the ener of the central committee, with her corps of workers planned accomplished the most unique and st affair of the kind ever held in village. As one entered the hall, ich was decorated with dozens of ninese lanterns, greens and flags, one s dazzled by the number of booths l artistically dressed workers.

Rev. and Mrs. Walter Cox received visitors, and were dressed as the ar of Wakefield and his wife. The ar was dressed in black Rene breeches, g stockings and buckled shoes and h a white wig tied at the nape of neck with black ribbon and the rical hat of the period, and was the rsonification of the benevolent vicar. s. Cox, in a plum-colored silk dress h hoop skirt, fischer and bonnet, was dainty little figure, and received compliments for her impersona- n.

Arabian Touch.

The first booth on the left, as one ne in, was the Eastern booth, and s presided over by veiled ladies in cturesque costumes suggestive of the abian Nights. This booth had any pretty articles for sale, varying from hand-made flowers to the da intiest of aprons. Those in charge were Mesdames E. R. Tate, G. H. Grahame and T. Jewell.

The next booth was the French booth, with a French-looking chintz background and attendants dressed in white skirts with waists and panniers of bright-colored chintz and black Napoleon hats with cockades of flowers. They sold dolls, toys and knitted goods. Those in charge were Mesdames G. G. Connell, S. W. Sutton, H. Northey and Miss Nancy Tate.

Chinese Booth.

In close proximity to the French booth was the Chinese booth, with background of black with large yellow dragons standing out in bold relief. The oriental goods displayed there were attractive, and were sold by three "Chinese maids" in the costumes of the Celestial Empire in black trousers and gaily-trimmed coats and mandarin hats of black. Misses Gertrude Summers, Etta Ogilvie and Dell Watson were in charge.

Next was the Grecian booth, where the embroidered linen goods was the stock-in-trade. The attendants, in graceful white Grecian robes with girdles of soft green leaves and softly dressed hair with bands of ribbon and leaves, were Mrs. Fawcett and Misses Helen Simpson and Yvonne Stuart.

Refreshment Staff.

The refreshment stall was a sym phony in blue and white, with the tea tables set with blue and white china and blue and white covers and serviettes and a quartette of Dutch girls to serve tea. The Dutch costumes consisted of full bright-colored skirts, white blouses, high black velvet girdles laced down, and stiff white Dutch caps. They were Mesdames Strickland, Stuart, T. Waldon and Fletcher.

The home cooking table, with its tempting wares, was placed in front of the stage, and was in charge of Mesdames J. Mahood and W. Watson and Miss Hetherington, in white dresses and pink caps and aprons. In the centre of the hall was placed the Jumble Table with a large variety of articles, ranging from useful articles to fancy goods of every description. Mesdames J. Sanderson, A. Wannamaker and C. Stenner, all dressed in mauve gowns and white caps and aprons.

In the centre of the hall was also the desk of the secretary-treasurer, Miss Graham.

At the right of the entrance was "Aunt Sally's" reception room with two pirates (Messrs. M. Hampton and P. Stenner) in charge. This was a great attraction, especially to the men and boys.

Mrs. H. G. FitzGerald was next, with the unique attraction of the Hidden Treasure, which drew throngs of people.

The Candy Booth.

The Candy Stall was very attractive with its dainty colored baskets of candy of various varieties. The attendants were dressed as Christmas crackers in green, rose, blue and red crepe paper, and were very pretty. They were Misses Ruth Crawford, Gwen Simpson, Angela Osborne and Effie Webster.

Instead of the usual fish pond, Mr. Reg. Murduff, in a curtained recess, had a novelty in the shape of "Feed the Duck," which was a magnet for the small boy.

An Indian Rajah and an Arabian Shiek (Messes. G. H. Grahame and Kennin Hamilton) were the presiding genii of the miscellaneous clothes line which did a thriving business until the goods were all sold.

A peanut and popcorn cart circled about the hall in charge of Mrs. Eric Grier (in a red coat, gold braid, blue skirt and Tommy Atkins cap) and Miss Maxwell Hamilton.

Other attractions were in charge of a bevy of young girls who were dressed in a variety of pretty and artistic costumes, viz.:—Misses Mary Mackenzie (Spinning Top), Hazel Crawford (Butterfly), Mae Mahood (Folly), Winnie Payne (Rose), Fern Wannamaker (Peacock), Ida Webster (Black Eyed Susan), Helen Burgess (Egyptian), and Verna Payne (Daisy). These costumes, with their bright color, added to the brilliance of the scene.

Concert and Dancing.

In the evening a short, informal entertainment was given by an invisible choir, with Mr. G. G. Connell at the piano and Rev. W. Cox as leader. Among the singers were Messrs. R. L. Mason, E. R. Tate, R. D. Murduff, K. Hamilton, O. A. Langley, E. J. Robertshaw, A. V. Summers; Ira Lennox, M. Hampton and G. H. Grahame, and their rendition of old melodies was delightful. A topical song, rendered by Messes Cox, Robertshaw and Grahame, brought down the house. Mr. Fletcher kindly gave a couple of violin selections, which were much appreciated.

At nine-thirty the centre of the hall was cleared for dancing, and the younger people tripped "the light fantistic" to the strains of popular music played by The Grove Five-piece Orchestra (Fawcett (piano), Flick (violin), Leeming (banjo), Robertson (saxophone) and Pringle (drums)). Mesdames J. W. Todd and T. B. Marling were in charge of the dancing. Mr. Fred Moon was in charge of the door, and Mr. Hanlon Payne, in a suit of motley, provided a little fun while the crowd gathered.

The sale of tickets was under the direction of Miss M. Hampton, who announces that Miss Dell Watson won the ticket-selling contest. The total receipts to date are more than $450, and are most gratifying to those who had worked to make the affair go off well.

Winners of the articles drawn for were:—Doll, Miss Ione Sanderson; necklace, Reeve J. C. Strickland; paddle (donated by Mr. Mahood), Capt. P. J. Young; white sweater (donated by Mrs. F. J. Tate), Mrs. Mackenzie; evening dress, Mr. Ken. Hamilton; red cedar tray (donated by Mr. S. White), Mr. O. A. Langley; handbag (donated by Mr. Chappell), Mr. Chas. Thomson; quilt, Miss Myrtle Kidd; hidden treasure—Misses Kennedy, Pearl Peacock, Maxwell Hamilton and Master Gordon Strickland each won 25 cents; Mrs. W. Cox and Mrs. Fawcett each won 50 cents, and Mr. R. Murduff won the $5 gold piece.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—My attention has just been called to a letter which appeared in The Examiner of Dec. 5 over the signature of G. N. Gordon. In this letter, Mr. Gordon takes exception to some statements made by me at a public meeting in Peterboro on Dec. 3.

Mr. Gordon attempts to divert attention from himself and the Government in regard to the Redistribution Bill passed at the last session of Parliament, and to place the responsibility on the Conservative Party. He also refers to his own inglorious efforts in preventing any discussion on Mr. Duncan Marshall's political activities while being paid out of the Dominion Treasury. He also outlines what he considers my proper course should have been, and indulges in such choice classical terms as, "Trying to buffalo the public on redistribution and howling about it to people who do not understand the real situation." In view of the tenor of Mr. Gordon's letter, it is quite evident he does not desire that the readers of The Examiner should understand the real situation. In regard to the questions referred to by him, the difference between the attitude of Mr. Gordon and myself, on the matters alluded to, is that I stated at the Peterboro meeting exactly what I stated in the House of Commons when Mr. Gordon was present, but it is only at this late date we have heard from him on the two questions—Redistribution and Mr. Duncan Marshall.

With regard to the first, let me give some of the facts from the records. A special select committee of nineteen members was appointed to deal with the matter and report to the House, composed of ten Liberals and five dependable Progressives and four Conservatives. Of the Liberals, six were cabinet ministers, yet Mr. Gordon would have you believe the opposition were responsible for what happened. In so far as the Counties of Hastings and Peterborough are concerned, the Government insisted upon dividing them as has been done. The Government supporters and the Progressives on the sub-committee for Ontario voted solidly against the motion, moved by Mr. Stewart of Leeds and myself, to have East and West Peterborough one constituency and East and West Hastings to remain as they were. This can be confirmed by Hansard of July 15th, when Mr. Stewart dealt with what had taken place in committee. Hansard, of that date, also shows that Mr. Gordon attempted to justify dividing Peterborough County on the plea of population, which was 43,034, overlooking the fact that of the 82 constituencies in Ontario under the redistribution just passed, there are fifteen with an average population of 58,100 for each. Russel remains as it was with 43,413; Lincoln with 48,625, and Welland, 66,668.

With the Government and the Progressives acting in unison, the Conservative members on the committee were eventually forced to agree on a compromise in order to save from a greater injustice many other Ontario constituencies: for instance, Lambton, London, Middlesex, Haldimand, Brant, Wentworth, Halton, Peel, West York, Parry Sound, Nipissing, Frontenac, etc. Mr. Gordon Speaks about "buffaloing the public," whatever that means. Will he be good enough to show where, at any time, he even suggested any plan except to divide Peterborough and attaching part of it to Hastings?

Now, with respect to that inglorious episode: the voting of the people's money to pay Mr. Duncan Marshall's salary of $6,000 per year, and expenses. Mr. Gordon states in his letter that I attempted to discuss this matter in the committee of supply, and that he ruled the debate out of order. He states that if I thought I had a good case, my proper course was to have appealed from his decision. The incident is altogether too clear in my mind for me to allow even the Deputy-Speaker, who was in the chair at the time, to misrepresent my attitude. Shortly after the present Government assumed office, an Order in Council was passed, under date of Feb. 7th, 1922, on the recommendation of the Minister of Agriculture, appointing Mr. Marshall a commissioner to make certain investigations into the advisability of continuing or discontinuing the annual grant of $1,100,000 to the Provinces under the Agricultural Instruction Act. The appointment was dated back to the 15th January, with a salary of $6,000 per year and expenses. That this was only a ruse to get Mr. Marshall on the pay-roll is borne out by the fact that Mr. Marshall long ago reported favorable to continuing the grant to the Provinces, but the Government has discontinued it. Mr. Marshall's political activities became so noticeable and evident that at the session of 1923, on the voting of the estimates of the Department of Agriculture, objection was raised to Mr. Marshall acting as a political agent of the Government while being paid out of the Dominion Treasury. Having noticed, in a Scottish Agricultural Journal, that Mr. Marshall was attending auction sales of Shorthorn cattle in Scotland and making purchases, when the item of $1,230,000 for live stock was reached, I attempted to deal with the matter when I was called to order by the chairman of the committee (Mr. Gordon) and informed that Mr. Marshall's salary came under the head of Civil Government. Receiving that assurance from the chairman of the committee, I gave way, but not satisfied that it came under the head of Civil Government I looked over the estimates, and shortly after the item for agricultural instruction was reached, when Mr. Spencer, the member for Battle River, Alberta, enquired as to whether the salary paid the commissioner of agriculture was included in that item, to which the Minister of Agriculture replied, "No."

I then asked where it came in—that I could not find it under the head of Civil Government—to which the Minister (Mr. Motherwell) replied that it was in the previous vote which had just been passed. I then attempted to discuss the matter again, but was ruled out of order by the chairman (Mr. Gordon). After a further attempt on my part, Mr. Gordon stated that it could only be discussed by unanimous consent of the committee.

Sir Henry Drayton remarked I understood the minist was going to ask for that consent, and to this Mr. Motherwell called out: "No, no." I question whether th records of a British Parliament contain another instance where the chairman of the Committee of Supply (the Deputy-Speaker of the House of Commons) had misled the members of the committee by claiming that the vote for a certain purpose came under the head of an item which was not the case at all—in this way securing the passing of the item complained of without discussion.

When the effect of his unparalleled action was pointed out a few minutes after he refused to revert to the previous item which, under the circumstances, he had a perfect right to do. At the same time, he was encouraged in his stand by the minister responsible to Parliament for a proper expenditure of the money voted, even submitting to the charge of smuggling items through the Committee of Supply by the methods referred to. After the Leader of the Opposition, Rt. Hon. A. Meighen, stated that the appointment was obviously and brazenly an illegal one, and was refused a fiat by the Minister of Justice to sue to recover the amount claimed to have been illegally paid to Mr. Marshall. Certain correspondence took place between the Auditor-General's Department and the Department of Agriculture which shows that Mr. Marshall was neve even Commissioner of Agriculture. See page A148, Auditor-General's report for 1922 and 1923.

As a result of the methods resorted o, Mr. Marshall has been paid out of the public treasury $19,917.88. He has spent one winter in Florida, made three trips to the United States, three o Great Britain, and one to France, in addition to addressing Libera' political a semblies in Ontario, at least.

With such a record and achievement in securing the passing of supply to provide for a protege of the Government out of the public treasury, what becomes of the Prime Minister's oft-repeated claim to democracy for his Government.

CHURCH UNION.

Editor, The Examiner.

Sir,—Would you be so good as to allow a little space for a few remarks on the above subject? I had not intended to try to convince any one of my views, thinking the common sense of the people in this twentieth century would easily convince all right-thinking Christians of the great necessity of joining our forces to combat the growing tendency to forget the House of God and take the broad way, take all our villages, and what do we find, several of our different denominations all preaching the same Gospel to less than half-filled churches, at a heavy expense, and our great North-West fast filling up with humanity and no one to preach the Gospel to them. Surely our common Christianity would teach us to combine our forces and send our extra men and money to those who have no Gospel proclaimed to them. When our General Assembly and our presbytries have decided by large majorities in favor of Church Union, surely we will be willing to follow their lead. Let us all take our Bibles and study them carefully, especially Romans, 13th chapter, and see if we can't all join forces for a great forward advance for the Kingdom of our Lord and Master.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, yours sincerely,

PEACE-MAKER.

LATIN STUDENTS BEST.

Investigators Report Them Leading Others In All Subjects.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The conclusion that Latin students surpass non-Latin students in mastery of other subjects, has been reached by the American Classical League and the Bureau of Education after a three-year survey of the present-day trend and value of classical studies.

"This superiority," the bureau said in reporting the conclusions, "seems to be due to something gained from the study of Latin rather than to greater initial ability."

Records of 10,000 candidates for college entrance in the past ten years were cited to show that Latin students fared better by about 13 per cent. than non-Latin students in subjects other than Latin and Greek.

The bureau said courses in Latin now are enrolling more high school students than those in all other languages combined, with approximately 22,500 Latin teachers instructing 940,000 students in the secondary schools.

On Friday, Dec. 12, the W.M.S. MacGillvray of Shanghai, China. The following is the list of officers elected for 1925:

A. Logan.

The Treasurer's report, given by Mrs. G. S. McKee, showed a total raised for all purposes, $1,785.43. The Faithful Workers' Mission Band contributed $28 to the general fund.

48th Annual Report of St. Paul's W.M.S.

To the President and members of St. Paul's W.M.S. Auxiliary, I beg leave to submit the following report:

We have a membership of 146, with an average attendance at our meetings of 53.

The executive met on Jan. 8 to arrange a programme of work and study for the year. The book chosen for study was "The Island Beautiful," and it has provided many interesting programmes, giving, as it does, a description of the island, the people, and their religious, also the history of the growth of Christianity—since Dr. G. L. McKay, the pathfinder of North Formosa, landed there.

On Jan. 4, Rev. Mr. Grobb gave his Passion Play pictures and lecture. The proceeds, after expenses were paid, went to our expense fund.

At our January meeting we were favored by having Miss Gemmel speak to us on C.G.I.T. work. She described the programme, founded on the development of Christ's life, "He grew in wisdom, and stature, and in favor with God and man, the fourfold development." As a result of her visit a C.G.I.T. group was organized under the leadership of Miss Jean Anderson. They contributed $10 to the general fund.

In February a bale of clothing was sent to Manitoba in response to a call for help from some needy ones there.

In March, 21st to 24th, there was a missionary conference of all the churches in this dictrict held in St. Paul's Church. The sessions were well attended and much interest was taken in the addresses and discussions, the church being filled at almost every meeting with interested people.

At our September meeting we were very much pleased to have with us an old and valued member, Mrs. Rogers, our honorary vice-president, who gave a short address.

Our thankoffering was held on Oct. 10. We had a good attendance and Mrs. Kenner gave an excellent address on the true spirit of Thanksgiving. Mr. Cuthbertson also gave a very interesting talk on his work in Japan, calling attention to the many causes for thanksgiving in the growth of the work there. The thankoffering was $1,300.96.

A bale of new and second-hand clothing, valued at $71.95, also $8 in cash for boots, was sent to Ethelbert Home.

The Messenger secretary reports 135 subscribers to the Messenger. Let me again urge all the women of the congregation, especially the members of the Auxiliary, to subscribe for and read this little magazine. There will be no lack of interest in missions if the Messenger is read.

The Home Helpers' secretary reports 17 Home Helpers who contributed $18.60 to the general fund. Eight of them have subscribed for the Messenger for 1925, and one joined the Auxiliary.

The Strangers' secretary reports 21 visits to strangers, and two visits to the hospital. Another stranger was located, but as sh was in ano her congregation her name and address was sent to the strangers' secretary of that church.

The Literature secretary rep rts literature sent regularly each month to Hall's Bridge, a box of books papers and magazines was sent to a lumber camp north of the Soo, also seven issues of the leaflet, "Broadcast," distributed at the meetings of the Auxiliary. We have three life members to report this year.

It is with deep sorrow we record the death of Miss Flora Davidson, at one time secretary of our Auxiliary, and a faithful member until she left the city; also of Mrs. Mein and Mrs. Frank Sanderson, and to all the members of the Auxiliary who have suffered bereavement during the year, our loving sympathy is extended and we pray that our loving heavenly Father may comfort them and through their sorrow draw them closer to Himself.

Looking backyard over the year that is gone, let us not be satisfied with what we have done, but rather consider seriously what we have not done. It does not matter whether our sphere of service be large or small, but it does matter that we see and do the duty that lies nearest to us, and as we enter on the new year let us consecrate ourselves anew to the service of our heavenly Father, striving more earnestly than ever to carry out our Lord's command given in Matt. 28:19, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations," relying on His promise given in the next verse—"Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A Porteous, Secretary.

Mrs. MacGillvray spoke of her work in Shanghai, and the providing of Christian literature for the Chinese. She read the 38th verse of the 13th chapter of Matthew, "The kingdom of heaven is like leaven which a woman hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened." That, she said, was what the W.M.S. were doing for China in sending the gospel to them and though we might think from the reports of wars and troubles that we read in the newspapers that it was not doing much good, yet the leaven was working, and the Lord is doing great things for China. The first book they translated was, of course, the Bible. Then the little churches that sprang up here and there needed books. The schools, doctors and nurses-in-training all needed books They first prepared books for the men, then she wanted to get something to help the women in their homes. She read the books on the subject of home life she could get, but it did not help her any for the background was altogether different, so she got together a number of native Christian women and talked to them, and had them tell her what they needed. She got a book to help them in their home life. It told how husbands and wives should treat each other about family prayer, and how they should all sit down to meals together. She had a Chinese artist draw a picture of a table with bowls and chopsticks on it and the father, mother and children sitting around it. Then they started to make a child's book and a little magazine called "Happy Childhood" was the result. It will celebrate its ninth birthday soon. Mrs. MacGillvray told us of one copy of Happy Childhood that a missionary in a ver poor station in the interior received. This missionary told Mrs. McGillvray that they were very poor and could only get one copy each month. When it came the native preachers got it first and read it, then the Bible women took it round and read it to those they visited. Then it was given to the boys' school for a time, to the girls' school, then it was put in the guest-house for a time, and at last was very carefully wrapped in red paper and sent to the home of the chief man of the village for his little boys. She says they have absolutely no picture books. The last time Mrs. McGillvray was home, just before returning to China, she was in Boston, and speaking at a women's meeting, told them that there were no picture books in China and one lady asked how much would be needed to get one. Mrs. McGillvray said, $250 for the initial cost, after that they could sell them. The lady immediately wrote a cheque for that amount, and when Mrs. MacGillvray got back to China she made the first picture book scenes from the life of Christ pictures on one page and texts explaining it on the other page.

Another thing spoken of was the kitchen god, a very ugly god made of cardboard which hangs in every kitchen, near where the cooking is done. Of course, when they become Christians they take this down, but said there was so much superstition in connection with it that it seemed rather hard to get them to take it down, so they decided to make a calendar to hang in the kitchen. They made one in bright colors, showing the good samaritan in the centre, and texts all round it, speaking of love. They saw one of those calendars hanging in a heathen temple which Mrs. MacGillvray and Dr. MacGillvray visited one day. The missionary spoke of the poverty of the people, of their bare, cheerless homes, of how little children, not more than six years old, stood before their machines in factories for 10, 12 or 14 hours a day—little wisps of humanity, who looked as if they never smiled or played.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 15.—(Canadian Press).—Train bearing body of Samuel Gompers, to Washington, where it will lie in state until burial at New York, paused here from early morning until noon today, after journey marked by out-pouring of those who wished to pay their respects at all stations from San Antonio, Texas, where President of American Federation of Labor died Saturday.

Last night the train kept to schedule fairly well, although lost some time when it stopped at various stations for thousands of persons to file past the great covered bronze casket. Floral tributes which covered coffin when train left San Antonio were added to by wagon loads as train rolled north.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE ENEMY SEX" POKES FUN AT THE MODERN GOLD-DIGGER.

"Ridicule is a deadlier weapon than serious criticism," says James Cruze. "Start a world laughing at a movement or a type and the object of its mirth is completly lost," declares the man who jested at parvenus in "Ruggles of Red Gap" and the duelling code in "The Fighting Coward."

Poking fun at the gold-digger, Jas. Cruze brings to the screen one of the most colorful of modern types in his latest production for Paramount, "The Enemy Sex."

The gold digger is classified as a girl who assiduously collects free dinners, good times and gifts of clothes, jewelry and any other negotiable form of valuables from her men friends.

PLASTIGRAMS, GREATEST SCREEN NOVELTY OFFERS NEW LAUGHS AT CAPITOL

Plastigrams, the third-dimension movie will be seen at the Capitol to-day and Tuesday. This is an entirely new series of this remarkable screen novelty and presents its wonders in new scenes of laughter and thrills. Each patron will be handed the colored lenses necessary to view these pictures as they enter the theatre. This is a brand new set of these pictures and must not be confused with the earlier edition presented at the Capitol some weeks ago. On the same bill will be Betty Compson, supported by Huntley Gordon, Sheldon Lewis, Percy Marmont and Kathlyn Williams, in "The Enemy Sex." Mack Sennett's latest comedy, "Should Landlord's Live?" and a Pathe News will complete the exceptionally attractive program.

AT THE ROYAL.

"WELCOME STRANGER."

Notable Cast in Humorous Film—Every Player Has Made a Record.

The great Broadway stage play by Aaron Hoffman, "Welcome Stranger," has been brought to the screen with one of the greatest casts ever assembled. Practically every one in this uproariously funny film, which is now being shown at the Royal Theatre, is a star or a lead.

Dore Davidson, well-known character actor, who scored such a triumph in "Humoresque," has the role of Isidore Solomon, which George Sidney made famous on the stage. Florence Vidor, most recently seen in the title role of "Barbara Frietchie," has the leading feminine role of Mary Clark, Virginia Browne Faire, remembered for her work as Harry Carey's leading woman in "The Lightning Rider," plays Solomon's daughter, Essie.

Others in the all-notable cast are Robert Edeson, veteran of both stage and screen, Noah Beery, well-known "heavy," Lloyd Hughes, Wm. V. Mong, Otis Harlan, Fred. J. Butler and Pat Hartigan.

As a play, "Welcome Stranger" ran for two consecutive years in New York and Chicago, where it broke all consecutive performance and box office records. It was adapted for the screen by James Young and Willard Mack.

HOOT GIBSON COMING.

Hoot Gibson has gained a reputation as one of the most natural comedians of the screen, and his latest starring vehicle, "Broadway or Bust," a special Universal-Gibson production, directed by Ed. ward Sedgwick, has been heralded as one of the funniest of the stories written for him. It comes to the Royal Theatre next Thursday, telling the story of great wealth thrust upon a cowboy, who takes a friend and two horses to New York to become a society sensation.

BENNIE LEONARD, WORLD'S LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION, IN "FLYING FISTS," AT ROYAL TO-NIGHT.

A new series of prize ring stories starring Bennie Leonard will be an added attraction at the Royal eve Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The second of the series is on to-day's programme, with a Larry Semon Comedy and "Welcome Stranger," the Broadway success.

SIX-PIECE ORCHESTRA AT ROYAL.

Commencing to-night, a six-piece orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Foster, will accompany the productions at the Royal.

AT THE REGENT.

PAULINE FREDERICK HAS BOBBED HAIR

Says It Is Beneficial to Emotional Roles.

Pauline Frederick will be seen with bobbed hair when she appears in "Let No Man Put Asunder," the J. Stuart Blackton picture, in which she and Lou Tellegen have the leading roles, supported by Leslie Austen and Helena D'Algy and an all-star cast at the Regent Theatre today.

It is most becoming to this celebrated screen actress and she breaks another of the ancient rules of dramatic custom by wearing it so.

"For many years," Miss Frederick said at Vitagraph studios, when the picture was being screened, "long hair was an essential to an emotional actress. If she had any emotion to portray her hair just naturally had to fall down all over the place. It was a handy thing for the villain, and many an outraged and angry husband dragged his wife across the floor by the strands of her fine waist-line braids of glorious hair.

"All that is gone. To begin with an actress doesn't have to fling herself all about the room like a bouncing rubber doll to play emotional parts. And, husbands don't grab their wives by the hair and drag them about, even in real life. Consequently the actress may enjoy the freedom of shorn locks just the same as any of our young and engaging flappers of the day."

Miss Frederick's role in this picture is said to be one of the finest she has ever undretaken on the screen. In it she plays the part of a woman who divorces her first husband, marries a second time and then suffers the heart break of the difficult position in which she finds herself. The second husband leaves her to find his first wife, the woman he really loves. And she goes back to her first husband.

TRUTH VS. ERROR.

....In some circles, we hear the following expressions used: Sancification, holiness, pure heart, higher life, etc., endeavoring at the same time to inculcate the idea that there is a lower plane of "Christian life." Scripture and positive, personal experience, prove the error of such teaching. Those who are living under the law of the Spirit, have the experience that the above terms indicate. Obedience to the Spirit is the first step in the "Christian life," and if we would continue in this life we must continue to walk after the Spirit. In fact, obedience to the Spirit is the normal "Christian life." Learning of Jesus, following Jesus, and being led of the Spirit are one and the same thing. Those who are led of the Spirit have inward rest and outward victory. — M. T. Butcher. 1d141 7962

BETHANY TABERNACLE.

The special meetings under the leadership of the colored evangelist, Mrs. M. E. Anderson, have now entered on their second week. Last Friday night's meeting, being especially for children, was a wonderful manifestation of God's saving power.

Yesterday morning her text was Psa. 73.2, where God's servant nearly fell through being envious of the success in this world of the wicked. Her thought was that God's people should keep their eyes fixed on Jesus and live in the will of God, rather than on the things of this world and the gratification of self.

The evening meeting was largely attended, notwithstanding the storm outside. The evangelist's address was based on Gen. 22:2, where the test was given to Abraham's obedience to the will of God. In his willingness to give his best, his only begotten son as a sacrifice for sin. Thus being a beautiful type of John 3:16, where God gave His best, His only begotten son, on Calvary for the sins of the whole world. This again being a type for Christians in our day to lay their all on the altar. God's desire to-day is for a willing whole-hearted service from His people, holding nothing back, and that sinners may give a complete surrender to God and come to Him for mercy and salvation.

The meetings will continue every night this week, except Saturday, closing next Sunday.

ART STUDY CLUB.

(Contributed)

On Tuesday last, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Adams, Weller street, the Art Study Club held one of its most enthusiastic meetings of the year. The topic for study was Greek Sculpture and Mrs. H. Morphet gave a very comprehensive paper on the subject.

In her introduction, Mrs. Morphet described the methods of modelling, the materials used, and the purposes of sculpture Sculpture may be traced to the pre historic period, but the period of greatest interest in Greek Sculpture begins about 470 B.C., when Phidias made his masterpieces. Greece excelled all other countries in sculpture, which is largely due to the unbounded love of beauty which was an essential of Greek nature. Beauty was so important to the Greek that every parent prayed that his children might have the gift. The religion, (mythology to us), of the Greek, taught that the body was the beautiful and godlike temple of the soul. Pericles was no doubt responsible also for the attainments of the Greek sculptors, Athena or Minerva (Pallas) which was perhaps the most important single piece by Phidias, was the most popular goddess of Athens. In Phidias' time she was stern and severe; the wise counsellor, the patroness of war, of all household and female work, of knowledge, dignity and grandeur. In the decline of Greek sculpture she lost her grand power and became gentler and perhaps lovelier.

Phidias was connected with the building of the temple of Theseus and the Parthenon which has been robbed of its wonderful sculptures. These are mostly in Italian and British museums. It is in the museum at London that we may study that beautiful frieze of the Parthenon known as the Elgin Marbles.

Other noted sculptors contemporary with Phidias are Myron, Alcamenes, Calamis and Pythogoras. Of a slightly later period was Proxiteles noted for his Venus, Apollo, Satyrs and Cupids One statue by Proxiteles still stands in Athens. It is the famous Hermes which was at one time offered to America for an exhibition visit. We are glad Hermes remains undisturbed in Athens where it belongs.

With the death of Alexander the Great, Greek sculpture declined, Athens was humiliated, and the island of Rhodes became the centre of Greek Art, the Laocoon, the Farnese Bull, the Dying Gaul were made in this island. While the are wonderful pieces of sculpture, they are not pleasant to look upon.

The glory that was Greece is in Africa, Italy, England. Will these greatest of pieces of sculptore ever be returned to their home?

Landscape Painting is the subject for January 6, 1925, Mrs. W. R. Widdis will be hostess to the Club on that evening.

NEW AGE CALLS MEN TO RETURN TO OLD TRUTHS

Moderator of Presbyterian Church Has Stirring Message For Knox Congregation.

CHURCH PROGRESSES.

Anniversary Services Marked By Visit From Rev. Principal Mackinnon, of Halifax.

Crowded congregations greeted Rev. Clarence Mackinnon, D.D., Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, at Knox Church yesterday on the occasion of the anniversary services, and the messages delivered by the distinguished visitor were inspiring and devotional.

Speaking of "Things New and Old," the Moderator last night showed the progress of the Church, keeping pace with, or breaking the way for, the advancement of science and human endeavor. He disproved the alleged decadence of the Church, pointing to the far-flung outposts of missionary endeavor as evidence of a healthy spirit of extension and growth, and after pointing out the new ideas propounded by varying sects, brought his hearers back to the great truths of Scripture on which he said the future of the Church and the future of civilization must be founded.

Special music at both services by the choir and Mr. Maurice Park added to the enjoyment of the occasion as a mark of achievement. Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, pastor of the church, conducted the devotional services.

Spoke of Progress.

Remarking on his being in a modern city, where every up-to-date convenience had been added to the comfort of the citizens, on an occasion that marked the anniversary of the founding of Knox Church, Rev. Dr. Mackinnon pointed out the aptness of his speaking on "progress."

"Progress is the hall-mark of this wonderful age," he declared.

Man with marvellous audacity is thrusting his hand into the unknown and bringing it back laden with new truths that he harnesses to the chariot wheels of civilization.

Telling several instances from his own experience, the speaker declared the progress of science is astounding.

Developing Canada.

"The conquering hand of man has been laid on the prairie solitude, and to-day, where 50 years ago there roamed the buffalo and sparse tribes of Indians there are great cities linked by networks of railway tracks and electric wires. Any visitor coming here from Mars and seeing the development of Canada in the last half-century would say the Canadians are a progressive people."

The world has progressed in other things. About the time the Red River cart was ploughing its way through the straggling village of Winnipeg, a conference was being held in Paris, where learned savants of the old age were lecturing on how disease was carried. In the audience was a young peasant, impatient under their platitudes, who cried out, "That's not how diseases are carried. They are carried by germs." The lecturer said, "You will have to hunt for a long time before you will find that germ."

The young man went to the platform and drew in chalk an outline of the germ.

That peasant was Pasteur; the new age challenging the old; new science combatting old tradition. The battle was joined, and everyone knows how it went. When he had solved the mystery of hydrophobia, trains brought crowds from the Steppes of Russia and from the slums of dog-infested cities to be cured by Pasteur.

Has Church Advanced?

Citing, among other instances of progress in a thousand things, Rev. Dr. Mackinnon asked "Has no advanceemnt been made by the Church? Has the world gone on and the Church been still, cold and immovable like the pyramids while the tide of life rolled by? Has it made no progress?—no discovery?"

"This is a dangerous question to raise," he continued, "because immediately a dozen people are ready to report the new discoveries of Christianity—Christian Scientists say they have the panacea for all ills; the Spiritualists say that the door to the unseen world has been opened and voices and messages heard, and the apostles of New Thought coming from the United States, have a most delectable mixture. It is difficult to say what these apostles of New Thought have for us. It seems to be a little metaphysics, theosophy, psychology, literature and poetry, with a little bombast, mixed and served to us in an attractive form."

The Mormons claim that after centuries of silence the Lord revealed the conclusive truth to one Joseph Smith. "What are you going to do with all these claims? The first thing is to find out what are the truths in the old Book that has stood the test of time and things new and old. It is a first duty to discover what God has told us—not by discussing higher criticism or the question of origin, but the matter of our spiritual well being."

Church has Progressed.

The Church has made progress. The world has made progress in decency and humanity—in brotherly love and the mutual appreciation of race by race, and of church by church. Christian principles have progressed. All over the world, in the farthest flung outposts, are to be found the missions that mark the vanguards of the hosts of Jesus Christ. Without the power of the Christian religion it would be impossible for the nations to live together.

"The best thing to do to-day," the speaker said, "is to ask "How can we make better progress? What remains to be done?"

Speaking to the young men, on whom he said, responsibility for the future rests, he urged them to hold to the eternal truths of religion — truths that discoveries in biology, physics and psychology cannot change. "We must have the old plus the new," he declared. "I cannot conceive any challenge keener than this; that they should take their minds and apply them to this great service to humanity. It is not the abolition of the old or conservative action about the new that is required but a harmonious adjustment of both."

Consecrating their lives and dedicating their powers to this great purpose, with God's help the young men will find solid ground and march on into the light.

If Wesley, Carey, Pasteur and the pioneers had said: "The work is too hard," the world would not have progressed. "What will future ages think of us," Dr. Mackinnon asked, "if we halt when the great call comes to go forward?"

DAYTIME FROCKS.

This daytime frock is cut on the popular beltless model, but the two rows of fringe about the hem are a decidedly original touch. The wide scarf of silk printed in batik designs is the Parisienne's way of pepping up a frock that looks too prim and plain.

JAPANESE TEA HELD.

Clubs Held Enjoyable Affair in Green Room of Y.W.C.A.

Members of the combined classes of the C.O.S. Club, (Christ first, Others Second, Self Last) and of the T.M.T.M. (The More the Merrier) Club, were responsible jointly for a pretty little Japanese tea given in the green room of the Young Women's Christian Association, on Friday afternoon and evening, the proceeds for the foreign work of the W. W. C.A. The green room was effectively arranged with Japanese umbrellas and lanterns, and butterflies attached to the ends of long paper steamers.

Japanese novelties of many sorts were on sale, including quantities of pretty carved ivory beads and pendants, a number of these articles still remaining for disposal. Tea was served by the C.O.S. Club, of which Miss Margaret Storey is leader, with Miss Amy Halida pouring tea in the afternoon, and the T.M.T.M. Club had charge of an enjoyable programme.

There was also a sale of homemade candy.

MISS BAIRD'S SUCCESS.

Daughter of Peterborough Citizens Leads Prize Winning Class.

Miss Isabel Baird, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Baird, of 658 George street, and was formerly a member of George street Methodist church choir and a pupil of Mr. J. H. Renwick, has again been a successful leader of a prize-winning class in a musical competition in Toronto, where she is now teaching at the Bedford Park school. At the recent Eistedfod in Toronto, Miss Baird's class won the first prize in school singing, a silver cup donated by Sir Adam Beck and received many complimentary comments from the adjudicator, Daniel Protheroe of Chicago. Following this success, the class has been asked by the Toronto Star to provide a Christmas concert for broadcasting, and will sing five carols on Thursday night of this week, which will be broadcasted from Walmer Road Baptist church, Toronto.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

CIVIL ACTION ENDS DOCKET

Claim For $519.95 Against W. J. Little, of Lakefield, is Heard

BEFORE A JURY.

A civil action in the jury case of The Commercial Investment Company of Fort Wayne, Indiana, against W. J. Little, of Lakefield, being a claim for $519.95 against the defendant as acceptor of two bills of exchange, formed the concluding case in the December Sessions of the Peace at the Court-House on Saturday afternoon. J. W. Stevenson, of the firm of Hall, Hall and Stevenson, assisted by W. F. Huycke, appeared for the plaintiff, and F. D. Kerr, K.C., of the firm of Peck, Kerr and McElderry, for the defendant.

In this action, the following jury was empanelled: Arthur H. Simmons, River Road; R. J. Girvin, Asphodel; Garnet Winterbottom, City; C. W. Garbutt, Douro; Nelson Windover, Harvey; Wm. Hickson, Ennismore; T. G. Gordon, Harvey; Gordon R. Moore, City; Robt. Hamilton, Dummer; Michael Geary, Ennismore; Wm. J. Breckenridge, Asphodel, and Alex. Lang, Monaghan. The jury listened to the presentation of evidence for several hours, then, as His Honor decided that the case was a commercial action, was dismissed by the Judge, who adjourned Court until eleven o'clock this morning.

The action against W. J. Little in this case was a claim for $519.95 brought against him by the Commercial Investment Company of Fort Wayne, Indiana, whose business is discounting paper and buying investment securities, on account of some commercial paper transferred to them by the Acme Salt Company of New York City, as collateral security for loans. The Acme Salt Company, according to the testimony of the first witness called, Samuel B. Harris, accountant for the Commercial Investment Company, was at one time located in Indianapolis, with a branch office in Fort Wayne, and continued to discount their paper with the Commercial Investment Company of Fort Wayne after they removed to New York City.

Included in recent transfers of discountable paper to the Commercial Investment Company by the Acme Salt Company, purveyors of stock feed, were two bills of exchange drawn by the Acme Company on W. J. Little, of Lakefield, and bearing his acceptance, dated November 23, 1923, one of these bills being drawn at sixty days for $262.50, the other at ninety days, for $250. These amounts, with interest, represent the claim against the defendant.

W. J. Little, defendant, denied that the drafts had been presented for payment, or that he had accepted or signed them, saying that his name, if it appears on them, was procured by fraud and misrepresentation.

Under questioning by Mr. Kerr, the first witness, Samuel B. Harris, a deaf gentleman, admitted that similar actions, charging the Acme Salt Company with fraud and misrepresentation, were now pending in different sections of Ontario, at Woodstock, Belleville, Lindsay and Norwood, where J. S. Squires was involved in transactions with the company.

Mr. Kerr also proved, calling E. A. Peck as a witness, that enquiry at the office of the Provincial Secretary in Toronto showed that neither the Commercial Investment Company nor the Acme Salt Company had a license to do business in Ontario.

S. Sutton, manager of the Sterling Bank at Lakefield, was called and testified to having received the two bills for collection, payment being stopped by Mr. Little.

W. J. Little, who proved a voluble witness, told of an interview with one Cole, agent for the Acme Salt Stock Company, in Peterboro, "at the hotel near the Market," where the business of the company was outlined to him and he was persuaded to act as their agent in the sale of a certain type of stock feed. A method of bonusing customers was also outlined, caused, so it was explained, by a saving effected in advertising by the company, whereby $5,000 yearly was realized in the difference between advertising in daily and in weekly publications.

A heavy bag of the stock feed was bestowed on Mr. Sherry, the Court Clerk, as an exhibit in the action, and the witness described the method of administration. "You would want to have a drug store to feed that," he said, enumerating the various ingredients required in administering the food, which required to be fed, two teaspoonsful per day, for ninety days, to an animal, before benefits would accrue.

PARLIAMENT APPROVES BALDWIN POLICIES IN EGYPT AND RUSSIA is.

First Division on Opposition Amendment of Criticism Defeated by 363 to 132.

NO REVELATIONS

MacDonald Warns Government Egyptian Policy is Being Built on Sand.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The first division in the new Parliament was taken last night when the Trevelyan amendment, expressing regret at the Government's policy in Egypt and Russia, was defeated by a vote of 363 to 132 after a debate in which the Government was subjected to strong criticism from Liberal and Labor members.

Austen Chamberlain's speech, which had been looked to as the chief attraction of the debate, was considered somewhat disappointing, inasmuch as it dashed hopes that had been raised that the Foreign Secretary would make interesting revelations of what passed in his conversations with the French and Italian Premiers in Paris and Rome, and possibly throw some light on the international reactions of recent happenings in North Africa. His most interesting announcement was the Government's willingness to submit the Gezirah water question to a mixed commission on which both the Sudan and Egypt would be represented.

Mr. Chamberlain was greeted with opposition shouts of "What have you said?" "What has happened?" during the opening passages of his speech when he related all that he "thought necessary to say" about his recent conversations in Paris and Rome. They were, of course, ironic taunts, but had a certain sub-stratum of justification, for the Foreign Secretary's relation were of a very non-committal character.

Debts Not Discussed.

Mr. Chamberlain admitted that he had not discussed the question of inter-allied debts. He explained that the desire of the statesmen he met in Paris and Rome had been to remove, not create, difficulties, and he asserted that the conversations had established relations of trust and confidence.

The debate originated with the opposition amendment to the address, moved by Charles P. Trevelyan, Labor, "regretting the Government's policy with respect to Egypt and Russia," and after these opening passages, Mr. Chamberlain proceeded to reply to Mr. Trevelyan's criticisms. Thus his speech dealt largely with Egypt and Russia.

The Foreign Secretary repudiated any desire to withhold deserved credit from Ramsay MacDonald, although he thought the former Labor Premier went profoundly wrong on the Russian treaties. But he was sure that Mr. MacDonald and M. Herriot, the French Premier, did great work for Europe and the world at the London conference, and for that he wished to pay tribute to his predecessor.

Britain a Trustee.

He went fully into the history of the Egyptian question. He asserted that Great Britain was in the Sudan as trustee; she would be loyal to the condominium with Egypt, but after past experiences must take over certain powers, without which she could not discharge her duties.

Declaring that the security of communications in Egypt was vital to the very existence of the Empire, the Secretary outlined the Govern-

DEBRIS ON HURON FROM OLD WRECK

Coastguard's Cruise Discovered No Trace of Lake Disaster.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press).—The Eagle Harbor coastguard returned Monday afternoon from a cruise 12 miles east of Eagle Harbor and six miles west without finding the source of wreckage which has been driven ashore along the north-west coast of the Keweenaw Peninsula in the last 48 hours. Captain Glaza reported finding additional wreckage such as cabin parts and pieces of furniture.

A thorough investigation of the shore line failed to reveal anything which might lead to the identity of the vessel from which the wreckage came.

The captain of the coastguard now is inclined to the belief that the wreckage has come from the Canadian steamer Glen Lyon, owned by the Great Lakes Transportation Company of Midland, Ont., which went hard aground at Rock Harbor, Isle Royale, early in November. The fact that no life preserver parts of life-boats or even bodies have been found, strengths the belief that the debris is from an old wreck.

None of the steamers on Lake Superior yesterday reported seeing any signs of a wreck. The steamer Emory L. Ford was due in Duluth Harbor yesterday, and the lighthouse tender Marigold was on its way from Bayfield to Duluth, taking off lighthouse keepers.

LINDSAY GALLOWS ACCOUNT FOR $200

Builder of Scaffold in Court Yard Shocks Councillors.

LINDSAY, Dec. 16. —The members of the Property committee of the county council received a large sized jolt when a bill for the construction of the gallows used in carrying out the sentence of the court in the jail yard on December 5th was presented. It amounted to the modest sum of $200. The time used in the construction of the structure was about sixteen hours. After the members of the committee had recovered from the shock, County Clerk McNeillie, who had searched the archives of the county, informed the members that on the occasion of the hanging of a man named Nesbitt over fifty years ago the gallows was constructed in the jail yard for $50. This amount was voted by the committee to the contractor, who, by the way, is a member of the Lindsay town council.

No word has been received from the Attorney-General's Department relative to the account sent in by Dr. Armour, alienist, amounting to $600. It looks as if the county have to pay the amount to the doctor, who was an important witness for the Crown in connection with the recent murder trial.

EIGHT DIE IN GOTHAM FROM POISON LIQUOR

Five Others Reported Dying and 67 Are in Hospital.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Eight persons—two women and six men—are dead and five reported dying as the result of an epidemic of poison liquor cases since last Saturday. Sixty-seven persons, including eleven women, are now in the alcoholic ward of the Bellevue Hospital.

Hospital authorities said the number of alcoholic poisoning patients would increase as Christmas drew near, due to the flood of wood alcohol which they said was being distributed through the city.

BIG BRITISH PAYMENT AGAINST DEBT TO U.S.A.

Semi-Annual Instalment of $91,655,000 Through House of Morgan.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—For the first time since Great Britain's debt funding agreement with the United States has been in operation, payment of the semi-annual instalment of $91,655,000, applicable to principal and interest, was made Monday without the use of liberty bonds. J. P. Morgan and Company, fiscal agents of the British Government, made the payment to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Of Great Britain's payment, $23,000,000 was applied to principal and $68,655,000 to interest. The use of liberty bonds in lieu of cash was presented by the premiums which these obligations have been able to command this year.

The total revenues from foreign debts were swelled an additional $300,000 by payments from Finland, Lithuania and Hungary.

CANADIAN EXPORTS UP WHILE IMPORTS FALL

Imports Decline $81,000,000 in the Last Eight Months.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press).—Canada's total trade for the eight months of the fiscal year ending November 30, totals $1,244,000,000, a decrease of $69,000,000 as compared with the corresponding eight months of last year. Imports are down while exports show an increase, according to the Government. Domestic exports for the eight months totalled $704,000,000, an increase of $12,000,000; imports were $531,000,000, a decrease of $81,000,000.

FINDS POLICEMEN ARE TAKING GRAFT

Disclosures So Far Have Shocked the German Metropolis.

BERLIN, Dec. 16. — (United Press.)—Graft in at least two important departments of the Berlin police is under official investigation.

Disclosures so far made have shocked the German metropolis, since men in high positions in the police had always been regarded as beyond the reach of bribes.

The most sensational of the cases is that of Regierungsrat Bartels, known as the "dictator of foreigners in Germany."

Bartels, it is charged, accepted bribery passively from "General" Holzmann, a Russian dealer in gigantic, though shady transactions.

Bartels, according to the district attorney's evidence, was often a guest of Holzmann at wild wine parties, and was also the beneficiary of a substantial private account deposited by Holzmann in Bartels' name. The whole scandal leaked out when another Russian revealed that Holzmann had threatened him with expulsion from Germany as a result of Holzmann's "good connection" with Bartels.

Bartels had it in his power to issue permission to foreigners to remain in Germany, or he could arbitrarily refuse such permits, whereupon the foreigner would have to leave Germany.

A second case of graft was located in the lost and found section of the police department, where it developed that several trusted authorities were appropriating for themselves huge sums of money returned by honorable finders.

EBERT ACCEPTS RESIGNATION OF MARX'S CABINET

German President Sets Date of Inaugural Meeting of New Reichstag for Jan. 5.

SERIOUS PROBLEM

Assignment of Duty of Forming Government Confronts Ebert With Difficulty.

BERLIN, Dec. 16. — President Ebert yesterday accepted the resignation of Chancellor Marx's cabinet and it was announced at the same time that the new Reichstag would hold its first session January 5.

The formal retirement of the Marx cabinet was merely in the nature of ratifying the ministry's resolution of last week to resign as soon after the election as possible. President Ebert will discuss the parliamentary situation with Reichstag leaders to-day and then will decide which party is best qualified to undertake the task of forming a new coalition government. In the meantime at the request of the executive, the present cabinet will continue its duties.

Contrary to former usage, President Ebert will not entrust the strongest party in the Reichstag with the assignment to form a new ministry as the Socialists, who now take precedence by virtue of the number of their deputies, are declared to be without the slightest prospect of being able to construct a new government out of the present chaotic party lineup.

It is therefore assumed that the president will commission either the clericals or the German people's party with the burden of surveying the situation. Unless a four party coalition, extending from the Socialists to Stresemann's peoples party, can be evolved, it is believed by many that the Marx-Stresemann ministry will continue in office and trust its fortunes to the varying majorities until the presidential election next May.

Chemists Are Urged To Fight Cross-Word Bug

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press). — "Down with the cross-word puzzle bug," was the battle cry at the national convention of the Insecticide and Disinfectant Manufacturers' Association Monday. The organization passed a resolution denouncing the microbe as a menace to the national peace of mind.

This action followed an address by Dr. K. J. Haywood, of the United States Department of Agriculture. He urged the chemists present to combat "the most pernicious germ which has recently appeared in this country, namely, the cross-word puzzle bug, which threatens the peace of mind of the entire nation."

FAST TRAIN GAMBLERS SOUGHT BY RAILROADS

CHICAGO Dec. 16.— (United Press). —Pullman officials have launched a campaign against the nation-wide ring of railroad swindlers and "gentlemen" crooks, who prey, upon well-to-do travellers. Railroad police estimate more than a hundred "mobs" of them infest the main lines of travel east of Chicago.

They are modern survival of the old-fashioned card sharp.

"Mind your own business. I'm over 21 and can take care of myself," one victim told the Pullman conductor just before suave bandits "rolled" him for $2,500.

Trainmen have instructions to interfere when they see a man being duped by professional gamblers. On the best trains, detectives are posted to "get" this species of highwaymen.

Women gamblers are negligible.

WHETHER TO SHINGLE

LONDON, Dec. 16.— (United Press).—The shingle hair cut brings out character in a woman's face if she has personality. Otherwise it merely converts her face into one of a type. Women without personality who shingle thereby lose much of their individuality. Such, girls, is the latest contribution to a heated discussion over this all important question. It is the opion of Mrs. Dorothy Dick, an English sculptress.

HAS RESIGNED

DR. MARX

The resignation of the German Chancellor and his cabinet was formally accepted Monday by President Ebert who will now designate which of the political groups shall be entrusted with forming a new government.

INFECTION KILLS WOUNDED TRAPPER

Fashioned Crutches and Crawled Five Miles in Bush.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—George Henry, trapper, aged 46 years, died in the hospital Monday night from an infected gunshot wound in his foot, occasioned while on the trap line in the Jellicoe District east of Port Arthur and five miles from medical attention. The man is said to have crawled a distance of three miles after the accident happened.

Unable to drag himself further, he fashioned a pair of crutches from the limbs of a tree, and in this manner hobbled into Horne Payne, where he was given medical aid.

Henry was taken to hospital, but [illegible]fection had spread to such an extent [illegible] he died on Sunday night. The accident [illegible]urred last Tuesday, and its was not [illegible]til Wednesday morning that he rece[illegible] treatment of any kind.

TWO BIG PROBLEMS FACING BALDWIN

Unemployment and Housing Require Positive Action, Says H. H. Stevens.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press).—Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P. for Vancouver, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the last Conservative administration, arrived in Ottawa from a three months' trip to the Old Country, shortly after noon, and registered at the Chateau Laurier. He left last night for Vancouver.

Asked by interviewers how he viewed conditions in the Old Country, Hon. Mr. Stevens said that naturally after the very decisive election results there is a spirit of confidence. On the other hand, he said, the new Government is faced with some very difficult problems and the economic situation is quite serious.

Asked what particular problems he had in mind, Mr. Stevens instanced housing and unemployment. "These call for some positive action," said Mr. Stevens, "and it will depend very largely upon the manner in which the new Government deals with these as to whether its term of office will be a successful one."

Questioned as to whether he suffered to any extent from his trying experience in the first which broke out in the club in Piccadilly, London, at which he was staying, and from which he narrowly escaped, Mr. Stevens replied, "Only from being choked up with smoke."

BERTRAM HAYES "A SAILOR HOME FROM THE SEA"

Famous Captain of White Star Liner Majestic on Last Trip to America.

RETIRES TO LAND

Writing Memoirs of Long Life Before the Mast—Will Return to See U.S.A.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Sir Bertram Hayes yesterday brought the White Star liner Majestic into New York for the last time. At the end of his 39th trip as commander of the great ship, of his 44th year at sea and his 60th year of life he will retire from deep water service when the Majestic reaches Liverpool again.

He expects to do shore duty for the White Star Line in England for a time; then he will come to America as a passenger for his first inland view of this continent. Meanwhile, he is writing his memoirs of the sea. Sir Bertram is commodore of the White Star fleet.

"I've been coming to New York for many years, but I never got more than one foot on your continent," he said. "Twenty-five years ago, when I was skipper of a freighter I landed at San Francisco; but then again I only got only a nibble of what inland America was like. When I come back again it will be for a whole bite. I expect to enjoy myself."

A bachelor because, he said, "he believes a sailor should not share such responsibility with a wife" Sir Bertram recalled that he got his greatest thrill when he ran down a submarine during the world war and the most unpleasant order he ever obeyed was when he piloted the Majestic —then the German-owned Bismark—from Hamburg to Southampton for confiscation by British in accordance with the Versailles treaty.

LABOR CHIEF'S LAST JOURNEY

Thousands File Past Gompers Bier on Homebound Funeral Train.

MANY STOPS MADE

VINCENNES, Id. Dec. 16—Footfalls of the army of labor continued Monday almost endless to beat a rythmic march of devotion past the bier of Samuel Compers as the train carrying his body pushed across Illinois, Indiana and Ohio on the way to Washington. The new carpet placed beside the coffin showed a badly worn path by nightfall.

Following the demonstration at St. Louis, where a continuous file went through the car, during the morning, other thousands came to look upon the face of the dead at Flora, Ills., Vincennes, Washington, Mitchell and North Vernon, Ind. and many smaller places where brief stops were made. At Flora railroad men stood beside the track for more than a block, their heads bared as the train came in. They had left their engines and trains standing on the side tracks and in the shops on [illegible] they came to the funeral car, while [illegible] section men at work Frequently [illegible] stopped their work, along the way, doffed their hats and stood silent as the train passed.

HIGH PRICE FOR WESTERN CROPS LOOSENS MONEY

Large Sums in Circulation—Mortgages Being Lifted and Trade Stimulated.

ALMOST A BOOM

Holiday Business Well Ahead of Last Year—Shopping Rush Predicted.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Business conditions to-day in Western Canada and British Columbia show a general and consistent improvement over conditions of recent years, it is agreed in quarters which are in close touch with the situation. While there is nothing approaching a boom anywhere, the sale of a fair crop at high prices has put into circulation in the Prairie Provinces large sums of money, and there is a spirit of optimism everywhere, and confidence that the improvement will be continued and developed in 1925.

Only a portion of the crop money has reached the prorducers as yet, but the result has been very marked. Large numbers of obligations to mortgage and implement companies and to the banks have been liquidated wholly or in part, and while the farmers are handling their funds with a good deal of caution, considerable general purchasing has been done. Wholesale houses report that sales are increasing in number, although individual orders are not heavy, and this condition is reflected in the retail trade.

Ahead of Last Year.

The holiday business in winnipeg and in most western points is reported to be well ahead of last year, and the ten days before Christmas will see a rush of shoppers. Mail order business is said to have established new records this fall.

British Columbia has had a prosperous year. Wholesale houses report distribution larger than ever[illegible] before, and it is estimated that thols retail trade for the year has been[illegible] close to fifty per cent. above rece[illegible] years. Mining, fishing and canni[illegible] industries have had a most satisfactory season. Lum[illegible]ering is exp[illegible] iencing a lull at present owing t[illegible] falling off in Oriental and Aus[illegible] ian orders. Vancouver's bank clear[illegible] ings will exceed last year's by about $50,000,000. Business generally is good in Nelson and through the Kootenay district.

HERRIOT IMPROVING

Condition of French Premier Reported Better Last Night.

PARIS, Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press).—The condition of Premier Herriot, who has been ill for the past week, is satisfactory, according to a bulletin issued by the physicians last evening. It was said the patient had spent a calm day and that his temperature last evening was 100.04.

The Premier received the Ministers of the Interior, the Prefect of Police and the Director of the State Detective Service.

THE WEATHER

This morning was ushered in with [illegible] three above zero, a light [illegible] wind, cloudy and with the appe[illegible] ance of snow on the way. Our prevailing winds are from westerly direction, and from the lowest to the highest temperature during the 24 hours there is generally a range of 24 degrees, frequently 30, and sometimes 40 degrees. With an easterly wind the difference between the lowest to the highest during the 24 hours is usually only five or six degrees and very often even less. Why it should be so is not very well known, and I have never seen a satisfactory explanation.—W. P.

ENCOURAGE DA CING

Most people in Anytown as elsewhere, danced because they enjoyed dancing.

But the beneficial exercise involved is very seldom considered.

Yet, next to proper walking and breathing, dancing is the best form of exercise. Man has danced his way down through the centuries but generally with a motive other than exercise. He has been happy and danced in glee, or agitated and danced in ritual or rage. It has ever been a great emotional outlet

Circulation of the blood muscles and nerves are all greatly benefited by the dance Dancing in the out-of-doors however clumsy, is a fine form of exercise. Rhythmic dancing of all sorts gives a harmony to the body muscles and there is a relaxation enjoyed that no other exercise affords.

The grace charm and beauty cultivated are not lightly to be considered.

So dancing should be encouraged —and this doesn't let the old folks out.

REPORT ON THE WELL BABIES' CLINIC

The last quarterly meeting of the Board of Management of the Well Babies' Clinic was held in the Clinic rooms at the G.W.V.A. hall last week, when reports on the year's work were given and officers elected for the ensuing period. There was a fair attendance of ladies. The president, Mrs. W. Galbraith, occupied the chair.

Mrs. Galbraith, who is spending the winter in Florida, asked to be relieved of her presidential duties, but was finally persuaded to retain the position, the vice-presidents, Mrs. A. Mowat and Mrs. R. Harstone, to carry on during her absence. Election of officers resulted as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. James Kendry; President, Mrs. Wm. Galbraith; 1st and 2nd vice-presidents, Mrs. A. Mowat and Mrs. R. Harstone; Treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Neal. Voluntary helpers: Mrs. W. J. Giles, Miss Giles and Miss Marjorie Best. The office of secretary remains unfilled.

Regret was expressed at the illness of the treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Neal, and the former secretary, Mrs. A. W. Turner.

Dr. Jessie Birnie, in her report, said that the Well Babies' Clinic was in a most flourishing condition, with increasing attendance over the first six months of the year. She drew attention to the fact that in 1921, when the Clinic was inaugurated, the number of babies brought in totalled 308, while in the past year, the total was nearly 1,000, with an average attendance of a little over 20 per week.

The attendance of the doctors had been most satisfactory, and many good reports were received of their work. One case in particular was cited, that of a visito to the city who brought her child, suffering from a chronic ailment peculiar to childhood and very difficult to cure, to the Clinic. She was given advice as to diet and hygiene by the physician in carge. Returning home, she wrote some time later to a sister, saying, that, on persuasion of neighbors, she had changed the child's diet, from that prescribed by the Peterborough doctor, and its condition grew worse. When she took it later to a child ailment specialist in Montreal, he had advised the identical procedure that had been recommended by the local doctor at the Clinic.

A number of cases of rupture in young children had been brought into the Clinic. By methods employed there, a great deal of benefit, and, in some cases, complete cure, had resulted. Several cases of malnutrition also had been prescribed for, sub-normal children becoming normal under proper diet.

The doctor reported that the Clinic nurse, Miss M. Foote, had been doing excellent propaganda work throughout the city, with results shown in increasing attendance at the meetings. Grants made by societies in the city to the work included those of the Peter Robinson Chapter of $50 and $25 from the Graduate Nurses' Association of Peterborough.

The Metropolitan Insurance Company's nurse had informed the Clinic of instructions received from her company to advise the mothers who were attended by her to send their babies to the Clinic as soon as she was through with them, which showed an appreciation of the importance of such work by big financial corporations.

The King's Daughters had been as generous as usual in providing and serving tea at the monthly meetings, the Clinic rooms had been renovated, re-papered and re-decorated and a screen provided that was useful as well as ornamental.

The doctor emphasized the wide scope of such work and its influence on the life of the nation. The proper feeding of a child in its first year of life may determine its future health record through life. A statement made recently by a prominent medical authority recorded the span of an average life as having been lengthened immeasurably in recent years by attention to the health of small infants.

Madam President nad Ladies:

The report for the Well Babies' Clinic from Oct. 1st to date is as follows:

Total attendance—207.
Weekly average—20.
Number of new babes—25.
Number of calls made—101.

There were 3 follow up cases, varying somewhere in nature: :

Case No. 1—An under-nourished child who was losing weight, but has gradually and normally gained, when put on butter soup feeding.

Case No. 2—An abdominal support made for an infant.

Case No. 3—A relief case, a very deserving one, for which family I obtained food and clothing.

It is a pleasure to say there is an increasing interest being taken by the mothers regarding the privileges of the Baby Clinic and also from the public by their inquiries regarding the work and have shown their interest by a few voluntary small sums of money I have already received and gratefully appreciate for the work which is undoubtedly of much value to our future citizens.

Mamie Foote, Nurse W.B.C.

JAPANESE PAY TAX, BUT HAVE THEIR LUXURIES

TOKYO, Dec. 16—(United Press)—The enforcement of the so-called luxury tariff bill in Japan since July 31 apparently is not having the desired effect of encouraging thrift and economy, as was originally intended by the law-makers.

The Government has been taking every effort to encourage these qualities in the Japanese people since that time, but the public seems to be taking an indifferent attitude toward this national policy.

The importation of goods specified as luxuries is increasing each month. The tax is a 100 per cent. uniform tariff on items declared to be luxuries.

During October the customs at Yokohama, chief port in Japan, obtained nearly $150,000 on this tax alone. This compared with other months before the tax was put on shows that the volume of goods is virtually unchanged or, if anything, slightly increased in the last few months.

The Government hopes that consumption of "luxuries" throughout Japan would be curtailed seems to be in vain, and the futility of the law in this regard, at least, is gradually being realized.

While it had been rumored the next diet might revise the bill, it is understood by officials at the Foreign Office that no change is contemplated.

BISHOP SPEAKS AT ST. GEORGE'S IN CONFIRMATION

Right Reverend J. F. Sweeny of Toronto Conducts Impressive Service.

BIG CLASS

Warns of Responsibility Attaching to Rite—Six Assisting Clergy.

St. George's Anglican Church, North Monaghan, was the scene of an impressive and beautiful service last night when Right Reverend J. F. Sweeny, Lord Bishop of Toronto, administered the rite of Confirmation to fourteen candidates. The church was well filled for the occasion, and His Lordship was assisted by Rev. O'Connor-Fenton, Rural Dean; Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, of St. John's; Rev. G. J. Bousefield, St. Luke's church; Rev. J. D. Paterson, All Saints' church; Rev. J. L. Hughes, St. George's church, and Rev. Walter Cox, Lakefield. Two of the candidates were from All Saints'; four from Lakefield, and eight from St. George's.

The Lord Bishop, who had previously received a converted Roman Catholic into the Anglican church, expressed his great pleasure in visiting the congregation of St. George's and congratulated it upon the evidences of the splendid relations existing between priest and people.

Speaking on the words "Believest thou this?" His Lordship reverently depicted the scene that preceded their utterances by Jesus. The season of Advent, he said, is not merely to recall the first and second comings of Christ, first in great humility and second with power and great glory, but is also intended as a challenge in regard to belief in the fundamental truths of the Christian faith.

Referring to the context of his subject, the speaker remarked that Martha, at the time she said to Jesus, "If Thou hadst been here my brother had not died," had not realized that Jesus was more than mere man. She had not realized that He was master of life and death. He said to her, "I am the resurrection and the life....believest thou this?"

World Must Hearken.

"There never has been an age in the history of the Christian church," His Lordship said, "when it was more necessary to hearken to the voice and allow it to come into our hearts and catechize us as to the fundamental beliefs. Believest thou this?

The church takes it for granted that we believe He is the resurrection and the life and would have us take comfort by placing these words in the forefront of the solemn office of the service for the burial of the dead. If we live and believe in Him we shall not die, for He is the life and resurrection—the one who gives us the gift of life here and life eternal."

The questioning should be pursued into other matters, the Bishop continued. In the Te Deum the congregation says "We believe that Thou shalt come to be our judge." In the three great creeds, the Apostles', the Nicene and the Athanasian, the belief is asserted that Christ is coming to judge the world. "Believest thou this, that Christ is coming to be our judge? In the workaday world, do we believe it? Do we carry about the consciousness that there is one day going to be a day of reckoning? There are two great classes—those who keep the great judgment as a deterrent to sin, and those who never take it into their calculations and take their chances on the future.

At Matins on Sunday, you sing 'I believe,' but on Monday are you living and acting in the consciousness that Jesus Christ is to be your judge? Do you ever stop to think—'If I do not want a sinful life to be dragged into the open on that great day and dishonor my sacred calling and do despite to the spirit of grace I will ask that God's Holy Spirit will restrain me from evil.' Believest thou this? Then let this influence you in your everyday conduct."

Manifold Blessings.

Speaking specially to the candidates for Confirmation, His Lordship pointed to the solemn rite as a bestowal of grace; an ordinance of strength; a service of dedication and consecration. Through it the candidate ratifies and assumes the vows and obligations made for him when he was an infant in holp baptism. It is the ordination of the laity by the laying on of hands of the Bishop. It is a definite act that should have a definite reaction on the private and public life of the person who participates in the rite.

"A great responsibility rests on you," the Bishop continued. "Walk worthy of the vocation in which you are called. Carry the consciousness that you are a son—daughter— of the Lord God Almighty. Remember the spirit of noblesse oblige — I must bring no taint of discredit on my high calling.

Let us stand fast and quit ourselves like men," he concluded, "and hold fast to the faith of the Holy Church that God has given us and for which some day we must account."

ZIEGFELD MOST WONDERFUL MAN WIFE EVER MET

"Red-Head" in a Pink Ruffled Dress Fell in Love at Sight.

FOOLED CYNICS

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—A red-head in a pink ruffled dress captivated the world famous connoisseur of feminine beauty and their happy marriage is one of Broadway's most cherished romances — a romance the bright lights can't dim.

BILLIE BURKE his marvelous hands—long, slender, artistic, graceful and haunting. I fell in love then and there and never recovered.

Flo Ziegfeld met Billie Burke at a dance—on Broadway.

"And we fell for each other like two freshmen attending their first prom," Miss Burke laughed. "As I came in Flo whispered to the man who was calling out the figures of the Paul Jones: 'See that I get the red-head in pink.'

"As soon as he touched me, I was conscious of

"I treasure that pink ruffled frock that I wore that evening above anythings else in my wardrobe. I wear it yet at home festivities. After ten years of marriage I still maintain Flo Ziegfeld is the most wonderful man I ever met."

When Ziegfeld triumphantly led the lovely Billie altarward, Broadway was frankly cynical. That won't last, the wise ones said.

Billie Was Popular.

For Miss Burke was undoubtedly the most popular and sought-after actress in America and a pet of London as well. The eligibles of two continents had sought her favor in vain.

And Flo Ziegfeld had already started on his career of glorifying the American girl. His ability to pick beauties had been acknowledged. But was that particular gift an ideal accomplishment for a husband?

The worship and applause of the crowd that raised them to such heights of popularity is not nearly so necessary to them as the mutual love and devotion and those family ties that bind all really devoted couples.

Billie Burke has added to her prestige as an actress and beauty by being a devoted wife and intelligent mother, a famous hostess and housekeeper and an all-round woman. And Flo Ziegfeld shines as a father and a husband as well as a theatrical producer.

Flo Likes Sweets

"Of course, Flo has his faults," his wife admits. "He eats too many sweets, and he won't cut down on them.

He buys the most unexpetd and unhandy sort of presents for Patricia and me. Elephants, goats, alligators, and all species of live stock come in with his card attached when he's away. Only last week he got two buffaloes for us.

Personally, I don't believe the zoo's place is in the home, but there's nothing to be done.

"Patricia, our daughter, is our first idol. The theater is our second. Then we both love our home and traveling. My husband encourages my career. I am under his management professionally and I consider him the best manager in the country as well as the best husband.

"I understand his problems and he knows mine. Hence we have no professional difference. He wants me to be a success personally, and I want his production to be the best of their kind.

"I dont 'feel jealous of the beautiful girls in his revues. They belong there. I believe, with him, that the American girl should be glorified, because she is the most splendid thing in the world."

But Broadway and Ziegfeld himself agree that he never glorified anyone half so lovely as the red-head in the pink ruffled dress whom he selected to play the role of Mrs. Ziegfeld.

A DEFECT IN THE SYSTEM.

Municipalities which hold their elections on December 1st are beginning to find one drawback in the system—and, incidentally, a defect that has been considered by local civic authorities when the question of changing the election day has been discussed.

Although the Council is elected at the beginning of December, it cannot take office until the second Monday in January, which is the date named in the Municipal Act for the inaugural Council meeting.

The result is that the old Council, some of whom have been rejected at the polls, continues to hold office for six weeks after the election.

It is not a situation to be encouraged, for the possibilities are that some of the defeated candidates may not be very careful as to their votes on money matters, knowing that the funds will have to be found by the new Council, and they themselves will be in out of the storm.

It should not be a difficult matter to have this condition remedied by the Legislature, by means of an amendment to the Municipal Act.

That it was not done before was probably the result of an over-sight more than anything else, and if the municipalities affected bring the question before the Legislature the difficulty will no doubt be re-adjusted.

A WESTERN VIEWPOINT.

Yesterday on this page The Examiner published the first of a series of articles by The Edmonton Journal, giving an analysis of Canada's position and opportunities and appealing for support for a policy which the Journal believes is necessary to be adopted. The second installment appears to-day.

These articles are not the usual Western lamentation, full of complaints and grievances.

As a perusal of the first two shows they are reasonable, sane and constructive, and because they represent a Canadian viewpoint of Canadian problems, the Examiner believes that they will be read with interest.

No. 1 of the series outlines the general situation, and it will be followed by nine others dealing with the most pressing of Canada's economic problems and possible aids in their solution.

Our readers may not agree with everything that is said by the Journal, but they will at least be fair enough to recognize that the progress of this country demands that serious attention be paid to the questions dealt with.

There is reason to fear that the whole situation is not being considered as it should be.

The problems may be realized, but it is difficult to see where any real attempt is being made to solve them—rather, it seems, that we are drifting without a helm or without a chart.

Read in that light the Edmonton Journal's articles should be of great interest and benefit.

HELPING THE UNEMPLOYED.

Although Peterborough is perhaps luckier than many other Ontario centres in the matter of unemployment, the fact remains nevertheless than there are many men here-out of work—men whose incomes were small when they were employed and who had little opportunity of making provision for a period of enforced idleness.

Their position now, with the arrival of severe winter weather, is far from enviable, and should cause a resolve on the part of other citizens more fortunately situated to do what they can to extend a helping hand.

It is not charity these men want, but a chance to work, to earn something for themselves and their families, and there must be in Peterborough, as in many other places, citizens who have some work around their premises that could be done now, something that would give even a day or two's employment—something that would who is beginning to wonder where it is to somebody his wife, his little ones and himself is going to come the next meal for from.

This is the kind of practical help that is needed —and it is to be feared will be needed even more a few weeks later on than it is now.

It is something for those who are in a position to assist to think over earnestly, and with an appreciation of what a protracted period of unemployment means to men who while they were working were not lavishly paid.

OUR NORTHERN HERITAGE.

The view the average resident of the earlier settled portion of the Province has of Northern Ontario as a large area of non-productive country will have to be revised.

Soon that section of the Province will come to be regarded as one of the greatest assets of Ontario and one of the largest contributors to its economic wealth.

The wonderful prosperity of Northern Ontario is better illustrated by the report of G. E. Suitzer, the United States Consul at North Bay, than by anything the Examiner has been.

Dealing with the exports of products from the North to the United States during the first nine months of the present year, Mr. Sultzer's figures show an increase of approximately 50 per cent. over the same period last year, the total being $36,577,348 for 1924, as compared with $24,518,537 last year.

The variety of the articles shipped is probably the most surprising feature inasmuch as the list included gold and silver bullion, lath, lumber, pickets, pulpwood, paper, railway ties, chickens, fur, fish, Christmas trees, etc.

It is interesting to note that the biggest increase was in the export of gold bullion, which was almost three times as large as last year, while silver bullion also was exported in much greater quantity. Altogether the North shipped out $17,718,045 worth of gold and $2,345,801 of silver bullion during the first nine months of the year.

We have a rich heritage in Northern Ontario; we should appreciate it down this way and show more interest in the solution of problems that particularly affect the residents of the North.

A CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

(Article II.)

Canada's fundamental problems of today had their beginning in the conditions that governed the early settlement of this country. Comparison of these with the history of early settlement in United States will facilitate a clear understanding of our present situation. That is essential to a consideration of aids in solution.

* * * *

Early settlement in the United States was in a narrow fringe along the Atlantic coast. The first census after the Revolutionary War taken in 1790, indicates that, ou tof a total population of almost 4,000,000, ninety-five per cent. were located east of the Alleghany Mountains. Only a mere handful had ventured more than 300 miles from seaboard.

By 1830 population had increased to almost 13,000,000, but the average of the western advance was still less than 800 miles inland. During the next two decades there was some settlement on the Pacific coast, but by 1862 when construction of the first railroad across the Western States was commenced the main westward movement had penetrated to an average depth of only 1,200 miles. The total population was then 32,000,000.

These figures indicate that the early westward movement in United States was very gradual. The advance guard was never far ahead of the settled area. With the exception of the Alleghany Mountains, which presented no serious difficulty, there were no natural barriers or large unproductive areas to cause wide gaps in early settlement. Thus, when United States entered upon her era of big western development she had a compact population of 32,000,000, engaged in a variety of pursuits and representing some considerable measure of self containment and wealth.

In the early days of Canada, on the other hand, physical characteristics and national rivalries operated against concentration of initial settlement and gradual extension of settled area. In 1791, when the 4,000,000 people of United States were compactly located within 300 miles of the Atlantic coast, Canada, with a population of less than 200,000, had a far-flung distribution over a stretch of 1,400 miles from Louisburg to the St. Clair River.

The contrast at the time of Canadian Confederation is equally striking. The new Dominion at its first census in 1871 had a population of 3,689,257. Of these 97 per cent. were in Eastern Canada. There were 25,000 in Manitoba, 48,000 in the North West Territories and 36,000 in British Columbia. This handful of people, scattered as they were and with three great natural barriers creating permanent geographic divisions undertook to construct two railways—one across the more easterly of these barriers to the Maritime Provinces; the other through the wilderness north of Lake Superior, across the western plains and over the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific coast. The agreement to build westward was made only eight years after United States, with a population ten times as great—and closely concentrated—had seen the commencement of the first railway across its Western States.

As an aid in this gigantic undertaking the new Dominion gave as part bonus 25,000,000 acres of land in the Prairie Provinces. In addition, one-twentieth of all the land in these Provinces south of the North Saskatchewan was reserved to the Hudson's Bay Company in the settlement under which its property rights to a vast domain were extinguished. The setting aside of this large area of land, while undoubtedly in the general public interest, has its own bearing on present problems.

There were many delays in the starting of construction of Canada's first transcontinental, but it began eventually and was completed in 1886. It was accompanied and followed by construction of branch lines. New areas still more remote, and far removed from railway facilities, were thrown open for settlement. This led to insistent demands for still more lines and for public services. The promoters of the Canadian Northern saw a possibility for a second transcontinental and were encouraged to construct it. Then the Federal Government conceived the idea of a third transcontinental and the Grand Trunk Pacific was started.

Certain thoughtful Canadians urged that these three transcontinentals should be obliged to use a common national highway over the great natural barrier around Lake Superior and that two of them, planning lines through the Yellowhead Pass, should be compelled to use a common highway there. But that view received little support. Those holding it were accused of lack of faith in Canada's future. The great immigration movement of 1900 to 1914 was on and it was held that Canada would soon have sufficient people to maintain her three transcontinental lines and the very comprehensive and expensive systems of government that had been provided to meet the needs of so scattered a population.

In 1913-14 immigration fell off rapidly. The war came and took its toll of life, energy and money. Today we have scattered across Canada a population equal to that which United States had when its people were largely concentrated within 600 miles of the Atlantic coast. We have a Federal and nine Provincial Governments, an extensive local government system and more miles of railway per capita than any other country in the world. We have a net Federal debt of $330 per capita to which must be added another $175 for Provincial and municipal indebtedness. Our annual taxes, Federal, Provincial and municipal, average over $100 per capita. Freight rates on many commodities are necessarily high and, even with such rates, our nationally owned railway system is losing over $50,000,000 per year.

These conditions represent a tremendous financial burden on our individual citizens and a tremendous handicap on trade. They have brought in their train other serious conditions. But the problems thus presented are by no means unsurmountable. The chief remedy for them will be the subject of the next article in this series which will appear tomorrow.—Edmonton Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Don't put it off any longer. Do that Christmas shopping now.

Many organizations are planning Christmas activities that should ensure a supply of the necessaries of life with some semblance of Christmas cheer, too, for every home in Peterborough. It is a work in which all should co-operate.

Keep in mind that shopping early in the week and leave Saturday as far as possible free for the farmers or the other visitors will be of service not only to the merchants but to their out-of-town customers.

Just at this season of the year it is difficult even for a truck owner to get very excited over the imposition of a tax upon gasoline.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, December 15. — Except for choice butcher and export cattle, trade was slow and draggy. There was a moderately heavy run of over 5000 cattle offering but mostly of rather poor quality. Shippers will be well advised to go easy on their shipments from now on until after Christmas. The export trade will likely be quiet. The local packers are already well supplied for practically all their Christmas requirements, although anything exceptionally choice will not be neglected, and will bring good prices. Medium and common stuff will find but a poor and slow demand.

Calves were a little easier at $11 tops.

Lambs and sheep a dollar lower. There will be only a slow demand for lambs for the next few weeks.

Hogs were steady to a quarter higher.

Prices in the various sections are as follows:

Export cattle, choice and heavy steers $7.25 to $8; bulls $4.50 to $5.25; cows $4.50 to $5.25; cows, $4.50 to $5.

Choice fat cows, $3.50 to $4.50.

Stockers and feeders, choice short-keep feeders, 1000 to 1200 lbs., $5.50 to $6.25; stores, 900 to 1000 lbs., $5 to $5.50; choice stockers, 830 to 950 lbs., $4.25 to $4.75; light western stock $3.50 to $3.75; choice western, $4.50 to $5.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, December 15. — There was no improvement in the export business in grain here to-day, owing to the indifferent demand from foreign buyers. In the local market a moderate trade was done in car lots and prices generally were firm with sales of Ontario No. 3 extra malting barley at $1.06 and No. 3 grade at $1.05 per bushel, ex-track, while Ontario No. 2 white oats sold at 63c, No. 3 grade at 61c and No. 4 grade at 60c per bushel, ex-store.

The millfeed situation was very active and the undertone was steady. A stronger feeling developed in rolled oats and the prices were advanced 10c per bag.

A moderate business was transacted in all grades of eggs and prices were firmly maintained. No change of any importance occurred in the butter market, prices being steady, and trade dull.

The feature of the cheese situation was the stronger feeling and prices scored a further advance with sales of Western June made No. 1 white and colored at 18 3-4c to 19c per pound.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.65 to $2.75.

STERLING RATES.

Sterling demand $4.71 7-8.

Sterling cables $4.72 1-4.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 15.—Owing largely to a falling off of 1,382,000 bushels in the visible supply of wheat in the United States, and 1,691,000 decrease in rye, the wheat market to-day developed considerable strength. Closing prices for wheat were firm 3-8c to 1c higher, May 1.68 1-4 to 1.68 3-8, and July 1.48¼ to 1.48 3-8. Rye finished 1 1-4 to 4½c up; corn unchanged to 7-8c lower; oats unchanged to 3-8c off and provisions at 2c to 25c decline.

In addition to the fact that domestic stocks of wheat and rye were shown to be disappearing, knowledge that wheat prices to-day for the first time in several years had gone above $2 a bushel anywhere in the United States, had an evident stimulating effect on the wheat market here. It was appreciated, however that the plus $2 prices which were obtained at Minneapolis were for specially choice wheat of much better quality than that delivered on existing speculative contracts for future deliveries here.

EGG PRICES.

OTTAWA, December 15. — More fresh eggs reported arriving Toronto; Montreal prices a little easier. Ontario country shipper paying extras 55c; firsts 44c making sales extras 60 to 62; firsts 48c f.o.b.; 2 cars of western storage firsts sold at 42c delivered Toronto.

Receipts of poultry increasing; demand improving. At the Carleton Place, Almonte, Smith Falls and the Perth poultry fairs, turkeys sold at 30c to 38c.

Toronto jobbing fresh specials 72 to 73c; extras 68 to 70, storage extras 48c; firsts 44 to 45c.

ment's policy, which was fulfillment of her obligations in the Sudan and proper conduction of affairs in the Sudan by the Egyptian Government, and he strongly insisted that Egypt was not case to take to the league of Nations.

With regard to the question of water for irrigation and other purposes, Mr. Chamberlain said that nobody but a fool could ever suppose it was the Government's intention to starve Egypt into submission by thirst.

Reverting to Russian matters, he declared that the evidence received regarding the Zinovieff letter left no shade of doubt as to the authenticity of the document, and he therefore declined to discuss the subject further. As to treaties he would not exclude the possibility of some future resumption of negotiations with Russia, but for the present the Government would hold its hands and await developments.

MacDonald's Comment.

Ramsay MacDonald, in the course of his reply, said that if the Government were not prepared to sign the Geneva peace protocol, it must announce its position respecting the security of France and Belgium and the various small states. He hoped that when Mr. Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, went to meet the foreign representatives to discuss inter-allied debts, he would go with his hands free, and not tied.

Among other inquiries about the Government's policy, Mr. MacDonald asked if there was any new arrangement regarding the distribution of territory in Northern Africa. To this Mr. Chamberlain interjected that he had no discussion with anybody about territory except those persons whose territory it was. To Mr. MacDonald's remarks that he was not convinced either of the genuineness or the falsity of the Zinovieff letter, Mr. Chamberlain again interjected that the Government had information that the Communist recipients of the letter had destroyed it.

Mr. MacDonald warned the Government that if it based its Egyptian policy on the assent of the Egyptian Government, which did not dare appeal to the Egyptian people, it was building upon sand.

A WONDERFUL REED THE SUGAR CANE

Estimated That 15,000,000 Tons of Sugar Used Each Year.

The question, "What is the most popular article of diet?" is, on the face of it, a difficult one to answer. So few persons think alike on the subject of eatables that it seems well-nigh impossible to assign a great measure of popularity to any particular food.

Firstly, as the minister says, let us ask ourselves another question, the answer to which may lead us to a clue. Is there any substance which is always found on the table at breakfast, dinner, tea and supper time? There is, and it is a white crystalline substance, generally contained in a bowl—sugar.

"Ah," you object, "there are other commodities to which the same test could be applied. Bread, milk, or even salt, for example." That is quite true. But, in addition to the sugar used at the table, consider the amount that is consumed in the form of sweets, chocolates, "fancy cakes," puddings, etc.

Yes, a little investigation will soon show that sugar is one of our most constant and popular comestibles, for as civilization has progressed the demand for it has increased. The world nowadays has a huge "sweet tooth." The total consumption of sugar is estimated to be somewhere between 14,000,000 and 15,000,000 tons a year. Sugar has long been known as a valuable source of bodily energy, and it may be that the rush and hustle of modern life makes the body demand large supplies of energy-producing food, which helps to explain the present-day craze for elaborate cakes and confections.

To the "man in the street," there is but one variety of sugar—that seen on the table, which is known as "cane" or "beet" sugar. The chemist, however, knows sucrose, as he terms domestic sugar, to be but a single member of a large family of carbohydrates called "the sugars."

Naming but a few representatives of this family, we have glucose, maltose, fructose, lactose, mannose, arabinose, galactose, raffinose, etc., but there are many more. Only the first four are of any commercial use; the others are of purely academic interest, being principally products of the laboratory.

Glucose is used greatly in the manufacture of confectionery and aerated waters, and is produced by the action of certain chemicals on corn or potato starch.

Fructose, which is said to be sweeter than ordinary sugar, is the chief constituent of honey, while maltose is formed by adding malt to a solution of starch, and is found in beer.

Lactose, commonly known as "sugar of milk," is obtained from whey, which is left over in the making of cheese. Though not so sweet as cane sugar, it does not readily ferment, and for this reason is greatly used by the makers of invalid and infant foods.

The ancient Greeks had a favorite story about a "wondrous reed" which yielded honey without bees. Nobody paid much attention to their tale, as they had a reputation at that time for telling "tall" yarns. In this case they were telling the truth, for their "wondrous reed" was nothing more or less than the sugar cane, which was known at that time in the Far East. It was brought to Europe by the Arabs when they invaded Spain, and was called by them "sukkar," or, as we pronounce it, sugar.

The sugar cane is a perennial, and belongs to the same botanical order as wheat, oats, maize, etc. It grows 10 to 20 feet in height, and takes about 270 days to mature in the equatorial regions. The stem, or cane, is jointed, and varies in color from pale yellow and green to purple, some varieties having stripes of one color over another. A leaf four or five feet in length grows up from each joint, but the lower leaves wither, and have to be stripped off by hand. From a long stalk, termed the "arrow," a feathery tuft of minute flowers appears, which if left untouched will ultimately develop seed.

The juice of the cane is extracted by crushing the latter in a series of rolling mills. Cane juice contains about 83 per cent. water and 13 to 16 per cent. sugar plus some impurities, which are got rid of by heating the juice with "milk of lime." This treatment causes all the impurities to settle out, when the juice is filtered, and bleached with sulphur dioxide gas. The process after this is just an elaborate system of evaporation in large vacuum boilers to drive off the water and allow the sugar to crystalize.

The "refiner" buys raw cane or "beet" sugars of varying grades, and from them makes all the different classes of sugar that are seen in a grocer's shop, such as granulated, castor, cube, icing, brown and Demerara sugar. The last named is made by a certain process from cane juice, but originally came from Demerara, from whence it gets its name. From the sugar refineries we also obtain syrup, treacle, molasses, etc.

The principle of sugar refining is much the same as that on which the extraction process is based. The raw sugar is dissolved in hot water to form a syrup, which is rendered alkaline with lime, filtered and decolorized, and then boiled in a vacuum pan (a pan from which most of the air is extracted by strong suction pumps) until the purified sugar is crystalized. The crystals of sugar are of many different sizes. The small ones are used for cube and castor, the medium for granulated, and the large size for crystal sugar.

Cube sugar is manufactured by mixing the fine-grained crystals with sufficient white syrup to make a soft doughy mass, which is led into cubical moulds contained on the surface of a revolving drum. During a half-revolution of this drum the sugar paste is compressed within the moulds, and the cubes drop out of the moulds when the half-revolution is completed. The empty moulds are then carried round on the revolving drum until they come under a "hopper," which refills them with sugar paste. The process is continuous, one cube machine being able to turn out 250 tons of cube sugar a week.

In Europe the sugar beet industry has made rapid progress in recent years, some 5,000,000 acres being devoted to the cultivation of this white-fleshed variety of the domestic beetroot. Attempts made to establish the sugar beet in England have met with a certain measure of success, and its cultivation may eventually become one of our staple industries.

Talking so much of sugar has brought to the writer's mind the story of the sentimental wife who, as her husband was departing to the office one morning, murmured plaintively, "I am sure, John, you might mention something sweet to me before you go."

"All right," said the matter-of-fact John, with one hand on the door-handle. "What about syrup?" Slam!

INTERNAL WAR GRIPS ALBANIA

Outbreak Has Reached Dangerous Proportions—Martial Law Declared.

INSULAR AFFAIR.

ROME, Dec. 16.—(United Press). —The revolution in Albania has reached dangerous proportions, according to advices received here today.

The rebels captured Kroja during the night, and are advancing toward Tirana, the capital. Another despatch said the rebels had captured Scutari.

Martial law has been declared throughout Southern Albania, according to advices from Salonika, and the rebellion has strong support among the Catholic tribes.

At Tirana a court has condemned ex-Premiers Ahmed Zoogu, Vronis and Achmet Ferlatzi to ten years' imprisonment and confiscated their properties for the State.

A direct despatch from Tirana to-day says: "Rebel bands crossed the northern frontier, well equipped with machine guns and artillery and are advancing in the direction of six towns.

Belgrade advices said ex-Premier Zoogu was leading the revolution to recapture the power he lost during the rebellion last spring. The uprising is purely an internal affair, although Zoogu is using some foreign mercenaries.

Neighboring nations have agreed on a "hands off" policy.

TORONTO, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press). — Under the terms of a settlement ratified by Chief Justice Meredith this morning the widow and family of Byron A. McCrodan, Toronto man, who was shot by the gamekeeper of a fishing preserve near Cobourg on May 18 last, dying a few days later of his injuries, will receive the sum of $12,500 from the owner of the preserve, William James Crossen.

E. C. Cattanach, K.C., for all parties, appeared before Chief Justice Meredith this morning and submitted the settlement which His Lordship then ratified.

Under it, the sum of $4,500 goes to Mrs. McCrodan, and the balance of $8,000 will be paid into court for the two children, who are one and four years old.

The gamekeeper, William J. Crossen, is now serving a term of six years for manslaughter.

The damage is estimated at $500,000.

Foreign Women Go Through Form of Marriage With Canadian Men So They Can't Be Deported

LONDON, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press.)—Sir Horace E. Avory, Judge of the Court of Criminal Appeal, in affirming a sentence of three years' imprisonment for bigamy, declared that there seemed to be a prevalent system in this country of men going through a form of marriage with foreign women in order to give the women the status of British subjects and thereby making the deportation of the women impossible after they had offended against the country's laws. On this subject the London police magistrate recently said it was high time the Home Secretary investigated.

VIRGIN ISLANDS DECIDE TO HELP THEMSELVES

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix, V. I., Dec. 16.—(United Press). — St. Croix, the "Garden of the West Indies," and gem of the Virgin Islands, purchased by Uncle Sam from Denmark in 1917, is taking on new and vigorous life.

For seven years this beautiful island has suffered from heavy taxation, a change of government and drought which has reduced its sugar production from a normal crop of 12,000 tons in 1920 to 1,800 tons last year and compelled a third of the population to leave. The island which once had a population of 26,000, now only supports about 8,000 people.

But the long, long lane is turning, the heavens have sent down their showers of blessings and the sugar cane is coming up so fast you can almost see it grow. With the prospect of returning prosperity, the leading planters, cattlemen and merchants have united in a broad and general representative organization, such as was never known here in all the centuries that St. Croix was occupied by the Dutch, the French, the Spanish, British and Danes, "to advance the agricultural and commercial interests and to promote the general welfare" of the islanders.

A meeting of about 100 of the most active citizens of St. Croix was held here in Christiansted recently, and the St. Croix Chamber of Commerce was the result.

The St. Croix Tribune calls the organization, "The greatest movement yet launched by the people of this island," and says: "Now, for the first time in our history a society has been organized in the spirit of fraternity, and to be conducted along liberal lines. It is a great attempt on the part of our people to help themselves. Almost without exception we have been waiting upon the Government to improve our declining condition. The Government has done nothing and we blame the Government for doing nothing. But we also have done nothing. In due course of time the people of this community will fully realize, even as they have now begun to realize, that they must take the initiative in their own affairs."

The islanders are seeking markets in the States for toys, fancy needle work and bead work, cigar boxes, cigarette and tobacco boxes, jewel cases and mahogany furniture manufactured by the people here.

The Hawaiian Pineapple Company is now negotiating with land owners here with a view to extending their production of pineapples, which has proved profitable as an enterprise in Hawaii and the Philippines, to this island.

The Federal Agricultural Experiment Station here has developed a standard variety of caster beans that can be grown here to supply the American market, which secures supplies chiefly from India.

There are about 50,000 acres of fertile land on this island alone of which only about 12,000 acres are now occupied.

SPANISH AUTHOR RECEIVES INVITATION TO APPEAR BEFORE MILITARY TRIBUNAL

Vicent Blasco Ibanez Laughed Heartily When Informed of Edict From King Alfonso.

PARIS, Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press). — Vicent Blasco Ibanez, Spanish author, who recently caused the 'bombardment' of various towns in Spain with pamphlets attacking the King and military directorate, laughed heartily when informed of the edict summoning him to appear before a military judge in the Spanish capital.

"It is unnecessary to say I shall not respond to the invitation," he declared. "I would just as soon take refuge on Canibal Island as to confide myself to the government of bandits now ruling Spain."

CHARGED WITH THEFT $18,000

Three Men Accused of Stealing From Provincial Bank.

TORONTO, December 16. — Canadian Press. — Charged with the theft of $18,000, the property of the Toronto Branch of the Provincial Savings Bank, three men, Verdon Herron, manager of the branch, Frank S. Smith, accountant of the bank, and Fred H. Armitage, of Parry Sousd, head of the Frontenac Lumber Co., were arrested soon after midnight this morning in a downtown hotel.

Auditors who have been examining the books, discovered the "loan" —$15,000 of which Armitage, it is alleged, has received.

It is said that Herron is also vice-president of the lumber company and Smith, secretary-treasurer.

The alleged theft also involves certain transactions in the Ontario Departments of Lands and Forests.

Armitage's firm, the Frontenac Lumber Co., was also tendering on further timber limits offered for sale by the provincial government.

Yesterday at noon tenders were opened and the tender of the Frontenac Lumber Company was accompanied by an unmarked cheque for $12,000. Investigation disclosed that the Frontenac Company had borrowed some $15,000 from the Provncial Bank. The remaining $3000 was loaned to other parties.

Provincial Treasurer W. H. Price said to-day: "The Provincial Bank is not allowed under legislation governing it to make loans to any parties. It exists only for the taking of deposits and turning its cash over to the province or rural credits board."

Mr. Herron is another civil servant, T. W. Heron, senior clerk, of the King's Printer's office

This step however came after the council had adopted a motion asking the Dominion government to approve the plans of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario for power development at Morrisburg.

The Hydro plan contemplates power to the public based on the cost of power development only, leaving the outlay on navigation in the province to be taken care of otherwise.

CAMPBELLFORD COUNCIL HELD BUSY SESSION LAST EVENING

Stage All Set For Nomination Day and January Elections —Deputations Heard— Report on County Council.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 16. — A meeting of the Town Council was held last evening with the following members present: Mayor A. J. Meyers, Reeve C. Davidson, Deputy Reeve Dorie, Councillors Abernethy, Cole, Johnston, Kingston, McDonald and Redden.

Two resolutions from the Ontario Municipal Electric Association referred to the matter of developing power on the St. Lawrence River and also near Morrisburg. The resolutions were submitted to a committee, with instructions to report later.

A statement from the Assessor regarding the frontage of a certain lot on Rear Street was read. This stated that the frontage of this lot was sixty feet, instead of sixty-six feet as assessed. Moved and seconded by Reeve Davidson and Councillor Cole, that the Assessor's statement be accepted and that the records be revised. Carried.

On motion of Councillors Cole and Johnston, the Clerk was instructed to advertise for tenders for the two sets of scales at station. Tenders to be received up to Monday noon, December 22nd, and to be brought up at a special meeting of the Council on Monday night, December 22nd, in the Clerk's office at eight o'clock.

The Mayor then asked if there were any deputations S. J. Moore and Mr John Hall were present and objected to the price of three dollar and seventy-five cents a foot frontage on Second street sewer and asked if some change could not be made The Mayor informed them that the by-laws and surveying and all had been passed and laid out by the engineers and he did not see how any change could be made. The price for frontage would have to be left to the Court of Revision.

P J. Kelley was also present and said he would have an account for 1924 but it was not quite ready and would the Council of 1925 secure him the payment of it He was told that if it were a just account they certainly would.

He also asked to be exempt from fines if he did not keep the one hundred and ninety-eight feet frontage of sidewalk in front of his property near the High School free of snow. He was told the Council had not power to do that.

This year [illegible] will be said in 1925 of some by-laws. F W Wood sent in a request that he be authorized to borrow the necessary money to pay for the finishing of the sewer work on Rear and River streets until the debentures could be sold. Reeve Davidson presented this by-law that fourteen thousand dollars be borrowed from the Standard Bank of Canada in Campbellford for Rear and River streets and that F W. Wood, treasurer of the town, be authorized to arrange this loan with the Bank. This was carried.

Another by-law presented by Deputy Reeve Dorie, for thirty-three thousand dollars to be borrowed by F. W. Wood for Sebastapool, Inkerman, Canrobert, Palliser, Balaclava, Simpson and Tice streets and Hastings Road sewers, was approved, signed and sealed.

Mayor Meyers brought the attention of the Council to a request from the buyers to have the new scales at the station, closed in with doors. Moved and seconded by Councillors Johnston and Cole that doors be put on the new scales at the station There were four yeas and four nays so Mayor Meyer voted with the yeas The motion carried.

It was left with the chairman of the Road and Bridge Committee to get this done, on motion of Councillor Abernethy and Reeve Davidson.

Mrs. Lagenby who lives beyond the station, asked that a light be put on the street there.

Councillors Abernethy and Cole moved and seconded that this be left with the engineer, Mr. Scott — Carried.

Two accounts were presetned, one from a Peterboro hospital in reference to the bill for Mr. Henry Baker in Seymour, and one from the King Edward Sanitarium for Mrs. Rose Collins of town. The former was left for the mayor to confer with the Reeve of Seymour. Reeve Davidson and Councillor Redden's motion that the latter account be paid by the town, was carried.

Repairs to Bridge.

Reeve Davidson then brought up the matter of the payment of the repairs put on the bridge across the Trent river at Bridge street in Campbellford, as was discussed at the Counties Council last week. After he had explained what had been done at Cobourg, he moved and Deputy Reeve Dorie seconded that the town of Campbellford this year pay 15 per cent. of the total cost of repairs, which amounts to one thousand four hundred and sixty one dollars, and at the same time give a guarantee to the County Council that the remaining 10 per cent will be said in 1925 provided that the Provincial government does not pay to the County.

The council was notified that the grant was 42 per cent. of the whole cost of repair, and that the reeve take the matter up with the Department and endeavor to secure Campbellford's share of the said amount.

Voting Day.

Councillor Abernethy then presented a municipal bylaw providing a place for nomination; also deputy returning officers and poll clerks and polls for the municipal elections to be held on Monday, January 5, 1925, from nine a.m., to five p.m.

Reeve Davidson and Councillor Abernethy moved and seconded that the Assembly Hall of the high school be secured for nominat'n which will be held on Monday, December 29, 1924, from half past seven to half past eight.—Carried.

The following places were decided on for the polling places:

Ward 1, Town Hall; Ward 2, Herald office; Ward 3, Armouries; Ward Ward 4, Henson's shoe shop.

Ward 1, on motion of Reeve Davidson and Councillor Cole, M. Mulhearn and C. A. Wilson, Deputy Returning Officers, E. Bayes, V. Brunelle, poll clerks.

Ward two —Motion of Reeve Davidson and Councillor McDonald S. J. Dolman, deputy returning officer; J. D. Cumming, poll clerk

Ward three—On motion of Councillors Redden and Cole—J. M. Arnold and Mrs. C. W. Turner; deputy returning officers and Jas. Redden and Miss N.. M. Hoover, poll clerks.

Ward four—Motion of Councillor Abernethy and Deputy Reeve Dorie —H. Coxwell, deputy returning officer and C. B. Williams, poll clerk.

Each deputy officer is to receive $5, each poll clerk $4 and the rental for each booth $5.

Councillor Kingston brought in a notice of motion that an expression of the people be taken at the election in reference to the War Memorial. This resolution was read but will not be decided on until the special meeting next Monday night.

Councillor Redden brought the attention of the Council to the sewers on Kent and Napier Streets, now in construction, and after discussion, Councillors Redden and Johnston moved and seconded that the whole Council and Town Engineer go and examine the work on Tuesday morning at eleven o'clock. Carried.

Councillors Redden and McDonald's motion that the following paysheet as read be accepted and orders drawn on the treasurer. Carried.

PLEAD GUILTY; WAIT SENTENCE

Three City Boys Admit House-Breaking—Fourth Denies Complicity.

IN SMITH TOWNSHIP

Four boys, Edward Woodcock; Stanley Scully, Leonard Minnicola and Anthony Minicola charged with breaking and entering a cottage in Smith township owned by Stuart Cullen, were remanded yesterday by Magistrate O. A. Langley until Monday when sentence will be given on the last named three. The Minnicola brothers and Sculley pleaded guilty but Woodcock maintained his innocence and only evidence of theft was made out against him.

The elder Minnicola made a plea for leniency for himself and his companions, to which his worship listened intently.

Owing to a technical difficulty in the drawing of the charge no judgment was given in the Woodcock case and he is on remand without conviction.

Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton, K.C. conducted the prosecution and Woodcock was not represented by counsel.

Patent Lock.

Stuart Cullen said he had a patent lock of his own invention on his summer cottage, and the shutters on the four windows were locked. On December 4 he noticed that one of the shutters had been taken off and put back. The door had been tampered with. He did not go through the house then as he had not a key with him.

On December 9 he returned to examine the cottage and found two bedtick pillows, three or four quilts, one blanket, tea kettle, teapot, axe, grind stone and other articles were missing. These articles were found in Mr. Fitzgerald's camp four or five hundred yards away, when a search was made last Thursday by Provincial Constable N. F. Maker and the complainant. Cullen had seen Edward Woodcock at Fitzgerald's house on December 4. Woodcock is the only one of the accused who did not plead guilty to the charge.

Woodcock had no cross-examination.

Found the Goods.

Constable Maker told of finding the stolen goods in Fitzgerald's camp where Woodcock had been staying. Arriving early in the morning he found Woodcock, the Minnicolas and Sculley frying breakfast. Woodcock told him the stolen goods were brought from Peterborough.

After being warned, the boys admitted taking the goods, and the Minnicola boys said they had solved the combination of the lock.

Denied Being There.

Edward Woodcock, conducting his own defence, called Len Minnicola and remarked that he wanted him to say Woodcock was not present when the goods were stolen. Minnicola stated that Woodcock was not present.

In cross-examination by Mr. Hatton, the witness said Woodcock was never in the Cullen cottage; he was in town.

Woodcock had a contract to cut wood for Mr. Jopling and the others were hired by him. There were not enough blankets in the shanty and they got the blankets from Cullen's cottage. Woodcock didnt' bother asking where the stuff came from.

Anthony Minnicola declared "Ed wasn't there when the stuff was taken." He maintained in the face of a stiff cross-examination by Mr. Hatton that Woodcock should not be soaked for something he did not do. Woodcock had never asked where the stolen goods came from.

Mr. Hatton: "Did he think Santa Claus brought them and left them there?"

Minnicola. "I don't know what he thought. I don't think Santy Claus brought the stuff as far as I know."

The witness said he was hired by Woodcock at $1.50 a day to cut wood.

Stanley Scully swore that Woodcock was not with the other youths when the cottage was broken into.

Mr. Hatton: "Woodcock said you would tell the same story, and you did?"

"Well, what about it?"

Accused Testifies.

Edward Woodcock said he didn't know anything about the stolen property. It was in the shack when he returned from town. He did not ask the boys where they got it and they did not volunteer any information.

In cross-examination by Mr. Hatton, Woodcock said it was none of his business where the goods came from.

Magistrate Langley said he was satisfied by the evidence that Woodcock was guilty of the theft of the grindstone but no case was made out of breaking and entering.

Anthony Minnicola said he intended to return the things he stole and is willing to pay the damage. He was born in Italy but came here when 7 years old. He had never been in trouble before.

Leonard Minnicola said he had been up for riding on a sidewalk once. Challenged by the Crown Attorney he said he had been up before Magistrate Dumble for small thefts like all boys are guilty of.

Magistrate Langley remarked that all boys should not be slandered, as there are still some honest boys in the world.

Remarking that Christmas is drawing near, His Worship remanded the four for sentence until Monday, December 22 at 11 o'clock.

IBANEZ FILM HISSED DOWN.

Madrid Audience Forces Management to Substitute Another Picture.

MADRID, Dec. 15.—When a film based on one of Blasco Ibanez's novels was about to be shown in a cinema here the audience hissed and booed and shouted "vivas" for the King and Spain. The people called for the National Anthem to be played by the orchestra and obliged the management to substitute another film.

All this was a protest against the campaign Ibanez is carrying on abroad against King Alfonso.

ACCUSED ASKS FOR ANALYSIS

Edward Woodcock Questions Ability of Constable to Judge by Smell.

SWAMP WHISKEY

Edward Woodcock, charged with having liquor unlawfully in a place other than his private dwelling house, pleaded not guilty before Magistrate Langley yesterday. J. F. Strickland prosecuted.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker said he took the accused into custody on December 12 in Smith township, seventeenth concession.

On December 11 a man named Hector Faulhevner was also there.

Woodcock said he was in charge and had the place rented from Mr. Jopling. There was one room downstairs in good condition while the other two rooms upstairs were badly broken.

On December 11 when Constable Maker went upstairs he found a mash and parts of a crude still. No one being around there, he left everything as he found it. There was no liquor there.

Next day on his return at 9.30 a.m. the Constable found Woodcock, Sculley, and the Minnicola brothers in the shack.

Broke A Crock.

While the constable was talking to the other boys, Woodcock took an axe and broke a crock of moonshine. The constable saved about half a pint of the liquid, which smelled like swamp whiskey. Woodcock said this jar of liquor was in Peterboro the previous day.

Swamp whiskey and moonshine mean the same thing, the constable told His Worship and swamp whiskey smells as strong or stronger than real whiskey.

"I hope you dont' expect me to test it" the magistrated remarked when the exhibit was entered.

What Is Moonshine?

Woodcock said the liquor belonged to Faulkener, Constable Maker said. The liquor is very strong moonshine whiskey.

His Worship quarrelled with the word "moonshine" which he said is not mentioned in the act which specifies intoxicating liquors. Constable Maher declared it to be above 2½ per cent proof spirit.

Asks Analysis.

Woodcock by way of cross-examination demanded that the sample be sent for analysis. "He can't prove it is more than 2½ per cent by swearing it," he declared. "I drank more than half a gallon of it and it didn't make me drunk so its' not very strong."

Constable Maker declared the liquor far above 2 1-2 per cent.

Mr. Strickland said if Woodcock wants an analysis it will be alright and a remand can be made from time to time until the analysis comes back in three or four weeks.

As a concession Mr. Strickland later suggested that an analysis be made locally.

The case adjourned to permit this and re-opened this evening.

C.N.R. DEPOSIT CAME BEFORE THE COURT

Trial of R. P. Gough Brings Out Much Discussed $1,000,000.

TORONTO, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—The much discussed million dollar deposit of the Canadian National Railways in the Home Bank made its first appearance in the trial yesterda afternoon during the hearing of charges against R. P. Gough, before Judge Coatsworth. It came during the evidence of Victor W. Scott, formerly manager of the Montreal branch of the Home Bank.

Under questioning, he stated that he million dollar deposit came from the Canadian National Railways on May 26th or 27th of 1923, and that it was withdrawn on June 4 or 5.

"I was called on the telephone by the general treasurer of the Canadian National Railways and he told me that the company was making a deposit of a million dollars. So I accepted it."

"And under what conditions was it withdrawn?"

"Withdrawal was by cheque," the witness stated. "I was advised before I got it that the money would be there only a week or ten days."

Mr. Gough it will be recalled was a director of the Canadian National Railways at the time.

CALLS ON JELFS TO LEAVE BENCH

Sensation Is Sprung in Ambitious City When Action Is Known.

HAMILTON, Dec. 16.—A sensation was sprung here yesterday when Police Magistrate George Frederick Jelfs received from Attorney General Nickle a letter requesting his resignation, to become effective Dec. 31.

The attorney-general's letter assigned no reason for his course of action, but it is believed that Magistrtae Jelf's views toward the Ontario temperance act played a part in the matter. Mr. Jelfs has been magistrate here for 20 years, and more recently became judge of the juvenile court also, which post he will resign simultaneously with the magistracy.

Beyond intimating that he would tender his resignation as requested, and would probably take up private law practice, Mr. Jelfs had no statement to make. Controller William Morrison is regarded as the probable successor to the office.

Rivera Says He Accomplished Difficult Retreat and Railway is Freed.

(By Webb Miller—United Press Staff Correspondent).

PARIS, Dec. 16.—General Niguel Primo Rivera, head of the Spanish directory, who is taking personal charge of the campaign against the bandits in Morocco, to-day sent a telegram setting at rest the sensational stories in the European press that Tetuan and its connecting railway are menaced by a fresh Moorish uprising at Alcazar Seguer.

The telegram added the important news that the difficult retreat from Zocoa Abas had been completed with little fighting, meaning that 40,000 men had been safely extricated along a narrow mountain road.

HANDMADE LACES SENT FROM THE PHILIPPINES

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—(United Press).—One of the booming industries of the Philippine Islands is the production of hand-made cotton laces and embroideries. Made largely by school-children, the amount of these fine textiles imported into the United States jumped to $542,033 for the first ten months of this year, according to statistics of the department of commerce. The amount imported in the corresponding period of 1923 was valued at $43,884.

The Filipinos exported to the United States $3,108,372 worth of other wearing apparel, most of which was in part or all made of lace and embroidered materials.

BACK NICHOLAS TO RULE RUSSIA

Groups of Exiles in European Cities Organize to Press His Claims.

NUMBER 300,000

PARIS, December 15. — A Russian movement for the restoration of the monarchy in tre person of Grand Duke Nicholas, one of the greatest Russias Generals in the world war, took positive form to-day when a group here made public plans for "a Russian Nationalist Committee," a new organization.

This committee includes executive bodies in Berlin, Vienna, Prague, Paris and ondon, under the leadership of such men as General Baron Wrangel. The names included are the best and most respected in the ranks of the Russian refugees, and all are pledged to Nicholas for Czar of all the Russians.

The association comprises the union of Russian officers abroad, with 60,000 members, military refugees, numbering 40,000, chiefly in Serbia, Poland and Bulgaria; a commercial, industrial and financial union of Russian refugees—comprising the bulk of exiled bourgeois, capitalists and merchants—and the Monarchist and Nationalist union.

In all 300,000 refugees are supposed to be pledged to Grand Duke Nicholas from to-day. They are virtually all the refugees who have any organization whatever. The Grand Duke remains in retirement, near Paris and refuses to give any indication of his plans, but it is known that he is working whole heartedly with the organizers for his restoration. The Grand Duke's position according to one of his closest adherents to-day, is as follows:

"Overthrow of the Bolsheviki must come first of all, and then re-establishment of normal economic conditions, under which the Russian people may regain their old productivity and strength.

"After this the Grand Duke favors the calling of a representative assembly for the formation of a constitution. If the Russian people wish the monarchy restored on a constitutional basis, like that of Jugland, the Grand Duke is willing to accept.

If the Russian people prefer a constitutional republic the Grand Duke will make no attempt to impede it, and will do everything possible toward a restoration of a normal condition under such a republic."

The attitude of Grand Duke Nicholas makes the greatest possible appeal to the Russian refugees and he is almost unanimously their choice for Czar despite the fact that his cousin, the Grand Duke Cyril, has technicaly a better claim.

Grand Duke Cyril is profoundly unpopular among the Russians, however, and his wife even more so.

The Russian refugees' newspaper in Paris gives great space to the visit of the Grand Duchess Cyril to New York, with many caustic comments, particularly on despatches calling her "Czarina." It is pointed out that Grand Duke Cyril proclaimed himself Czar by divine right, although he has hardly a handful of friends or supporters among the Russian imperialists.

Grand Duke Nicholas is now planning a trip to Serbia, Austria and Poland to visit the centres of the restorative movement. Although he refuses to discuss his cousin Cyril or allow his attendants to do so, it is clearly understood in the imperial organization here that Grand Duke Cyril's claims cannot be taken seriously as Russia would never admit an old-fashioned "Divine Right" Romanoff to sit on the throne again.

Grand Duke Nicholas has received the full approval of all the constructive elements among the constitutionalists, including members among the constitutionalists, and including many members of Kerensky's old party.

Salesman For Skin Cream Learns How To Clear Up Pimply Complexion

Mr. Cliff Miska, of 595 Ninth Avenue, Astoria, L. I., writes: "I was a salesman of creams for healing pimples, blemishes, etc., but when my face broke out with blotches, pimples, and blackheads I tried one salve after another with no permanent results.

I found it as impossible to sell skin cream as a bald headed man finds selling hair tonic. Finally I decided I would have to get at the cause—the blood. I was amazed to find that within a few days after taking Carter's Little Liver Pills, my skin took on a new healthful look, blemishes started to disappear and I felt like a new person all around. Now I know what to do when I have a pimply skin, you bet." This old reliable remedy treats such complaints in a safe way. It has been used all over the world for 67 years. 25c at all good drug stores.

WILL BROADCAST THE HIGHEST NOTE

Lyric Soprano Holds the World's Record For Natural Voice.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16. — (United Press.)—The highest note ever recorded by the human voice will shrill into the ears of radio fans of America the day after Christmas. It will even be higher than dad's cry of rage at getting the Christmas bills.

Edna La Verne Friebe, lyric soprano, who holds the world's record of having sung the highest note, will sing the note in a musical programme broadcasted by Station W. L.S. here. She is able without any effort to record and sustain B flat, above high C, the world's record in altissimo for the natural voice.

The broadcasting of high notes in singing has been found difficult. But W L S has made successful tests with Miss Friebe's voice in preparation for the programme.

"CORRIGAN

by EDMUND SNELL

Corrigan squared his shoulders and swallowed a lump that had risen in his throat. He recognized at a glance the octagonal watch that Browning had always worn at his wrist. On the table, between the lamp and the body of his friend, fluttered a long dried leaf, pinned to the woodwork by a native hunting knife. Corrigan, trembling with emotion, read the inscription smeared on it in irregular red characters: ZARIMAN.

He mopped the perspiration from his forehead and groped for his pipe. As he stooped to retrieve it, his eye fell on something white by the leg of Browning's chair. He turned it over and over between his fingers, holding it close to the lamp. Presently he begn moving round the room, following a train of thought this new discovery had set in motion. He noted the position of the two glasses on the table, the square half-finished bottle of spirit, the absence of any sign of a struggle. Apparently satisfied with what he had seen, he slipped the thing into a pocket, and went quickly down the steps to where the Pathan watchman was waiting.

The man rose to his feet and picked up the lamp. He looked from the dark ominous patches of moisture on the wooden stairs to the red spots on Corrigan's tunic.

"Where now, Tuan?" he asked.

"Home," replied the planter.

* * * *

It was toward sundown that Fellowes and White, followed by coolies carrying their barang suspended in a sort of hamunock swung from a stout bamboo pole, arrived at Corrigan's bungalow.

"Come in," shouted the big man from his long chair. "And get them to push your stuff in at the back."

The newcomers took the chairs one on either side of the table and discarded their sun helmets. Fellowes, the first the first assistant, a keen, spare hatchet-faced individual, broke the silence.

"What's in the wind?" he demanded, with that lack of reference to the difference of their respective positions that Corrigan preferred.

Corrigan grinned.

"Zariman the Terrible and his merry men," he said calmly. "I've decided to concentrate, that's all. You heard about poor Browning, of course?"

"Yes," put in White, a somewhat stout youth, with rimless glasses. "One of my mandors got it when he went down for the mail. Bit thick, what?"

Fellowes leaned forward.

"But you don't think——?" he began, helping himself to a ciragette from a tin box.

"I do, old son," Corrigan assured him. "There's something in my bones that tells me that he'll try a cut at us next. That's just why I've brought you here."

"I see," mused the irrepressible White. "United we stand, sort of thing. You'll be gratified to hear I've brought my Webley. It's got a deuce of a kick-up to the right, but I can nail a bottle at twenty yards."

"I'm glad of that," laughed Corrigan, "because we're not out for any revolver practice at the moment. I don't want to discourage them from paying us a visit."

"You think we're being watched, then?" demanded Fellowes.

The proprietor drew a folded paper from his pocket and handed it across the table. The first assistant perused it, White reading over his shoulder.

Fellowes whistled.

"That's about the last thing poor Browning issued," said Corrigan. "It's pretty concise, don't you think? Any man who lives alone in these parts runs mighty big risks. I've taken risks ever since I was born, but I never take unreasonable ones. You follow me, don't you?"

Both men nodded. Corrigan got up from his chair and walked to the veranda rail.

"I say, you fellows," he said, "just look at that sunset. If you could manage to get that on to paper, there's not a man alive'd believe you."

"Marvellous!" agreed Fellowes, moving round in his chair.

"Makes one feel thirsty," announced White.

"Touch the bell," said Corrigan, "I'm afraid I shall never reform you, my boy. There's not an atom of art in your soul!"

The boy shuffled in and presently Corrigan stood between the other two, a glass in his hand.

"I guess you're wondering just how much I know beyond what's written on that paper, and how I happen to know it. I'm going to enlighten you as much as I can. I've always had a peculiar habit of pushing in at awkward moments. It's a disease with me. I had a row with our Hebrew friend over the way yesterday, and decided to tell the D.O. all about it. A ratioual man would have left it till daylight; I strolled over to Putatan directly after makan."

"Corrigan's way!" murmured White, watching the bubbles rising in his glass.

"Yes, Corrigan's way. You'll never see the lalang growing between my trees. I arrived a matter of minutes too late to help Browning, but in heaps of time to learn all there was to know concerning how he died." He raised one finger to emphasize the importance of his next statement. "Browning was drugged before Zariman's head-hunters looked in!" His voice broke. "He didn't have a dog's chance, but——" He brought his fist down on the table, sending a glass humming like a tuning-fork—"I'm going to get that swine who drugged him, and, by heaven! I'll make him pay for it, even if I have to go down to Hell to find him!"

White clutched the table with both hands, his eyes, strangley magnified by the glasses he wore, sparkling in the last fleeting half-light before the fall of darkness.

"I'm with you, every time!" he blurted out with enthusiasm.

Night fell like a spangled curtain of black velvet. The boy crept in and lit the swinging lamp, rolling up the sun blinds.

White sprang to his feet and all three stood, their heads almost touching, gazing down at an arrow, formed like the deadly dart puffed from the tube of the sumpitan. Secured to the shaft by a fine thong of twisted leather was a strip of yellow hide, and on it, in crimson letters: ZARIMAN!

"Something in the nature of a warning," said Fellowes, slowly.

"Browning had one of these," put in Corrigan, thoughtfully.

White started.

"Good Lord!" he cried; "he got the warning—and yet——?"

"And yet," said Corrigan, "old hunter that he was, they caught him napping." He threw back his head and stood, with folded arms, looking from one to the other. "Doesn't that set you wondering? Would that damned fanatic distribute his grim warnings—would Browning have fallen into the trap Zariman had prepared for him unless——"

White stared into the blackness beyond the rail, striving to find daylight beyond the gloom. He felt as if he were groping with sightless eyes in a fathomless underworld.

Fellowes followed the whirling flight of a beetle round the oil lamp.

"Unless," continued Corrigan, "the dope was administered in a manner so cunning that he had no suspicion; unless the man who handled it was one whom he had not the slightest cause to fear!"

Corrigan shook his head.

"I fancy not," he replied. "I firmly believe every man he had round him was spirited away in some mysterious manner before Zariman's gang started their gruesome work."

Fellowes dropped the arrow on to the table.

"What are we going to do about it?" he asked.

PETES PLAY PARKDALE TONIGHT; SOO GREYHOUNDS HERE MONDAY

Northern Team Asked for Game Here on Their Trip at Week-End.

CHANCE FOR FANS

Peterboro Face Big Job Tonight and Will Battle All the Way.

The Peterborough hockey team left for Toronto on the 3.35 C.P.R. train this afternoon and tonight will clash at the Arena with the Parkdale senior team in the semi-final game of the senior S.P.A. series, the winners to meet the Soo Greyhounds on Saturday. Parkdale will prove the toughest opposition the Petes have yet met, but the local squad are determined to battle the Paddlers until the final gong sounds. Parkdale have a very strong forward line in Harry Watson, "Pork" Romeril and "Don" Jeffrey, but their rear guard is not considered as effective as the Peterborough defence.

Whether or not the Petes win tonight, they will have a chance to test themselves against the Soo, and what is more, the local fans will have a chance to see the clash, for the Greyhounds, who, of course, are the Allen Cup holders and amateur champions of Canada, will be here next Monday night for an exhibition game with the Petes. An opportunity to see the Allen Cuppers in action with Stan. Brown, "Flat" Walsh, "Gloomy" Lessard, Woodruff, "Babe" Donnelly and other stars in line should pack the local Arena. The success of the Petes in the S.P.A. series is responsible for the appearance of the Soo here, the Northerners asking for a game with the blue and whites after learning of their victories over Niagara Falls and Preston.

SANDY McNIBLICK, the pro who told old Moneybags he was hopeless as a pupil and refused to take any more of his dough.

FELIX HOSESHOES, a 30-handicap man who made a hole in one and neglected to call up and tell the sporting editor about it.

HAROLD J. HANGNAIL, who, although beaten 9 and 8 in the club finals, did not blame the clicking of a newspaper camera for his defeat.

FRECKLES SWARTZENBURG, a caddy who was not looking when his boss hooked into the woods and admitted it. Freckles deserves further consideration for tossing another ball to the gentleman and saying, "See if you can keep this one on the course, you big bum."

HERMAN L. MARTYR, who played through the entire season without once breaking a No. 2 iron cross her bean, despite such provocations as, "Herman, you do look so funny in those plus fours" and "Great grief I guess I can take 16 putts if I want to!"

MAJOR PERCH, who in accepting the chairmanship of the greens committee for another year said he was doing so because no one ever criticized his work and all the members worked hand in hand with him. (We might as well break down here and confess the major is a mythical character.)

DOLLY DIMPLES, formerly of the Follies, who refused to wear knickers on the course in front of all those staring men because—well, is it necessary for a lady to explain THAT!

MR. ORFIL QUEER, who absolutely refused to discuss the round at Pinehurst, during which he broke 80 for the first time in 17 years. (This may be partly explained by the fact that Mr. Queer went goofy the moment he realized the wonder of his accomplishment and has not been seen since.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

Leading the majors in pitching to be a jinx that plays havoc with a twirler's showing the following season.

It is the history of baseball that leading pitchers seldom repeat. In a great many cases the next season is a disastrous one.

Take the cases of George Uhle and Adolf Luque. They led the American and National, respectively, in 1923. Last season was a decidely tough one for both of them.

Just why this should be the case is difficult of explanation. The general belief is that most pitchers are inclined to grow careless after a big year.

When a pitcher is winning he must be physically fit, get much assistance from his teammates and be favored with the breaks.

Then there is the matter of psychology Emitions play their part in pitching success. The pitcher who is making a reputation is keyed up to his part. The pitcher who has won fame appears satisfied to rest on his laurels, takes too much for granted.

Now that the world series is over and Walter Johnson emerged the hero after a poor start, I am going to print the confessions of the great Walter as to why he first failed.

In the opening clash, in which Johnson was defeated after 12 innings of battling, it was apparent to me that something was wrong with him. He was not working smoothly.

Ordinarily a pitcher who performs with almost machine-like precision, Johnson appeared very nervous. He would adjust his cap after almost every pitch, hitch up his trousers, rub his hand in the dirt on every other ball pitched.

Usually a fast worker, Johnson slowed up in his style so that he was almost dilatory. Incidentally he was much wilder in that first game than I had ever seen him.

Despite the fact that he struck out a dozen Giants and it took 12 innings to beat him, he was far from being that Walter Johnson I have known for years.

"It was just plain stage fright," said Walter to me after the series. "I'll bet no rookie making his big league debut ever felt more nervous than I did in that first game. The mental hazard of what the fans expected of me was ever present. I wasn't natural."

That sounded rather funny coming from a pitcher who has faced hundreds of tougher spots than the opening game of a world series, without having the slightest emotions.

"It was entirely different in the last game of the series," continued Walter. "After having been beaten twice, then getting an opportunity to deliver that I believed the series was over as far as I was concerned, the deciding battle was just a ball game to me.

"Although in trouble in every one of the last four innings I worked, there never was a time that I was worried.

"I know it looked bad after Frisch tripled with only one out but I felt sure I would get the next two men.

"In the first game I was never sure of myself. In the last game I always felt that the Giants were going to be beaten after we once tied the score."

Proving that the stars have their emotions, that a mental hazard can break down supposedly invincible pitching power.

OTTAWA'S BIG SCORE.

Visitors Found Home Team Easy With Two on the Casualty List.

BOSTON ARENA, Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press.)—Ottawa Senators piled up the biggest score of the National Hockey League season last night, sending Boston Bruins into last place in the league standing with a 10 to 2 defeat. Manager Tommy Gorman, of Ottawas, was predicting that his team would lead the League next month.

Ottawa found Boston handicapped, with Carson Cooper on crutches and Skinner out with a broken hand.

FRENCH REPORT OF BALL GAME

Written by Reporter for "L'Illustration" of Paris Describing American Pastime.

J. Seraphin, writing in L'Illustration of Paris, describes the visit of the American baseball teams to that city in an article intended to explain to the French the nature of the game. The translation of his article, which follows, will indicate how much a man who knows nothing about it can discover by seeing it played once:

"The baseball. * * * The first demonstrations of the great American professionals, the 'Geants,' of New York, and the 'Bas-Blancs' of Chicago, who have just contended against one another in the Stadium of Colombes, have directed the curiosity of the French public toward this game, rather little known among us. It is, nevertheless, in the United States, the national sport, which leave far behind it in popularity the golf, the tennis or the football.

"A grand match of baseball is, over there, a consider be event, which suspends th activity of business and to which the papers give the foremost place. The champio is of the baseball have not only a fabulous reputation; they receive payments which, calculated in our money, amount to some hundreds of thousands of francs and certainly transcend an annual stipend of a million.

"One must not, however, be too quick in envying their lot. These benefits have an offset; a rigorous daily discipline, at once moral and physical, to which they must submit themselves in order to conserve or impro e their form, and which is at the same time military and monastic.

"Some timid att mpts to introduce the baseball took place before 1914, but for various reasons they had no success. It was during the war that the first games were actually played in the American camps. They inspired in some sportsmen, who had been marveling spectators of them, a taste for acclimating among us this game, exciting for whoever was able to comprehend its multiple rules and its subtle technique.

"Behold the players upon the grounds. From a great chest or a large bag, they extract the batons, the thick glov s, the masks, the pads and the white balls made of a kernel of cork, rolled in thread and covered with skin. These are the indispensable instruments of the match. This, however, does not begin immediately. It is preceded by a preparation of about twenty minutes, because it is necessary to warm up progressively the muscles of the arm, to accustom the eyes to the atmosphere, to judge the influence of the wind. The ball, hurled, caught on the wing in a robust palm, or sent back with a formidable blow of the baton, whistles through the air, sinking itself into the creases of the gloved hands, outstretched, in a frenzy of speed and movement.

"Now the match is engaged. To hurl, to strike, to run; such are the three principles of the game, which epeats the essential gestures of primitive humanity; to hurl the stone, to strike for attack or defense, to run to attain an end or to flee a danger. * * * Nine players on each side, alternating as attackers or defenders, of the four 'buts,' placed at the corners of a square of twenty-eight meters on each side.

"With terrific force the 'hurler' makes to depart the ball, which the adverse 'batteur' must send back with a blow of the 'bat,' before running with all speed toward the 'but.' But it is necessary that he should reach there before the ball has been caught by one of the adverse players and sent back to the guardian of the 'but,' w o is forced then t> touch the 'but' before the 'batteur.' There are, be it understood, multiple combinations, which exact an unheard-of promptitude of reflexes.

"The habitues of football and of the Basque 'pelota' have been surprised not to see the nine players of each camp directly opposing each other. The baseball has been conceived on methods and a psychology entirely different, and the public has all its education to pursue on this point. It has, nevertheless, been sensible to th magnificent athletic spectacle which has been offered to it; the work of the 'hurler,' who, by the formidable balls, surprises the 'batteur' before he has been able to make any gesture, the force of the grand batteurs, who, in warm weather, can send back the ball beyond the tribunes of Colombes, across the field; the agility of the 'men in the field,' who pick up the white ball in all positions an send it back immediately, the desperate glissades of the runners to the bases, all is in this game for the pleasure of the French, future players or spectators."

A GOOD FAST BOUT

TORONTO, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press.)— Staggering Donnie Mack with a right to the jaw about the middle of the third round of their scheduled eight round bout at the Standard theatre last night, Jackie Johnson started himself on the way to speedy victory. He followed up with a fusillade of rights and lefts to the jaw that kept Mack retreating and he gradually weakened under punishment. He was sent to the canvas in his own corner for the count of nine and was out on his feet when he stood up and two more rights completed the victory and ended Mack's comeback. Both boys weighed in at 122 pounds.

YANKS WANT SHOCKER

URBAN SHOCKER.

Both New York clubs have a habit of turning players loose and then being willing to take them back at fancy figures.

Urban Shocker, star pitcher of the St. Louis Browns, is a definite case Handed to that team for almost the taking, the Yankees are now anxious to jar loose with a lot of money for his return.

Shocker is dissatisfied at St. Louis, unable to give his best efforts and is certain to be traded if any club offers a worthwhile return to Manager Sisler.

LINDSAY WEEPS FOR PETERBORO

OWN TROUBLES

Peterboro made a mistake in entering the S.P.A. hockey series, says the Lindsay Post, by playing against and defeating such teams as Niagara Falls and Preston. The Petes have demonstrated their superiority and consequently they have been given their option of entering the Senior Series against such teams as Parkdale, Aura Lee, Hamilton, Stratford, Kitchener and other teams. Niagara Falls, last year champs of the intermediate series, are also playing in Senior company this season.

Financially, the Petes would probably be better off to enter the senior series, especially as they would derive a splendid percentage of the gate receipts in Toronto. However, the Petes have been clamoring for a championship for some years past and got within one goal of that aim last season. This is probably why they wish to remain in Intermediate company this years. No one blames them.

On the other hand, other nearby O.H.A. Intermediate teams, such as Lindsay, Oshawa, Whitby, Bowmanville, Port Hope and Cobourg, have absolutely refused to be grouped with the Petes this season Thus the Petes find themselves out in the cold.

They will in all likelihood enter the Intermediate series and take a bye.

Lindsay Effected.

In the meantime Lindsay intermediates (still an unknown quality) have been placed in the Intermediate series with Uxbridge, Cannington and Port Perry. This is where the Lindsay team should be. The above towns have nothing to fear from Lindsay this season and on the other hand, Lindsay should prove a strong drawing card.

However, there seems to be a difference in opinion in the above places. In the face of the fact that representatives from Port Perry and Gannington assured President Carew of the Lindsay Hockey Club, that they had no objection to Lindsay's entrance, yet the three clubs above communicated with the O.H.A. requesting that Lindsay be barred from their district. They have until Wednesday night to definitely decide what they are going to do.

It would be a calamity for Lindsay and Peterboro to get a bye and then clash against each other.

BELL TELEPHONE TAKE THREE FROM WESTCLOX

The Belle Telephone grabbed threes straight from the Westclox, in the Mercantile League last night at the Water Street Alleys. The Bell Telephone were good in every game and all their men bowled in great form. The Westclox boys were not in their usual good form, few good scores being turned in by them.

Dick Lush was again high man of the evening, with a great score of 613. This is Lushs' second consecutive week in the limelight, last week being high man with a score of over 600. It looks as if he will again cop the high average this year. Steve Elliott had a nice score of 580. Lush had the high single of 236 and Yelland had 228.

The Bell Telephone bowlers were all up and above the 500 mark, and they had two games well over 900 and one away above 800. They rolled a total of 2729.

"PRO" GOLFER SEEKS CARD FOR HOCKEY

Application Based on Contention That Golf is a Recreation.

NORTH BAY, Ont., Dec. 16. —A fine point in amateur eligibility has been raised before the executive of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association. The Soo Grey hounds have applied for senior card for Neil McGregor, who happens to be golf professional at club there. Whether or not he is a professional in sport was debated at length at executive meeting and matter was finally referred to O. H. A. and C. A. H. A. for a decision. There appeared to be general inclination on part of the N. O. H. A. to grant the card.

Those favoring giving him his card and amateur status in hockey contended that golf is a recreation and not a competitive sport. That is it not a sport as recognized by the A. A. U. and that the A. A. U. issues not cards for golf players. The matter was unofficially taken up with O. H. A. officials by secretary H. P. Charlton and he swas informed that McGregor would probably be regarded as ineligible. In the meantime, the Greyhounds have asked for a show down on the matter.

The Greyhounds have been given permission for games with Port Arthur and Fort William but they will be purely of an exhibition nature. In the list of official referees approved not a single Toronto name appears this year. Southern senior group, Sudbury and Soo, will start their season on January 12th at Sudbury, each club getting four home games and season closing on February 20th. New Northern senior group, Timmins, Iroquous Falls and New Liskard. Promise that they will be able to give the southern winners real competition for right to defend Allen cup.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,— Your correspondent, Mr. W. H. Merrill, says that he went through West Hastings before the election. Why blame Mr. Porter? Isn't that explanation enough for defeat?

CONSERVATIVE.

To the Editor,
Dear Sir:

We are glad to see that our old friend, W. H. Merrell is coming out again for the Council when he was defeated in 1919 and 1921, though it was by a big vote I believe he would stand a better show this time.

He may be right that Mr. Porter was beat because Hanna was a better man but I do not think that was why Mr. Merrell was beat. I have known Mr. Merrell since ever he was a traveller and I hope he will be elected.

OLD FRIEND.

CHURCH UNION IN WEST.

Editor, The Examiner.

Sir,—There was a meeting of the members of Knox Church, Briercrest, Sask., held in that church on Monday afternoon, Dec. 8, 1924, the purpose of which was to consider the question: "Shall we continue our present affiliated relations with the Methodists of this town?" There was a large percentage of the congregation present. Besides the members, Revs. McKeigan, of St. Andrew's, Moose Jaw, and Davidson of South Hill, were there as representatives of the Presbytery to watch proceedings. Rev. George MacArthur of Regina led the Presbyterians. Mr. MacLachlin, Methodist minister and pastor, occupied the chair. The question under review was discussed from all angles, and although the feeling was intense yet wonderful calmness prevailed all the way through. By a vote of nearly two to one, they decided to withdraw from a Union with the Methodists, which began about two years ago. They went into the Union with an almost unanimous vote. Now they are withdrawing from it, as stated above.

Mr. MacArthur is asked to supply the pulpit until other arrangements are made.

This action on the part of the Briercrest Presbyterians is unique, inasmuch as it is the first withdrawal since Church Union plans began in Canada. Evidently the exodus has begun.

ONE WHO WAS PRESENT.
Regina, Sask.

CHURCHES AND THE VOTE.

Now that the 22nd of December, the earliest day for commencing the vote on Church Union in congregations, draws near, the Peterboro Branch of the Presbyterian Church Association is taking steps to point out to the local Presbyterian congregations the importance of votes being held in every congregation. Approximately 70 per cent. of the membership and wealth of the Presbyterian Church in Canada is in Ontario and Quebec. The Legislature of these two provinces have not yet approved the Church Union legislation. Until they do there can be no legal transfer of property to the proposed new United Church. The votes of each congregation, therefore, will have an effect on the general situation by showing the strength of the opposition to Church Union. In connection with certain legal phases of the situation which have still to be tried out in the courts, a vote may serve to preserve to local congregations the ownership of their church properties.

What Law Provides.

Mr. R. J. Maclennan, the well-known lawyer in Toronto, points out that the Dominion Parliament has enacted that every congregation shall have an opportunity of deciding by a majority of votes of members present at a meeting not to enter the Unted Church, that the property of such non-concurring congregations shall remain unaffected by the act and that nothing in the act shall prevent such non-concurring congregations (when formerly Presbyterian) from constituting themselves a Presbyterian Church in Canada with an appropriate Presbyterian name. It is of importance, therefore, in every congregation where those who intend to remain Presbyterian are in the majority, that they should take an early vote and have it recorded.

"Parliament was not sure of its jurisdiction to place any congregational property in the United Church because the provinces have exclusive jurisdiction over "property and civil rights," and hence at the end of section 6 of the act it made the enactment subject always to the laws of any province, and again at the end in section 29, made the provisions of the whole act effective in so far only as parliament had jurisdiction to legislate.

"The Union leaders know that without an Ontario statute union in this province is impossible, because, as the common law stands no majority in any congregation can take the property from the smallest minority into the United Church. It is therefore very necessary that the anti-Unionsists in every congregation should see that a vote is taken, and even where they are in a minority, even a small minority, they should not lose heart, but should get their votes recorded.

"It should not be forgotten that in April, 1924, the committee of the Ontario Legislature was firm in its determination that the three historic churches were to be preserved as separate entities, with the right to each congregation by vote of its members to remain in its mother church and to keep its property, and they amended the bill accordingly. It is most unlikely that the Ontario Legislature will change its mind.

"The Legislature will again be asked to protect minorities, as was done in Scotland under the Imperial Act of 1905, and give property when any one-third of a congregation vote to remain Presbyterian. For the information of the Legislature it is important that all anti-unionists should have their opposition recorded whether they form the majority or the minority.

"Another reason for finding out by a vote, how the congregations stand, is, that the information will be necessary for the commission which is to determine how the colleges and general property shall be divided between the United Church and those who remain Presbyterian.

"Even in congregations where a majority favor union, on the basis that it will be successful, some unionists have come to understand that it is yet far from certain that the United Church will be a success. It has the handicap that a state-made church rests on a poor foundation. Better go slow, vote for the time being to defer entrance into union, and decide after 10th June what is best to do. Some congregations have determined to do this. Each congregation can settle the form of its own ballot. Once in, no matter if it be a failure, there is no getting out. The act, however, allows a deferred entrance.

PRESBYTERIAN.

THE WAYS OF ANTI-UNIONISTS.

Sir: Mr. Dutton's letter in reply to mine of the 6th inst., may please those who are like-minded to himself. Impartial judges would come to a different finding. If he is as innocent as he sets forth he was certainly the victim of a conspiracy of circumstances. Appearances are surely against him. Three elders of one session round up three elders of another and hold an "informal" meeting, which is opened and closed with prayer! It is supposed to be a friendly visit. Why should it happen just in the midst of a heated controversy? Can the three visiting elders divest themselves of their official standing at such a time?

Do they cease to be active members of anti-union society?

Clearly they combined business with pleasure during their visit.

Mr. Dutton pleads his rights as a private individual. The "wets" made the same plea during the recent campaign. He must know that our liberty is limited when we enter into combination with others in church or state. If a man joins the Presbyterian church he becomes subject to its government by sessions and higher courts. His personal freedom is circumscribed for the common good. As an individual Mr. Dutton may do as he pleases; as a member of St. Paul's session, he is bound by the law of the Blue Book.

Section 66 forbids meddling with other sessions. Mr. Dutton was not careful to observe that. If he wants to do the work of a free lance, let him retire from the eldership. Mr. Dutton, the elder, is not at liberty to do what Mr. Dutton, the man, may do. The elder must consider the good order and fellowship of the churches.

As a member of Presbytery Mr. Dutton is under law to that court. In this connection he bound himself (with others) not to interfere in the affairs of any congregation without the consent of minister and session. This pledge he also violated.

The second meeting (which was not a "private" visit) was arranged in spite of the fact that he knew that the congregation had planned for a meeting at which both sides should be heard.

Mr. Dutton answered to the Presbytery along the lines of his letter. He convinced nobody. I will not move for a vote of censure, as I might have done. He owes something to my generosity. He will not deny the manifest judgment of the Presbytery. The fact that the court re-affirmed its previous resolution as to non-interference with no dissenting voice but his own, is surely a clear verdict.

It is not kindly on the part of Mr. Dutton to insinuate that union ministers are pleased to keep their flocks in ignorance. It is peculiarly unkind in view of the fact that many ministers hesitated to introduce the subject; from the noblest of motives, being unwilling to divide the flock, seeking peace, they are blamed for wilfully encouraging ignorance.

It is a shameful injustice. Once again we learn the lesson that "Peace at any price" is no prize.

Ministers are privileged in this matter of church union. It is their principal duty to inform their people as to the findings of the church courts and to explain the same. But such is the atmosphere engendered by strife that the minister is regarded as a partizan. How can that be so long as he is loyal to his church?

He is the servant of the church as a whole, not merely of the local congregation. So long as he is a minister of the Presbyterian Church, he ought to be loyal to its courts. If he is obedient to constituted authority he is no partisan. To break with constituted authority is to favor lawlessness and anarchy. At the eleventh hour so many ministers have found the atmosphere changed, and peaceful discussion rendered impossible by the intrusion of third parties. We have nothing to fear from the truth, but, in the language of Paul, it may be "handled deceitfully." Let it be "rightly divided," and all will share the blessing.

These are difficult times and all men should feel themselves bound by the law of honour, not to make it more hard for their fellows who are as well-meaning as themselves.

Mr. Dutton and myself will remain good friends, I am sure. But friendship must be based on absolute sincerity. I had hoped that he would offer a frank expression of regret that he had "got in wrong." That was due to himself and to me. The incident would then have closed with mutual respect, and no hurt feelings.

TWENTY-ROUND CONTEST.

LONDON, Dec. 16. — (Canadian Press).—In a twenty-round contest at the National Sporting Club here last night for the featherweight championship of Great Britain, George McKenzie, of Leith, Scotland, successfully defended his title against Harry Leach, of Doncaster, England, winning a good battle on points.

MILK TEST AT BOARD HEALTH

Several Vendors Cautioned —Board Proceeds Against Delinquents in Sewer Connections.

ISSUE NEW ORDERS.

At this mornings meeting of the Board of Health a report on the milk test was presented, showing the milk on the whole, to be good.

Three samples were under the three per cent. butter fat required by by-law and some were recorded dirty. One sample was low in butter fat and was also marked 'dirty.'

The delinquent vendors will be warned by letter from the board that the conditions must be remedied.

Garbage Collection.

Mr. Lynch called the Board's attention to the placing of garbage from restaurants on the street, and expressed the opinion that garbage should be collected oftener in the centre of the city. The matter will be taken up before next summer.

The placing of fruit and fish on the sidewalks was also remarked on. Merchants, it was said, have no right to the sidewalks.

Sanitary Inspector Charles Stapleton urged the enforcing of the regulation that requires citizens to have proper garbage pails.

Will Take Action.

Persons who have been notified by the Board of Health to connect their premises with the sewer, and have not done so, will be prosecuted. This resolution was adopted, on motion of Mayor Turner and Mr. Lynch.

The secretary was instructed to ascertain the names from the records, and lay informations against them in the police court.

Several new notifications were ordered, the connections to be made before April 1st, 1925.

SIX PERSONS ARE LOST IN A FIRE

Brick Tenament In New York Destroyed By Fire To-day.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(Canadian Press).—Six persons are known to have perished in a fire which swept through a brick tenement house off Upper Fifth Avenue early to-day. The bodies were recovered. At least three other persons were seriously burned by flames which drove scores of families into the street. Five of the dead were women, who had been trapped on the upper floors. The bravery of a 19-year-old youth, Fred. Nugent, saved one family. Awakened by smoke, he carried his mother to the street, then dashed through smoke and flames and carried two sisters out, one at a time. Again he entered to rescue his uncle, Edward Russell, who had been weakened by long illness, but was driven back by the flames. He was rushed to the hospital with his mother and sisters, all suffering from burns. Meantime firemen sought to rescue Russell by dropping a rope to his window from a higher building adjoining. The aged man clutched the rope, but his grip gave way and he fell five storeys to his death. Most of the occupants in the upper floors came down by fire escapes and firemen's ladders.

SECRET OF LAZINESS

Glands and Moral Character.

A disinclination to hard work may not be due to inherent laziness but to imperfect glands, according to a theory advanced by Mr. Clement Jeffery to the "Practical Psychology Club of London."

Mr. Jeffrey said many children were punished for being lazy and indifferent when the fault lay in their physical nature. Imperfect glands made work an ordeal instead of a pleasure.

The adrenal glands, which sat like a cap on the kidneys, determined in large measure whether the individual would become brave or cowardly. "Indeed," said Mr. Jeffrey, "the chemistry of the blood and the moral life are intimately related."

The best way of counteracting glandular deficiency, the lecturer added, was persistent obedience to the laws of hygiene. Wholesome food, particularly whole wheat bread in place of white, purer air and more sunshine were all factors which improved the general health as well as the glands.

PICTURE OF BEAUTY DESCRIBES THE FILM

"Let Not Man Put Asunder," the J. Stuart Blackton production adapted from Basil King's famous novel of the same name, will be the attraction at the Regent Theatre tonight. This is the most sensational, emotional exposition of the pitfalls of marriage and divorce that ever has been presented on the screen. The theme of love misguided provides one of the most gripping, human, heart-touching stories ever offered motion picture lovers. It is a ringing indictment of divorce and a stirring appeal to men and women who contemplate marriage, and those who are married, to abandon the follies of modern life wherein lies the peril of discontent.

It is a picture of beauty; the sets are lavish and there is an atmosphere of luxury that places the picture far in advance of any recently shown here. It breathes wealth and society, yet possesses the element of greatness in drama, human characters who live and suffer and are regenerated through the supreme sacrifice.

Pauline Frederick and Lou Tellegen, two of the greatest emotional players on the screen, have the leading roles and are supported by Leslie Austen, Helena D'Algy and an all-star cast of players.

AT THE ROYAL.

"WELCOME STRANGER" IS A KNOCKOUT ON THE SCREEN.

What is known in the vernacular of the show business as a "knock-out" took place at the Royal Theatre last night where 'Welcome Stranger' was given its initial presentation to local audiences.

With as fine a cast as we have seen in a picture in a blue moon, a story that effervesces with clean-cut comedy, real honest-to-goodness characters that you meet in every-day life, and a plot that sustains interest throughout, "Welcome Stranger" is just what its title implies. It's certainly welcome in these days of drab sexy plays and forced humor. It's entertainment plus and leaves a good taste in the show palate after the final fadeout.

The chief character in "Welcome Stranger" is a witty and philanthropic Jew who, in attempting to "break in" to the business life of a narrow-minded New England town, encounters the "cold shoulder" and a select bunch of "rassberries" for his pains.

Through the good offices of a "real fellow" in the town, and the real fellow's girl, Isadore Solomon promotes the ideas of an unappreciated inventor-genius, corrals the water-power of a falls and lights up the town with a modern electric light plant, and generally booms the prosperity in the community.

If there is a finer piece of character portrayal than that of "Isadore Solomon" by Dore Davidson, we have not seen it on the screen. Wherever Solomon is, there is genuine "human" interest.

Florence Vidor is charming as Mary Clark, the girl who colleagues with him in his projects. In fact, the whole cast is excellent, including some of the finest actors on the screen. Lloyd Hughes, Virginia Brown Faire, Noah Beery, Robert Edeson, William V. Mong, Otis Harlan, Fred J. Butler and Pat Hartigan complete as notable an aggregation of players as we have seen together this season.

You will surely have missed an evening of excellent entertainment if you fail to see "Welcome Stranger."

And then for good measure. Bennie Leonard, the world's lightweight champion, in a "Flying Fists" episode. Leonard has a pleasing personality, and these short subjects certainly contain a punch with plenty of clever comedy.

An outstanding feature of last night's performance was the excellent music by the new six-piece orchestra, under the direction of Mrs. Foster, which left nothing to be desired in rounding out a pleasant evening's entertainment.

HOCKEY RETURNS AT ROYAL.

The returns of the Peterboro-Parkdale hockey match to-night will be announced at the Royal as fast as they come in over the wire. This will also apply to all outside and local games.

AT THE CAPITOL.

Anyone who remembers reading "The Salamander," Owen Johnson's novel, published in pre-war days, and the furore it caused at that time, can see the screen version of the story at the Capitol Theatre tonight for the last time. The term "gold digger" has replaced that of the "salamander." The author's idea was to portray in his novel the type of girl who was a sort of salamander, able to go through fire unsinged. Dodo Baxter was the heroine. Her method was to meet wealthy men who were looking for amusement, "string them along," and obtain from them money and presents and jewels while giving nothing in return. The book depicts her as coming victorious through all sorts of adventures. When a play from the novel was produced in New York city some time later, it was ridiculed and driven from the boards.

The screen version, in "The Enemy Sex," a James Cruze production, with all the artistic adjuncts with which this producer surrounds his creations, is interesting, if somewhat unreal. Betty Compson carries its artificial atmosphere with her superb acting. She dominates the stage at all times and makes the audience forget the exotic narrative.

A real novelty, that induces plenty of laughs and thrills in the watchers, is the new series of Plastigrams which may be seen at the Capitol to-night also. These curious third-dimension effects are almost startlingly realistic. There were plenty of shrieks from the audience last night as the gentleman on the stage aimed a baseball at each individual's head, and the lariat-thrower, with his curving rope that comes within an ace of noosing one's head was greeted with wholesome respect. The gentleman who fishes and the actor with the elongated nose are also peculiar characterizations that arouse merriment and surprise. These unique Plastigrams are well worth seeing. They represent an entirtly new departure in the mechanism of the silver sheet. The time may come when patrons of the "jumping flickers" can metaphorically reach out a hand and grab the departing villain and join in the final embrace of the hero and heroine.

A Mack Sennett comedy, "Should Landlords Live," rounds out an exceptionally good programme with plenty of laughs in the unfolding of the adventures of the hick who journeys to New York and essays the collection of rents in an up-to-date apartment house.

A THIN CHRISTMAS FOR FORMER KAISER

Finds it Hard to Live on Twelve Thousand Dollars a Month.

BERLIN, Dec. 16—(United Press)—Former Kaiser Wilhelm is entering upon a thin Christmas. His Imperial Majesty will not be able to send any Christmas presents this year, according to his associates.

The Imperial Exchequer is low. Prussia pays Wilhelm only 12,000 dollars a month, it was explained, and Wilhelm's family, official and otherwise, numbers forty persons. The monthly pension is barely sufficient to meet the demands of the necessities.

Even the birthday of Princess Hermine, the Kaiser's second wife, which falls on the day before Christmas, will be observed with only modest expenditure.

Princess Hermine's children, of which there are several, are wondering whether the Imperial poverty renders stocking-hanging a useless bother. They hope not.

Mrs. Oliver Garneau is Recovering From Effects of Recent Accident.

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 16.—Rev. E. O. Seymour returned to his congregation Sunday and took charge of the services after several weeks' absence.

Mrs. Oliver Garneau, who was injured in an accident last week, is making a good recovery, but nursing a very painful ankle, which was badly sprained at the time. Her many friends hope to see her around as soon as health permits.

Saturday night and Sunday were the coldest of the season, accompanied by high winds and some light snow falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rose and granddaughter, Grace Lewis, of "Ye Olde Mill," leave Sunday to spend Christmas with their sons in Toronto. Miss Ethel Rose expects to leave later, but all are returning to spend the rest of the winter here after the holidays.

Society

The Saskatoon "Daily Star" of recent issue carries a cut of Sir Frederick W. G. Haultain, of Regina, Chief Justice of the Appeal Court of Saskatchewan, who on November 25th of this year attained his sixty-seventh birthday. "Sir Frederick", says the text, "bears a distinguished reputation as a jurist and for his public services as premier of the old Territorial legislature, in which office he conducted the negotiations which resulted in Saskatchewan attaining provincial rank in 1905."

Sir Frederick Haultain, who came from England to Canada as a boy, received a portion of his early education at Peterboro's Collegiate Institute.

On Monday evening, Knox church concluded its fourteenth anniversary celebration with a splendid dinner, followed by an enjoyable musical programme. At eight o'clock Mr. Malcolm Clark took the chair, and presided throughout the evening in his usual pleasing manner.

CONTROVERSY OVER POINT OF DIVIDEND

"Has No Business to Serve the Public," Drury Declares —Patrons Have No Title to Profits.

TURNED THE CORNER.

Livestock, Toronto Creamery and Egg Circle All Made Money.

TORONTO, Dec. 17. — (Canadian Press).—Having cut out the unprofitable branches of its service the United Farmers' Co-operative Company of Ontario this year has a surplus as shown from the annual reports submitted at the annual meeting here Tuesday. The trading account of the company, taking everything into consideration, shows a net profit of $74,198. The livestock selling branch and the Toronto Creamery operated by the U.F.O. in the city of Toronto are largely responsible for the profits. It would also seem from criticism at the meeting that the company is underestimating its assets in real estate and commodity values in the city of Toronto, and other big market centres in which the company trades.

The main difference of opinion in the meeting came yesterday noon in discussion of the purely domestic affairs of the company when the question of where the excess profits of the Toronto Creamery owned and operated by the U.F.O. Co-operative should go—to those supplying the cream or the shareholders of the U.F.O. who are really those who supplied the original capital for the operation of the creamery. This developed into the greater question of membership of the United Farmers. Into the discussion were brought both Former Premier E. C. Drury and J. J. Morrison, the general secretary and chieftain of the U.F.O. They agreed, although in a different manner, that the members of the United Farmer Co-operative should be the men to benefit and not the man who stood outside willing to take the advantage but not the responsibility of the shareholder.

Belongs to Investors.

Mr. Drury maintained that the first duty of the "co-operator" was not to the general public but to those who belonged to him in the same business.

Mr. Morrison's argument was that one neighbor who loved the U.F.O. and paid his membership, bought his stock in the co-operative company and sent his commodity to the U.F.O. central offices for sale was no better than his non-member neighbor who marketed through the U.F.O. at the same prices, if the former was not getting a dividend from the accumulated sales of his organization. Both agreed that the stockholder in the U.F.O. co-operative should get the benefit of final dividends.

The question arose over the complaint of J. A. McPeters, manager of the U.F.O. Toronto Creamery. Taking a line of argument on what co-operation really means, he maintained that the creamery paying out profits should have paid the surplus to the patrons (those supplying cream) rather than to the U.F.O. members who supplied the capital for the creamery. The directors of the U.F.O. co-operative refused to accept this suggestion of payment on advice of their counsel, Gordon

ELECTION RUMORS SMITH TOWNSHIP

J. J. Northey and Herbert Resboro Named as Possible Contestants in Council.

Rumors of election prospects in Smith township name several men who have been importuned time and again to take office, and it is felt by many that through their backwardness the township is being deprived of the guiding ability of able men. The present council, which was elected by acclamation last year, is composed of Reeve Bert Middleton, Deputy Reeev W .Brown, and Councillors George Simpson, A. Mann and D. H. Couns.

In this community, as in any other, the coming forward of other aspirants for office is regarded as a sign of healthy public interest. For years, J. J. Northey, who lives on twelfth concession, has been approached to contest the election to represent the middle and northern portions of the township, and Herbert Resboro, living on the seventh concession, has been approached with the same object. Both men have been successful in their own businesses, and should they decide to run would have considerable support.

BRITISH WATCH "RED" VISITORS

Only 340 Russians Admitted Since MacDonald Government's Treaty—No Deportations.

VOTE ON HOUSING.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—The Labor amendment to the King's address expressing regret at the Conservative Government's attitude on the housing problem was defeated in the House of Commons last evening. 356 to 136.

The situation in Albania was brought up by Noel Buxton. He inquired regarding raids by armed bands from Jugo-Slavia into Albania.

Ronald McNeill, under secretary of the foreign affairs office, informed the house that the British Minister at Belgrade had been instructed to warn the Government of Jugo-Slavia of the threatened dangers of the situation. Mr. Buxton then asked if the government would call the attention of the league of Nations to the possible consequences of the Albanian trouble, but Mr. McNeill said he required notice of that question.

The Bolsheviki danger was prominent in the debate in the House of Lords, where several questions were asked about the presence in England of Russians, whose activities might be a potential danger to the Empire.

Lord Curzon, lord president of the council, replied that since the conclusion of the Anglo-Russian trade agreement only 340 Russians had been admitted on more or less official business; in addition there were about five hundred private business men and students. In all, only four enjoyed diplomatic immunity. Thus far, he added, no deportations of these visa holders, had been found necessary and all precautions had been taken against Bolshevik propaganda.

Albanian Trouble.

Ronald McNeill, said he understood from Albanian sources that partisans of the former Albanian Government had taken refuge since the last revolution, in Jugo-Slavia and had crossed the frontier December 13, having been joined by certain tribes in Northern Albania.

Mr. McNeill added that the British minister at Belgrade had been instructed to warn the Jugo Slavian Government of the dangers of this situation and that N. Pachitch, Jugo Slav Premier had sent orders to the frontier authorities that any preparations for an invasion would not be countenanced. The Albanian and Bulgarian Governments, it was said, also have been requested by Great Britain to prevent any activities in view of the delicacy of the ggeneral situation.

SERGEANT BOND ONLY A VISITOR WOMAN AVERRED

A VERBAL COMBAT.

Police Sergeant Frequently Seen Calling — Husband Separated From Wife.

MONTREAL, Dec. 17.—A piquant touch was injected into the enquiry into Montreal police affairs, now being conducted by Mr. Justice Coderre, Tuesday afternoon, when Arthur Brossard, K.C., one of the Counsel for the petitioners, was taken up in verbal combat by Mrs. Flore Gadoury, a defence witness. The ladys' repartee kept the court room in an uproar which continued until she flounced triumphantly from the box with the spirit of one who had gained a hard-fought battle.

Mrs. Gadboury had been called to rebut testimony previously given that she kept a disorderly house and that Sergeant Frank Bond, of the Municipal Garage, was a frequent visitor to her place. This allegation had been made last week by one of Mrs. Gadbourys' neighbours, Armand Desrosiers.

Mrs. Gadoury denied that her residence was a resort and also denies that Bond had alienated her affections from her husband. At this point Mr. Justice Coderre produced a letter from the woman's husband which made this allegation against Bond. The husband, said the court, would be subpoenaed on Wednesday "then we will have the full story".

Left Her Husband

Witness said that she had left her husband three times before, she ever met Bond. The latter had gone to her house at various times, but he had no clothing there and had never changed his clothes in the house. This was in refutation of the statement previously made that Bond had been seen to enter the house in uniform and emerge in civilian clothes.

Mr. Brossard:— "He was at your place very often?"

Witness "Look at your paper you have there—it will tell you."

Mr. Brossard: "My paper says six times a week." (Laughter).

Witness: "All right." (Laughter.)

By Mr. Gagnon. "Your husband wrote that paper?"

Witness: "Well, if my husband wrote it, it isn't worth much."

Mr. Brossard: "There was music in your house?"

Witness: "Well, I have a gramaphone — when you have a gramaphone it's to be used, you know."

"You played it every night?"

"Not always. I get tired winding it—I'm a little fat, you know." (Laughter.)

Mr. Brossard adopted new tactics Raising his voice, he asked: "Now, under oath, is it not true you were keeping a disorderly house?"

"Never," said witness indignantly, "do you think I've come here to be insulted by you?"

"That information I have in my papers."

"Then, Mr. Brossard, your papers have respectfully lied." (Laughter.)

Regarding a visit Mrs. Gaboury had made to the theatre, Mr. Brossard wanted to know with whom she had gone.

"Did you go with Sergeant Bond?"

"No."

"With whom, then?"

"It's none of your business, Mr. Brossard."

Not Life Story

Counsel appealed to the court to compel the witness to answer, but the Court declared that witness had already denied going with Sergeant Bond

"I'm not her to tell the story of my life. I'm here for the police enquiry," witness answered.

"You," shouted Mr. Brossard, "have not the right to do what you are doing in that house?"

"Is that so? Were you paying the rent?" queried Mrs. Gadoury calmly. The Court room rocked with laughter.

One of Mrs. Gadoury's final sallies was that she was "as respectable as you can ever be, Mr. Brossard."

Earlier evidence in the enquiry dealt with the allegation by a woman who had previously declared that she had gone to No. 4 Station to give $50 to Captain Sauve showed that his client at the time indicated nothing whatever to do with No. 4 station, but witness adhered to her testimony.

TYPHOID IN NEW YORK.

Total of 380 Cases Now Under Observation in the City.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Canadian Press). — Thirty-one new typhoid fever cases reported to the Health Department Tuesday brought to 380 the number of typhoid patients now under observation throughout the city. Only three cases were reported on the same day last year, but Health Commissioner Monaghan said he was not unduly alarmed because many physicians did not report on Sunday, and Monday's reports would not reach the department until Tuesday.

NINE BILLION DOLLAR CROPS

United Sttaes' Harvest Worth Nearly Billion More Than Last Year.

CORN THE LEADER.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.— This year's harvest of important farm crops, the highest priced in five years though not the greatest in volume of products, was valued at $9,479,902,000 Tuesday by the Department of Agriculture.

Better prices than last year placed the value $753,013,000 higher than last year when the total, as revised was $8,726,889,000 and $1,663,882,000 higher than in 1922 when they aggregated $7,816,020,000.

The combined acreage of the principal farm crops was smaller this year than last, there having been a total of 355,210,400 acres as compared with 355,594,730 in 1923.

Corn Season Bad

Both the spring and winter wheat crops were extremely satisfactory but corn had an unfavorable season. Cotton, planted late, was affected by drought to some extent but a fair crop was produced. A large crop of potatoes on a smaller acreage than in recent years resulted from unusually favorable weather.

Corn maintained its rank as king of crops, and although production was 600,000,000 bushels less than last year, its value was $188,000,000 more than the 1923 crop. The total value of corn was placed at $2,405,468,000. Cotton ranked second with a total value of $1,683,274,000 of which $1,487,225,000 was the value of lint and $196,049,000 the value of seed. Hay, with a total value for tame and wild of $1,467,648,000, was third crop in point of income. Wheat ranked fourth with a total value for spring and winter of $1,136,596,000.

NAMES

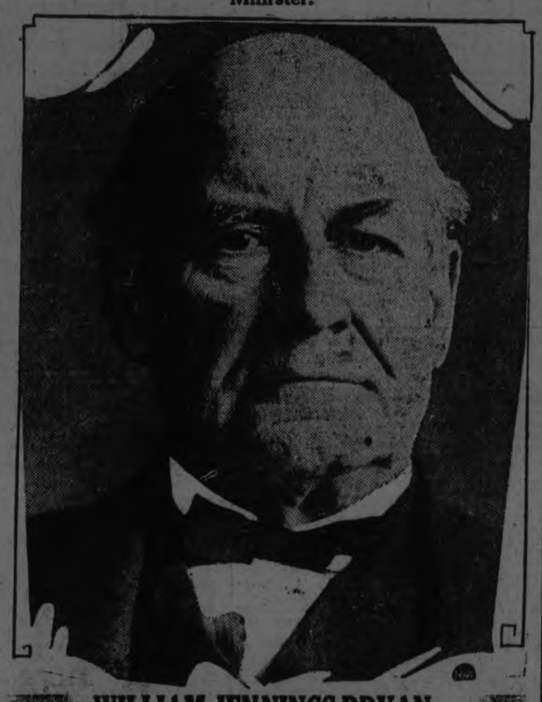
On their beautifully carved columns, tourists 3500 years ago wrote their names and date, much after the modern fashion. Human nature never changes. The ancient, leaving his mark on a stone column, lives today in the traveler with his defacing pencil.

WHY BE LATE?

Marcel Moreau, French inventor of the Sun Ray Furnace which makes jewels from powders, wants his clock with him when he travels. So he made one two feet in diameter, which packs away in the box he is holding. It weighs one pound, and is so nicely balanced that a dollar watch in the centre runs it.

BRYAN'S VIEWS ON HIGHT SLAYING

Prominent Protagonist of Orthodoxy Says a Man Does Not Cease Being a Man When He Becomes a Minister.



WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

CHICAGO, Dec. 16. — William Jennings Bryan told his views on the Hight murder in an address to the students of the McCormick Theological seminary, following close upon his resolution urging a church fight on suicide, homicide and preventable accident adopted by the National Presbyterian conference.

"A man does not cease being a man when he becomes a minister," he said. He was endorsing the statement of Dr. Edward C. Macartney, here presiding over the general assembly, who appeared before him on the programme.

Did Not Follow Teaching.

"The crimes with which the defendant is charged would never have been accomplished had the perpetrator followed the teaching of Christ against the beginning of sin. Christ taught the evil desire, as well as the overt act, as crime, and warned against it."

Sin is the great blackmailer, insisted Mr. Bryan. "Secret sin silences voices that ought to be pleading for righteousness," he said.

"Christ offers the remedy for the very sin of poisoning and influencing another to poison for which a man is being tried in the southern part of this state to-day," he continuel. "He warns against the beginning of evil. He goes farther than any other preacher. He says: When a man lusts after a woman in his heart he has already sinned before committing the overt act."

Unbelief, the love of popularity and the menace of agnosticism were called some of the adversaries of the ministry by Dr. Macartney in his address. Love of popularity, he said, "tempts men to dilute the gospel and to delete the Bible until the grand and peculiar accents of the Christian religion are entirely lost and the voice of the preacher becomes only a lovely sound."

Sees Peril of Agnosticism.

Agnosticism he called the great peril of the Christian church to-day, when "believers are ridiculed as ignorant and fanatic whereas men who are avowed agnostics as to certain great New Testament facts and doctrines are among the most praised and eagerly sought after of Christian teachers and writers and preachers."

Present-day religion is "non-creative," he averred.

"Men are beginning to realize that back of the words 'progressive revelation,' 'dynamic Christianity,' 'social vision' and kindred favorite terms of present day teaching and preaching there is very little of the bread and water of eternal life."

BALKAN UNREST.

Armed Bands of Revolutionaries Disturb Albania.

ROME, Dec. 17. — (Canadian Press).—The gravity of the situation in Albania is not only emphasized by official reports to the Italian government, but is admitted by the Albanian legation here. It is generally believed that the regime of Premier Fan S. Noli is seriously threatened.

It is reported that numerous bands well equipped and armed with bombs, machine-guns and cannon are participating in a revolutionary movement in Northern Albania. These bands, it is said, are composed of Serbians, Montenegrins, Russians, Bulgarians, Jugo-Slavians and native Albanian elements.

It is generally believed that the movement is inspired by partisans of Ahmed Zogu, former Albanian Premier.

COMBAT SMUGGLING.

Government to Co-operate With Manufacturers—Business Injured.

OTTAWA. Dec. 17.—(By Canadian Press).—The evils of smuggling and the extent to which the underground method of bringing manufactured goods into Canada is injuring Canadian business were drawn to the attention of the Government Tuesday afternoon by a delegation, which saw Premier King and members of the cabinet. The delegation was accorded a lengthy interview, in private. At the conclusion, the Prime Minister merely stated that the Government had been asked to co-operate with the private organization of the Canadian manufacturers in the suppression of smuggling. The Government had promised the fullest co-operation, he said.

Members of the delegation would say nothing, beyond stating that the discussion had been "very satisfactory."

CONFESSION OF ELSIE SWEETIN IS THROWN OUT

Judge Decides It Was Signed Under Duress and in Violation of Her Rights.

DEFENSE VICTORY.

Woman's Lawyers Win Two Days' Struggle to Prevent Admission of Document.

MOUNT VERNON, Ills., Dec. 17.—The confession of Elsie Sweetin, in which she admitted poisoning her husband, Wilford, was ruled out as testimony in the case Tuesday by Judge J. C. Kern, who decided Mrs. Sweetin signed the confession under duress and that her constitutional rights had been violated in obtaining th document.

It was a victory for Mrs. Sweetin's attorneys—not for the complete defense—as she and Lawrence Hight, indicted with her, are fighting separate battles for their freedom. For two days Mrs. Sweetin's attorneys have tried to block every move of the state to present the confession.

Twice taking the witness stand on Monday, the woman called Hight "a beast," and declared she made one confession because he told her that unless she did they would both be in the hands of "the mob" within a few hours and be hanged from a tree of telegraph post.

The State had introduced witnesses to show that the confession had not been obtained under duress and called two women reporters to testify that she confessed orally to them.

"Third Degree."

Mrs. Sweeting told of a midnight to early morning inquisition in the jail in which she said she was "horribly treated" by newspaper men. Then, she said, she was confronted by Hight while Prosecutor Frank G. Thompson, officers and others listened through a keyhole and through a letter slot in the door while she was left alone with Hight.

" 'I've told them that you did kill your husband and you may as well say you did,' she testified the minister said.

"I told him I did not. I told it to him over and over again. He kept telling me that they all thought I did and I better say I did.

"Finally he said, 'Well, if you don't do it, it won't be but a few hours when we will both be killed.'

Threat of Mob.

"He told me over and over again about the mob. He said it was forming. One of the reporters had said to me, 'You ought to be strung up without a trial and you may yet be.' So I believed Hight when he told it so often and, finally I said I would say that I did. He agreed if I would he would take the blame where it belonged, on him when things quieted down and the danger of the mob was past."

The State's attorney held up a typewritten confession.

"This," he said, "is the paper that Mr. Thompson signed. Did you sign it?"

"Yes, sir, I did."

"Was it read to you?"

"No, it was not."

"Was anything said about your children?"

"Hight said I would never see them if I did not say that I killed Wilford! that I would be taken out and hanged."

CANCER.

Cancer remains a baffling mystery. Experts tell the American College of Surgeons: Their researches indicate that there is no universal cancer germ, but rather a variety of parasites that cause this dread malady. A cure for one might not affect other groups.

Imaginative ancients regarded cancer as a monster that attaches itself to the body. Surgery now finds, in cancers, what look like liver, lung and kidney cells.

75 MEMBERS OF CANADIAN CLUB HEAR E. A. DALE

Interesting Address Given on "What to Read and How to Read It."

READING DECLINES.

Greeks Excel in Forms of Drama and Oratory, Says Speaker.

"The Vanishing Art of Reading Aloud; What to Read and How to Read It," was the title of an interesting address delivered to about seventy-five members of the Women's Canadian Club, gathered in the hall of the Public Library yesterday afternoon, to hear the views on this subject of Professor E. A. Dale, M.A., Oxon., a member of the languages department of the teaching staff of Toronto University. Miss A. M. Lancaster presided. At the conclusion of the address, a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Mrs. W. R. Morris and seconded by Mrs. R. R. Hall.

Referring in complimentary terms to the high mental calibre of Ontario students, the professor said; "What they lack is not brains, but a certain familiarity with literature," ascribing this lack to the birth of so many of them in country districts where books are not easy to get, also to the fact that in many of their homes there was little leisure, and that little was not spent in the consideration of literature.

"The main reason for the decline in the art of reading aloud is the decline in the corporate family interest in reading," said the speaker, declaring that when books were scarce, they were more valued. The competition of the magazine in the world of reading had resulted in the loss of an interest in books. "With many people, the only good book they see is the Bible, and even with that, the reading of the Bible has fallen into disuse as a family practice." Prof. Dale recommended the purchase of Bibles printed with the advantages to the reader of good spacing and margins and a reasonable supply of notes to make the hard places clear.

"The history of reading has been one of reading aloud, rather than of silent literature." The speaker reminded his hearers of the pictures of animals of the chase found in the home caverns of primitive peoples, and of the strong possibility that stories of such exploits of the chase were told around the camp-fires, even in those remote times.

In ancient ages, literature was essentially of the spoken variety. In ancient Greece, the poems of Homer, for instance, "were things to be heard, to be recited with passion and vigor by one who was half an actor and half a reciter." At the great Olympic games there were contests in music and in spoken history as well as in athletics. "The great forms in which the Greeks excelled were those of drama and oratory."

The Greek language largely abounds in vowels. Demosthenes, acclaimed as one of the greatest of the Grecian orators, used open vowels to a great etxent. When he spoke, he always tried to arrange his words so that a word ending with a vowel should not be followed immediately by a word beginning with one. This ganing of the lips was considered an awkward and ungainly thing in an orator.

The Romans, who were considered to be a business-like and practical race, and always thought themselves of lesser proportion to the Greeks in the world of art, still regarded the writing of literature as a necessary part of the lives of their great men. It was customary for a man to write as he willed, then to invite his friends to come and listen to his compositions. Juvenal, speaking of the dog days in Rome, says of their many terrors, one of the worst was to hear the poets reciting their verses.

Prof. Dale, alluding sarcastically to the assertion made by a woman writer in the Toronto Star, at the conclusion of some advice to her women readers as to how to serve a large dinner, that conversation is now a lost art and that some form of entertainment should be furnished the guests at the end of their eating activities, in the way of music or card tricks, so that they might not be left to the void of their own mental efforts, spoke of the difference between such modern conditions and the so-called "benighted ages" of Rome, when the recitation of prose or poetry formed an adjunct to a banquet.

Saying that poetry unread "is just like music seen only in the score," the speaker recited, in pleasant, well-modulated tones. Bliss Carman's poem, addressing the Winged Victory of Samoth race at the Parisian Louvre. He said: "An appreciation of good literature is a very vital thing in our civilization. If our children come to maturity with a well-formed taste for good literature, accustomed to choosing the good and rejecting the bad, will that not be to the making of a great country? This is not merely a matter of dilletantism, but is an essential, that an appreciation of high ideals, of good thoughts and of sound thinking, should be inculcated in the youthful mind."

"It is a truism that the person who is finished with his life work in its greater sense, often comes to the close, exhausted and with no intellectual resources. Such a sad thing occurs to multitudes of people, but not to those who throughout their lives have taken an interest in good literature. Such as these can never be utterly alone and forsaken."

In choosing books to read aloud, consideration should be given to those that lend themselves to that purpose. "Some authors who have achieved a considerable vogue have never learned to express themselves harmoniously or beautifully, and have never mastered the great problem of the written word; to write in clear, simple and passionate style, and yet at the same time achieve beauty of expression."

The Bible and Shakespeare were recommended for reading aloud, also the classics, in Dickens, Scott and Thackeray, and of the recent writers, special mention was made of the works of Joseph Conrad and Thomas Hardy. Browning, whose special value lies in the fact that his meaning is not always obvious, thus affording a temptation to the reader to try and find out just what he does mean, and John Milton's "Paradise Lost," were also recommended, the speaker finishing his address with quotations from Milton's masterpiece, and the description of a moor taken from Thomas Hardy's "The Return of the Native."

TORONTO, December 17. — Reorganization of the Legal Inspection Branch of the Attorney-General's Department, was heraldad yesterday at the Parliament Buildings, in the announcement of the appointment of I. A. Humphries, lawyer, of Campbellford, to the position of Chief Inspection Officer.

Until recently the Attorney-General's Department has had an inspector of registry offices ,an inspector of division courts, and an inspector of magisterial and legal offices.

Reorganization will do away with overlapping.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Young People Held a Meeting—Real Estate Changes.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 17.—The young people of St. Andrew's church held a meeting on Monday evening. Mr. J D McEachern, president, in the chair.

After the singing of the first hymn, prayer was led by Mr. McIntosh, Sr., father of the pastor, Rev. C. F. McIntosh. The Scripture reading was under the leadership of Mr. John Storie.

Miss Hazel Atkinson then gave a reading, "The God of History." The topic for discussion for the evening was given by Mr. G. Stephens. The subject dealt with "How the vast Pacific has been made a means of communication between the Eastern Countries of Japan and China, and the Western Nations" The progress made by these peoples during the last few years and the problem of how this was to affect western countries was then pointed out to the young people. The vast population of these countries makes the question still more difficult

In the business discussion arrangements were made for the sending of various Christmas gifts by the society

The resignation of Mr. E. H. Greig, B.A., as educational vice-president, was accepted, but no one was appointed to fill the vacancy.

As this was the social evening for the month a period was given to games in which all took part with great enthusiasm. After the serving of lunch the meeting closed with the National Anthem. There will be no meeting of the young peoples' society next Monday night as the Sunday school Christmas entertainment is on that night.

The Young People's League of the Methodist Church was held on Monday night. The president, S. A. Maguire, presided. After the devotional part was finished. Mr. S. J. Abernethy gave a reading on "Smiles and Courtesy." Mr. Russell Abernethy gave an excellent topic on the sixth verse of the eighty-fifth Psalm: "Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?" This topic was enjoyed by every one present. The meeting next Monday is with drawn on account of the Mission Band concert being held in the Sunday School-room that night.

Mr. John L. Hay has purchased the north half of Lot 18 in the 8th Concession of Seymour from Mr. Howard Skillikorn. He takes possession on Thursday.

Mr. Skillikorn is taking in part payment the house owned by Mr. Hay in Campbellford on River Road, at the end of Queen Street.

Mr. Hay is having an auction sale of the livestock and farm implements on the said farm shortly.

On Tuesday since the above sale Mr. Harold Petherick bought this farm in the 8th Concession lately purchased by Mr. J. L. Hay from Mr. Howard Skillikorn. Mr. Petherick will take possession on Wednesday.

Mr. I. A. Humphries, Booth Street, spent a few days in Toronto this week. Mr. Humphries has been appointed to the position of chief inspection officer of the legal inspection branch of the Attorney-General's Department.

Wooler Man Killed When Crushed Beneath a Log

Died While Being Taken Out of the Woods—Was Seventy Years Old.

WOOLER, Dec. 17.—A fatal accident occurred on the farm of Mr. Philip Moran on Monday afternoon. Last winter a lot of logs had been cut for lumber, and all cull logs were left in the woods till at present, when Mr. Peter Whaley and sons were hired to cut them into wood, and in some manner a top log became loosened and rolled down, passing over Mr. Whaley.

He was at once removed from the woods and a doctor sent for, but he expired before reaching his home and before the doctor arrived.

Mr. Whaley was a man of about seventy years of age, and has run a small blacksmith shop for a number of years on the Wooler and Trenton Provincial Highway, near the top of the long grade three miles southeast of Wooler.

BOY DISCIPLINED.

Teacher Charged With Doing Bodily Harm to Pupil.

ORLAND, Dec. 17.— The trial held here in connection with Miss Harnden, who teaches Orland Public school, has created some disapproval against Magistrate Floyd's decision.

The charge was for illegally striking a young lad over the head with a heavy strap, doing bodily harm.

The only evidence allowed by the magistrate was given by Lloyd Reddon, who stated that she hit the boy by accident as he bent over to protect his hand.

It is understood that the boy's guardian will appeal from the judgment of the magistrate.

MISSIONARIES SAFE.

Chinese Troops Mutiny and Lost Business District of Kalgan.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Foreign missions and missionaries were reported safe in Kalgan after the troops of the fourth mobilized brigade, part of the command of the Governor-General of Chanar, had mutinied, in advices to the State Department Tuesday from Edwin F. Stanton, vice-consul at the Chinese city. The business district was looted. Charge Mayer of the American Legation at Peking informed the department that he had addressed a note to the Foreign Office, insisting that all possible protection to American life and property be given. The Foreign Office informed him that order had been restored after the looting had continued from last evening.

NO CHANGE WANTED.

People who are agitating for the police departments of Ontario cities to be handed over to elective police commissions should find in this sentence from a statement by former Crown Prosecutor Calder, after years of experience in law enforcement, something to make them wonder whether there is not a possibility that they are on the wrong track:

"I think the police force here suffers from the vice of being under the control of an elected body."

How anybody who has studied the revelations of the Montreal police probe can conscientiously strive to put Ontario police departments under a similar handicap and subject them to a similar menace is difficult to understand.

But there are still proposals to change the composition of the police commission, and it is to be hoped that they will be viewed in the light of what has been revealed in Montreal where it has been shown that aldermanic civic political patronage have been factors in demoralizing the police and in rendering difficult the enforcement of law and order.

THE TIME TO ACT.

Especially at periods when taxes must be paid, but to some extent at all times during the year, there is grumbling about the burden of municipal taxation, usually when it is too late to do anything about it.

If municipal taxpayers would only see that now before a new Council is elected and before the budget is planned is the time not only to think about taxes but to take some action as well, there would not be so much talk about civic apathy and lethargy.

When the tax bills are presented there is no use complaining.

If anything effective is to be done it must be now—within the next couple of months.

First, of course, by endeavouring to secure the candidature and election of men of the right calibre to give good service on the civic boards, and then by pressing for the pruning of municipal expenditures at the only time during the year when protests are of much avail, before the spending bodies have drawn up their budget for the twelve months.

So long as all the kicking is done afterward and not before the tax bills are issued it is useless to look for any real improvement.

Taxpayers must concern themselves first with the selection of the civic government, and secondly with the budget, if they really wish to better the conditions in regard to taxation.

MANY POWER USERS.

Interesting figures as to the extent to which the people of Canada are using electrical energy are given in a compilation by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, which shows that there are nearly a million domestic customers for the light and power companies of the Dominion, close to 50 per cent. of the people of Canada enjoying the benefits of electrifical supply.

This is, of course, a much larger percentage than prevails in most countries of the world, and it will be materially enlarged in the next few years, according to predictions.

Ontario people will be surprised to know that the Province has not the cheapest power in Canada.

That distinction falls to Quebec, where the net revenue per kilowatt hour sold in 1923 was .68 cent.

Ontario followed with .72 cent, and the average for the other Provinces was: Yukon, .93 cent; Manitoba, 1.06 cents; British Columbia, 1.08 cents; Alberta, 2.32 cents; New Brunswick, 3.58 cents; Saskatchewan, 4.43 cents, and Prince Edward Island, 8.67 cents, the average for Canada being .83 cent.

It should be understood, of course, that the nature of the primary power, the quantity of output and the purpose for which it is used are all factors entering into these averages.

ATTRACTING TOURISTS.

If there was any justification needed for the action of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce in urging upon the Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce the organization of a Provincial tourists' association, it is to be found in the statement of J. B. Harkin, the Commissioner of Canadian National Parks, who estimates that the total income from the tourist traffic left in Canada this year will exceed a total of $136,000,000, beating last year's figure.

Tourist traffic indeed occupies third place in comparison with the leading Canadian exports for 1923, as shown in the following table:

Agricultural	$407,760,000
Wood	228,756,205
Tourist traffic	136,000,000
Animals	135,000,000
Minerals	123,142,000

Of the total left by tourists last year Ontario and Quebec each secured $30,000,000, while British Columbia succeeded in attracting a traffic of $36,000,000.

There is no reason why Ontario cannot double the amount by the judicious use of publicity by such an organization as urged by the local Chamber of Commerce.

This Province has a wealth of scenic charm, is unsurpassed as a summer playground by any other portion of the Dominion and, in addition, it is easily accessible to millions of residents of the United States, many of whom have never yet made the trip across the border.

A tourist association on a Provincial-wide basis and in the hands of capable and efficient officers should be able to produce immediate results.

A CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

(Article III.)

The chief remedy for Canada's present economic problems lies in the building up of permanent population to the point at which it could reasonably support present systems of government and transportation, carry the burden of war and other debt and provide a variety of vocational interest, opportunity and employment.

Heavy taxes, high freight rates, C.N.R. deficits, high cost of manufacturing and distribution, drift of population to United States, sectional differences, isolation of settlement and many other national problems arise in large measure from the scattering of 9,000,000 people over an area that could and should sustain many times that number. Unquestionably the financial cost of the war and certain mistakes in development policies are among other contributing factors. But the burden of these also would be immeasurably lightened if equably distributed over two or three times our present population.

It was to provide for such an increase in population that present systems of government and railways were established. This was to be Canada's century even as the previous one had been that of United States. But immigration, after reaching in 1913 a high mark of 402 432 came to a sudden stop when the war began. Now a people of 9,000,000 have on their hands a national plant that was expanded to its present proportions in anticipation of a population of between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000. To the excessive overhead thus created has been added the financial burden of the war. The main solution to such a situation is the promotion of selected immigration and colonization on a large scale.

* * * *

Quite apart from our own needs there are several recent developments which combine to make the present an opportune time for launching a vigorous immigration and colonization policy.

First among these may be mentioned recent increases in the prices of grains with a resultant improvement in present position and prospects of those already engaged in agriculture in Canada.

In the United Kingdom the growth of unemployment has led many to contemplate emigration and the state to offer financial aid in emigration to overseas dominions.

In continental Europe the Great War and its aftermath have caused a new turning of eyes to the democracies of this continent.

United States, having attained a population of 112,000,000, has fixed quotas of maximum immigration from various countries which in many cases represent but a small proportion of actual immigration during recent years.

Even among those already located in United States forces favoring emigration to Canada are at work. Comparisons between gricultural production costs in United States and Canada recently made by the Tariff Commission of the former country are very favorable to Canada. They were used extensively in the recent election campaign there and have made a deep impression upon farmers south of the line.

Canada is a good name in the United Kingdom, in continental Europe and in United States and large results would accrue from an aggressive immigration and colonization policy launched at this time.

* * * *

But for the present immigration and colonization should be confined to agriculturalists and others willing to go on the land and likely to make a success there. It would be useless to encourage immigration to our cities until the more intensive settlement of our land and the development of manufacturing and trade have created a larger measure of industrial and clerical employment. This would follow in due course and the scope of the immigration program could then be extended accordingly.

Special effort should be made to secure immigration in the classes mentioned from the United Kingdom and from those of British stock in the United States. This may be stated without reflection in any degree upon those from other countries or of other races who have made good in Canada.

Colonization should be an important feature of the new immigration policy. Those who come to this country should be aided in securing suitable locations, in learning Canadian methods of agricuiture and marketing, in learning the basis and development of Canadian institutions and generally in becoming assimilated in our national life.

Canada must not be made a stepping stone for immigration to another country. There has been too much of this in the past. Records compiled in 1915 showed that even up to that time 262,865 homesteads and pre-emptions or 39.7 per cent. of the total filed on had been cancelled. Of the entries during the period from 1900 to 1909 as many as 49 per cent. had been cancelled by 1915. Both percentages have been considerably increased since 1915, but later figures are not available.

Some misfits and some mistakes in location there will be under any policy, but to reduce these to the minimum the new policy should include some measure of selection in the country of origin, location in groups on selected land and assistance and supervision by field men after location.

Many desirable settlers will require financial aid in purchase of livestock and equipment. This should be provided under conditions that will reduce as far as possible the financial risk and the danger of paternalism.

Without a substantial increase in land settlement there is no prospect of relief from an annual defict of around $50,000,000 on our nationally-owned railway system. It would be good business to invest, if necessary, one-third or even one-half of that amount for a few years in colonization administration and loss in loans if that would bring about its gradual reduction and ultimate elimination and at the same time relieve the pressure all along the line.

Assuming the willingness to inaugurate an aggressive immigration and colonization policy, the actual administration of it should be entrusted to an independent commission composed of some of the biggest men in the country who would undertake it out of a keen sense of national duty and a realization of the fact that it presents the main solution to present problems. Such men, given a free hand, applying to the problem the business acumen and initiative that has made them successful in private enterprises and assisted by an improved state of agriculture in Canada, could produce results that would soon bring about a marked change in Canada's economic position.—Edmonton Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The cross-word puzzle fad should cause a demand for such Christmas novelties as gnus, emus and rocs.

A Northerner says that the trouble with the Algoma wolf hunt was that two sets of brains are needed to counteract the cunningness of the wolf. How about that Brer Curran?

Fifty-nine below zero out West. It must be consoling to the Westerners to know that the air is so dry that the cold cannot be felt.

Wise and Otherwise.

Narcissus bulbs make a swell gift and may turn out to be something besides onions.

How about pottery? A shapely terra cotta vase is always handy for throwing at book agents.

A home is as comfortable as its furniture. Give your wife an easy chair for you to sit in.

How about a bed for Christmas? Get a small one so only one or two burglars can hide under it.

Hand-made lace is nice for Christmas. Except for the flaws you can't tell it from real machine-made lace.

If we had as much money as Henry Ford we would buy a fruit cake and sit on the curb and eat it all.

A THOUGHT.

There is no beauty which exceeds the natural loveliness of a woman who is unconscious of her power to charm.

Whites of Eyes Tinged With Yellow? Muddy Complexion? Your Liver is Out of Order!

Mrs. Wm. Bourque, Fox Creek, N. B., writes: "I have been troubled with my liver for a long time, and was so bad I could not do any work. I had severe pains in my stomach that were so bad, at times, I could hardly stand them. My tongue became coated; I had a bad taste in my mouth, especially in the morning; the whites of my eyes were tinged with yellow, and I had a muddy complexion.

I had read a great deal about

so decided I would try a vial, and after taking three of them I was greatly improved and felt more like living, and I can now do my own work without any trouble."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 16.—Trade was very dull to-day. Packers and whole sale butchers are already well supplied for their Christmas requirements. At noon to-day it looked as though there would be a heavy holdover of unsold cattle. The market opened with a total of over 3,000 cattle offering, including a couple of thousand stale. A few fair quality but outside of these there was little or no demand. Few more cattle of any kind, in fact, will be needed this side of Christmas. Twenty-five carloads of western cattle have been received this week, consisting mostly of a stockers.

Small meats generally easier. Hogs are the exception in an other wise dull market. Prices are firm at this week's 25c advance to $10.25 off cars.

Export cattl, choice and heavy steers, $7.25 to $8; bulls, $4.50 to $5.25; cows $4.50 to $5.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, December 16. — New high price records for the season were scored to-day by all deliveries of wheat, rye and oats.

Wheat led the way with active buying due more or less to reports of a wet harvest both in Argentina and Australia.

The closing quotations for wheat were firm, 1 3-4 to 2¼c net higher; May 1.07 1-2 to 1.70 3-4, and July 1.49 5-8 to 1.49 3-4.

Corn finished at ½ to 1c gain; oats 1 to 1 3-4c up and provisions showing 20c to 60c advance.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, December 16. — There was some business transacted in low grades of wheat with the continent by Canadian exporters here to-day but they stated that the prices bid from the United Kingdom were entirely out of line and the market on the whole was quiet.

Some bids of 13¼c per bushel under the Winnipeg May option were made for No. 4 wheat, c.i.f. Bay ports, which holders would not accept.

The trade in coarse grain was quiet but the undertone was strong and prices for Canadian western oats were 1c per bushel higher.

No. 2 Ontario white oats sold at 63c; No. 3 grade at 61c, and No. 4 grade at 60c per bushel ex-store.

In sympathy with the continued strength in Canadian cash wheat the prices were advanced 10c per barrel for all grades of spring wheat flour, which makes a net gain of $1.10 per barrel since the first of December.

OPPORTUNITY

The Hamburg-American Line begins to build freighters that will be propelled by Flettner's rotor masts. The wind revolves cylinders that look like somestacks, doing away with coal for fuel.

It comes to light that Flettner's revolutionary invention is just an application of a principle discovered by Magnus nearly a century ago. All these years, this tremendous opportunity has been awaiting the right pair of eyes. That is usually the case with what we call opportunity.

BAPTIST CHURCH TO MAKE CHANGE

Sunday School May be Held in the Morning at Eleven O'clock.

MEMBERS TO VOTE.

Murray Street Baptist Church is considering a change which is considered by many a forward step in dealing with the religious education of the young, the idea being to have a big family gathering in the morning with the service made suitable for all and to merge the Sunday School into this morning gathering instead of having it meet in the afternoon. The initial step was taken last fall when Dr. Rose visited the First Baptist Church at Rochester, where the method has been extremely successful, and following this visit a commission of fifteen was appointed by the Murray Street Church to bring in recommendations which will be voted on by the members after prayer meeting to-night. The method, which is new in this country, is being seriously considered by many of the leading churches in Ontario and elsewhere, and if the scheme is adopted at Murray Street the results will be watched with great interest. The following are the recommendations which will be considered to-night:

1—That the Sunday School meet at 11 o'clock, the time of the church service. The advantage of this hour will be that parents and children can come and return at the same time, and also that the smaller children will be cared for, and profitably employed while parents are in church service. This will mean that those who live at a distance can attend both church and Sunday school by making only one trip. In winter this will mean much.

2—That a three period session of the Sunday school be adopted:

(1) From 11 to 11.30 the school to meet with the church for worship. The advantages for worship would be, the auditorium, the organ, the choir, the presence of the older people in large numbers, the pastor's presence and leadership, the devotional atmosphere, more marked than can be secured and maintained in the Sunday meeting by itself.

(2) From 11.30 to 12 all under fifteen years of age to retire during a recessional hymn to the primary, junior and intermediate departments where each group would be under competent leadership. All fifteen and over would remain in the auditorium to the close of the church service at 12. This plan would go far toward forming the habit of church attendance on the part of the young people.

(3) From 12 to 12.30 the whole school would meet as at present for study in classes under the direction of regular teachers. It is expected that many of the church congregation, who do not attend Sunday school now, would under this plan remain for thirty minutes to one of the adult Bible classes.

3—That the Sunday school be directed by a board of religious education, composed of five members, with religious education vision and interest—the duties of this board to be:

(1) To manage the Sunday school.
(2) To appoint its officers.
(3) To select its teachers.
(4) To arrange for teacher training.

4—That the Keystone series of graded work be given a thorough and careful trial in the junior and intermediate departments for the last period, and in the primary for the last two periods. It is also recommended that for the juniors (9-11) that the second period be used especially for memory work of choice passages of the Bible and of choice hymns. That for intermediates (12-14) a course in Bible knowledge, such as that given in Hunting's Book, "Hebrew Life and Times," be followed.

5—That the Sunday school scholars make their offerings in the church service during the worship period, and that there be only one offering, instead of two, as at present, for those who attend both Sunday school and church. That those who are now giving to the Sunday school only, give the same amount through the church. That those who give now to both Sunday school and church give the same total as at present. That those who are now giving nothing to the Sunday school give at least something regularly.

6—That this new plan be put into operation as soon as the commission is convinced that the persons concerned, very generally are ready to make it a success.

Homespun Materials and Handicraft Articles Drew Large Crowd to the Conservatory.

The Weaving Club of the Women's Art Association recently held a largely attended and very successful exhibit and sale of homespun materials and handicraft articles at the Conservatory of Music. Articles made by members of the club were on view, in a quantity of pretty bags, and there was also a consignment valued at about $700 from the Canadian Handicraft Guild Headquarters at Montreal, illustrating the work of the habitant weavers, in spreads, blankets, table covers and runners, bags and homespun material by the yard. The effective combinations of colors and fine handicraft of these workers in homespun were illustrated in the various articles.

Mrs. J. H. Vernor acted as assistant to Mrs. Pretty in the arrangement of the exhibit. During the afternoon and evening, tea was served, Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. D. Carmichael, Mrs. C. N. Gordon and Mrs. G. E. Porter acting as tea hostesses, assisted by Mrs. P. L. Allison, Mrs. C. E. Jamieson, Miss Edna Borbridge and Miss Ethel Richardson.

Women's Art Association Met On Monday Afternoon

Three Minute Talk on Jacobean Furniture Given by Mrs. R. H. Parsons.

The Interior Decoration Club of the Women's Art Association held its second meeting on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. L. Goodwill. Tea having been served, the meeting opened with a three-minute talk on Jacobean Furniture, given by Mrs R. H. Parsons. At the last meeting of the club, after hearing Mrs. Goodwill's splendid paper on Period Furniture it was decided that the subject being such an extensive one it might be advisable to have a three-minute talk at each meeting on one particular period, reviewing it and fixing its characteristics more firmly in the minds of the club members.

Mrs. J. B. Mann then gave a delightful and instructive talk on Windows and Window Hangings, which she made still more interesting by illustrations of her own and some taken from magazines. She emphasized especially the importance of the window as framing a view, something often overlooked in its decoration.

Miss Richardson read a paper on Floor Covering and Rugs, pointing out the important part played by both in the decoration of a room. She dwelt also at some length on the history of Persian, Turkish and Chinese rugs.

The next meeting of the club will be held on January 5th, at the home of Miss Anderson, Gilmour street, when two papers will be given, one on Lighting and Lamps, applied to Interiors, by Miss Maude Rush, and the other on Colour Harmony, and its application to Hangings, Wall Coverings, etc., by Miss Mayme Montgomery.

Radio News

Radio fans the past week or two have heard a new song that has held their attention and caught their interest. This particular song has a waltz rhythm and a reminiscent melody that lingers in one's memory. It is rather an old-fashioned type of the "After the Ball" variety.

One cannot hear this song many times over the radio until the title has fixed itself as "The Pal That I Loved Stole the Gal That I Loved." And the whole song just amplifies the idea expressed in the title—an experience quite common in the annals of amorous youth.

"The Pal That I Loved" is written by Harry Pease and Ed. G. Nelson. The publishers accepted their song largely because these same boys happened to be the writers of "Peggy O'Neil"—and "Peggy" was a big surprise to everybody. In fact, the publishers did it more as a favor, because they did not think a song of this old-fashioned type would have a big sale nowadays.

To the surprise of everybody, the song sprang into amost over-night popularity. Vaudeville singers seized upon it, orchestras played it, radio zipped it over the ether, and the public welcomed this new song to its heart immediately.

Here is the story as it is told in the song:

"I met a down-hearted lad,
He had a tear in his eye,
I wondered why he felt sad,
Then he whispered to me with a sigh:

CHORUS:

"The pal that I loved, stole the gal that I loved,
And took all my sunshine and joy;
Nobody but he, was a buddy to me,
Since we played on the floor with our toys.
I just can't believe, my old pal would deceive,
Gee! but I'm heart-sick and sore;
The pal that I loved, stole the gal that I loved,
That's why we're not pals any more."

Curled ostrich and rosebuds are liked for trimmings on mules, garters and lingerie.

NEW YORK GLIMPSES

A Girl Who Reformed And "Dresden China Doll."

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. — A year or two ago she was known as The Kewpie Doll of Third Avenue. She had light gold hair and bisque features such as you wind in one of these Made-in-Germany blonde dolls.

Men fought over Kewpie, but there was little need for that. She had little discrimination in the matter of men. All men were alike to her, unless they were cheapskates.

Here was a doll rapidly being broken to pieces on the sidewalks when suddenly and inexplicably new mews were given to her. She braced up. She walked alone. Hers was no reformation worked by mission or good friend. Some latent strength of character within was loosed from its well and poured out.

Kewpie is now a waitress in a "dago red" restaurant on Third avenue near 29th street. She minds her own business and slaps the face of any man who tries to mind it for her.

Kewpie has a girl friend who seems past all hope of redemption. She is uglier and older and nastier of disposition than Kewpie The gold-toothed smiles she turns on men are like sterotype matrices impressed from the same mould. They never change. As I have watched her I've wondered if the mould that casts that smile can be the design in her heart, it seems so baked, so hard.

The other night I saw that gold-toothed harlot leaning over a body carriage in Third avenue and tears were streaming down her cheeks.

In a bright restaurant on Broadway, near Forty - Eighth street I often see a girl who is delicate and dainty and fragile. She reminds me of a Dresden china doll.

The restaurant is her rendezvous with a porky, pudgy man of 50 or more who wears diamonds on his over-stuffed fingers. Sitting there he looks as foolish as a big boy would look playing with a doll.

Her pearly smile is as set as that of Third avenue's gold-toothed harlot. As I watch her I wonder if she would cry over a baby's carriage.

And there's Mrs. Rose Infantini of 116th street who walked to St. Andrew's on Eight street, 108 blocks, with her seven children in order that they might have a one-cent Thanksgiving dinner.

Women are hard to understand, arn't they?

LAKEFIELD MAN IS DISCHARGED BY MAGISTRATE

Hypothesis of Crown Not Sufficient on Which to Base Conviction.

ANOTHER CHARGE

John Eastland of Buckhorn Pleads Guilty and is Fined $300.

Gazing around a quart bottle containing an inch of liquor that had been entered as evidence before him, Magistrate O. A. Langley yesterday afternoon dismissed a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated, brought against Roland J. Bulloch of Lakefield. His Worship was unable to admit the contention of the learned Crown Counsel, G. W. Hatton, K.C., that a man drunk at 4 o'clock, having no liquor during the previous four hours, was drunk at noon. The Magistrate could not agree with Mr. Hatton's rendering of the proposition that 'things equal to the same thing are equal to one another," and while admitting that possibly—nay, probably— Bulloch was intoxicated when found by the constable, yet he must be exonerated on the count of driving a car while in that condition.

The prosecution was under the Criminal Code, and the accused was represented by G. N. Gordon, K.C., who did not introduce any evidence.

Constable N F. Maker, immediately upon dismissal of the charge, laid through J. F. Strickland a charge of being intoxicated in a public place.

Eastland Fined.

John Eastland of Buckhorn pleaded guilty to having liquor in a place other than his private dwelling, to wit in his pocket while he was on the Buckhorn road. Magistrate Langley imposed a fine of $300 and costs, which was paid.

Car Broke Down.

In the trial of Bullock, John Eastwood said he was coming to Peterborough with his car when it broke down and he telephoned for Bulloch to come to fix it. Bulloch is a garage man in Lakefield. About four hours later Provincial Constable N. F. Maker arrived. The witness did not see Bulloch with any liquor, but witness had a little that he found. Neither he nor Bulloch had anything to drink.

Constable Maker said on December 12 on the Buckhorn road he passed John Eastwood and Roland Bulloch. The Inland Revenue Officer, W. Buller, was with him. Eastwood and Bulloch had their cars parked on the side of the road, touching each other. The constable noticed a bottle in Eastwoods' pocket; the two men were standing in the centre of the road talking.

The constable stopped his car and asked the men the way to Buckhorn. He took the bottle from Eastwood and found it to contain liquor.

"You want to see how much of it has evaporated," Mr. Gordon suggested on Mr. Hatton's asking for the bottle.

"You've been out there twice," Mr. Hatton retorted.

On the bottle being placed on his desk, Magistrate Langley asked whether Mr. Gordon wished to test the liquor, but the counsel for the defense declined to sample "anything found in the bush."

Bulloch declined to give the constable his name but Eastwood told, Constable Maker said.

Bullock was intoxicated and stubborn. He objected to his car being searched.

"Exercising his rights as a British subject,' 'interjected Mr. Gordon.

He was not steady on his feet, he couldnt' talk sensibly, and his breath smelled of liquor, Maker said. As a result of his condition the constable urged him to allow Eastwood to see him home. There were marks on the Buckhorn side where a car had run in and out of the ditch, but no such mark on the Peterborough side.

In cross-examination the constable said he was not travelling fast when he passed the men on the road.

Says Bulloch Drunk.

William H. Buller, Inland Revenue Officer, said he was close to Bulloch on the road. Bulloch was intoxicated, judging by the manner in which he acted and the way he looked. He couldn't stand as straight as he should have been able to and he couldn't answer questions.

Mr. Buller could not tell whether Bulloch would have been able to stand straight if he had been lying under the car four hours making repairs, he told Mr. Gordon in cross-examination.

This concluded the case for the prosecution and Mr. Gordon offered no evidence.

In his argument Mr. Hatton submitted that since Bulloch was drunk at 4.30 and had not had anything to drink in the meantime he must have been intoxicated while driving the car at 12.30.

Mr. Gordon submitted that the evidence that Bulloch was intoxicated at 4.30 was not evidence of intoxication in charge of a car. The presumption is against the contention of the Crown Attorney, he said.

CHANGES PLEA; SAYS "GUILTY"

Edward Woodcock Fined $200 and Costs in Trial on Liquor Case.

STRONG MOONSHINE

Edward Woodcock, on trial before Magistrate O. A. Langley on a charge of having liquor illegally, amended his plea yesterday and was fined $200 and costs when he admitted he was guilty.

Woocock, who conducted his own defense, threw a monkey wrench among the wheels of justice on Monday when he demanded an analysis of the liquor the constable found in his possession. Constable Maker, the accused declared, could not tell that the liquor was over 2½ per cent merely by smelling it. Ordinarily an analysis takes from three weeks to a month, but Mr. Strickland, prosecuting counsel, expedited this test and had it ready for yesterday. It was this, undoubtedly, that decided Woodcock to amend his plea, for the liquor showed 67 per cent.

Provincial Constable N. F. Maker, who rounded up Woodcock with a party that pleaded guilty on Monday to theft, explained to Mr. Strickland that the accused man had peculiarly hard family conditions at present, a child having been born a few days ago, and this Mr. Strickland explained to His Worship in suggesting the minimum fine would serve.

Magistrate Langely feelingly enlarged upon the position Woodcock has placed himself in and its relation to his family. He urged him to take the present very light sentence as a warning and lesson, expressing regret that he should have to impose a sentence so near to Christmas but declaring that but for the season and the circumstances it would be very much heavier.

Woodcock awaits judgment in another case in which he is charged with breaking and entering a cottage in Smith township, and is to be heard on a charge of having a still, brought by the Inland Revenue Department.

They were ably attended by Mr. Eldon McFayden, brother of the groom, and Miss Ethel Garrison, cousin of the bride who carried a bouquet of rose carnations.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. Later the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for Peterboro and points east, the bride wearing sand French crepe, with taupe coat trimmed with Alaska seal and a hat to match.

SIGNS OF TUBE TROUBLE

A vacuum tube will often lose its power to detect and amplify before it burns out. Just because a tube lights is no indication that it is working most efficiently. It may be worn out. The symptom that a tube is "dying" is a gradual decrease in volume and the gradual disappearance of distant stations blending into a rapid decrease in volume. The batteries may be fresh, yet the rheostat resistance is all removed from the circuit. A dying tube generally becomes noisy and the music distorted. Distortion is not always caused by the loudspeaker or transformers. An old tube is often to blame.

Of that sum, $262,100,000 was paid by shareholders for $195,000,000 of stock, par value, or over $134 per share.

From 1899 to 1923 the Company's mileage increased from 7,000 to 13,600 miles included in the traffic returns, while the annual fixed charges were increased by only $6,650,000 more than in 1899. The bonded debt was reduced from $47,000,000 to $3,650,000.

Earnings of the road have made available for distribution to the common shareholders as much as 13 per cent on their shares, but only 7 per cent has ever been paid in dividends and the balance has always been added to surplus. No more than 7 per cent ever has been paid in dividends out of railway earnings and that 7 per cent dividend is equivalent to less than 2 per cent on the cost of the railway.

Hundreds of millions from the shareholders' surpluses have been spent on capital improvements, and that is one reason why the capitalization of the Company is at least $200,000,000 less than the actual value of the property, why fixed charges are kept so low that the public can and does get the benefit of lower freight and passenger rates than those of the United States—rates as low or lower than those in any other country in the world.

This, in face of the fact that wages in Canada are as high as those of the United States, that the costs of rails, fuel and other supplies are higher in Canada, and that the ratio of population to mileage of railway is lower than in any other country.

Canadian Pacific financial policies have benefited every citizen of Canada, and shareholders' co-operation in those policies has given Canadians the lowest freight and passenger rates on the continent.

Pleasures of Memory

By F. M. DELA FOSSE.

Tombstones have always held a peculiar fascination for me. This may seem a strange fact to record in a life that has been far more intimately associated with green fields and life and laughter than with the quietude connected with churchyards and cathedral cloisters. Psychologists, however, will tell you that there are inherent, in all of us, tendencies to habits of thought and deed which even our closest friends and associates may not imagine that we possess. One of the finest all-round athletes I ever knew would sit down contentedly of an evening and engage in the effeminate-looking occupation of knitting a sock, and I have known an illiterate cook of a survey party spend a whole summer in inditing reams upon reams of awful atrocities against the English language which he fondly denominated Poetry.

Circumstances, perhaps, have combined to make me more catholic in my tastes than most and so in my desultory browsing over Life's pastures I have taken an interest in tombstones. I look upon a study of them as one of the most useful and enlightening that can engage the attention of man, for I believe that by such study one can gain a greater insight into human nature than by any other means. If a man or woman cannot find abundance of food for thought in the course of a walk through a churchyard, or down the aisles of some storied minster, then the mind and the heart alike must be affected by a sclerosis that is past curing.

There are many, I know, who profess to have the greatest horror of anything connected with death. A churchyard is the last place that they would choose for a morning or afternoon ramble. Such aversion can only be bred of superstition and fear, for the bright sun and the balmy breezes that we all love are as much harbingers of change in the human frame as they are of the seasons. There is a wonderful analogy between the sinking to rest of a tired, worn-out body and the decay of grass and leaf and flower, and there can be only cause for joy when we consider that the same Providence which causes the grass to spring afresh, the leaves to unfold and the flowers to shed forth their fragrance, offers us the assurance, in the light of our higher destiny, that we shall rise to live again.

One of the chief pleasures that I have found in reading inscriptions on tombstones has lain in their wonderful variety. They seem to voice every sentiment that the mind is capable of expressing. Here, there is the fervent hope of a glorious resurrection, there, a frenzied soul breaks forth into fear-laden lamentation; here, a minatory prophet thunders forth a coming judgment, there, a gentle monitor bids the reader tread the path to salvation. Husbands bear witness to the loving ministrations of wives, and wives bear witness to the loyalty and affection of husbands. Fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, all give their testimony, and if all gave it in a spirit of Christian love there would be no place on earth like a churchyard wherein to imbibe precepts of godly living. But unfortunately, sarcasm, hatred, ridicule, contempt, also find a place in these memorials and serve to show how diverse are the emotions that actuate the hearts of mortals.

In Pewsey churchyard, in Wiltshire, there is a famous epitaph to the memory of a certain Lady O'Looney, which illustrates as well an any other of that type how ludicrous an imperfectly worded tribute may sound:

Here lies the body of Lady O'Looney
Great-niece of Burke, commonly called the Sublime.
She was bland, passionate, and deeply religious,
Also she painted in water-colours,
And sent several pictures to the Exhibition.
She was first cousin to Lady Jones,
And of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

Whenever I call to mind that epitaph I picture to myself a lady of the Regency—tall, angular and austere, blandly condescending to her equals and a terror to her domestics. I see her on Sunday tripping haughtily to church, with a footman behind, holding up her dress to keep it from trailing in the dust, and a footman in front carrying hero smelling salts and prayer book. She walks down the aisle gazing superciliously about her, and is ushered to her pew by the obsequious verger. It is a cosily curtained pew and has been in the family for many generations. Being shut off from the vulgar gaze she can indulge in a quiet nap without a soul being the wiser, and the probabilities are that if the hqmily is a long and prosy one she sleeps right through it and goes home and says that she has been greatly "refreshed" by the preacher's edifying discourse. A woman of worth of course, and one who, in her day and generation, performed her part with the dignity becoming to a lady of quality.

Many of the epitaphs of early date are in Latin, it having been the fixed idea of scholars that in matters of this sort that language lent itself to greater dignity and simplicity. Even at so late a date as the middle of the eighteenth century this prejudice held sway, for we find that sturdy Englishman, Dr. Johnson, refusing indignantly to compose an epitaph to Oliver Goldsmith in his native tongue. "I shall never consent," he roared, "to disgrace the walls of Westminster Abbey with an English inscription."

Epitaphs date back to the dawn of history. They were carved by the Egyptians on their sarcophagi and usually bore prayers to Osiris and Anubis, father and son, who are credited with being, in Egyptian mythology, the gods of the dead. They are to be found in every nation having pretensions to civilization and culture. The French nation probably supplies as good examples as any of the short epitaph, as the language is peculiarly well adapted to an epigrammatic style of composition. The following touching memorial to a mother is a fine instance: La premiere au rendezvous (the first at the meeting-place).

But we do not need to go further than the British Isles and Ireland to obtain illustrations of epitaphs as concise in phrase and embodying the loftiest thoughts and finest imagery. Neither time nor space will permit of furnishing examples, and it will be enough to say that from the days of Shakespeare and Ben Jonson down to the present, a wonderful array of worthies have been commemorated and have commemorated others, in deathless prose and verse, on tablets of brass and stone and marble.

We gaze with reverence at the stately monuments associated with their names, but in doing so we do not need to forget that souls just as noble in spirit, if not in genius, have passed to their reward, "unwept, unhonored and unsung," in the lands beyond the seas. I have stood by the grave of many a humble toiler whose body had been laid to rest on lonely hill-top or in sheltered valley. I had known them ere the stress of life had subdued their ardour or privation had bowed their sturdy frames. The clearings which they had taken so much trouble to cultivate had well-nigh reverted to forest, and the fox and the ground-hog had made their lairs in the loosened earth that covered their remains. I was surrounded on all sides by an apparently pitiful spectacle of a wreck of human aspirations. Yet, as I looked, I could not feel that any of these men had lived in vain, for, when the sun shone clear it shed a radiance like a benediction on their graves, and when the scurrying clouds and rising winds proclaimed an impending tempest, I heard nothing but the tramp of hurrying thousands following in the footsteps of those who had fallen so valiantly in the van.

I often wonder if our governments appreciate, even if we, as a nation, appreciate all that we owe to the toilers on the outer fringes of our land. I have seen monuments raised to the spirit of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity. Our cities and towns are filled with memorials to statesmen, to warriors and to kings. These are well and worthy in their way, but to the honour and lasting glory of the Pioneer no tribute has been raised. Such a monument would be an incentive to the youth of our country and would help to foster for as long as it endured that spirit of industry and noble independence without which no nation can be truly great, and of which the humble workers in woodland fastnesses and prairie wastes are our great exemplars.

NEWS OF BETHANY.

Irish Comedy Presented by the Girls' Guild of St. Paul's.

BETHANY, Dec. 16.—The Irish comedy play, "My Irish Rose," which was held on Friday evening under the auspices of the Girls' Guild of St. Paul's church, was a very witty and humorous entertainment. The characters taking part were exceptionally good and prompting was conspicuous by its absence. The stage setting was most attractive. The arbors over the entrances and the imitation stone wall were a mass of climbing vines and flowers. The seating capacity of the hall was taxed to the limit and owing to the inclement weather standing room would have been taken up. This humorous comedy, full of wit and mirth, will be played in the community hall, Cavan village, on Monday, 22nd, on request of the A.Y.P.A. of St. John's church. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $110.00.

MISS MACPHAIL AT CLOSING SESSION

Gave Report on Rural Educational Research to United Farm Women.

TORONTO, December 17. — Miss Agnes MacPhail, M. P., who presented a report on "Rural Educational Research," at the closing session of the United Farm Women of Ontario, informed the audience that she was in an exceedingly bad humour. She deplored the fact that the beautiful continuity of the morning session had been broken by reason of the women taking the afternoon off to listen "to a lot of men in Massey Hall, whose chief stock in trade was to make a mess of things."

It was not with her approval that the invitation to attend the U.F.O. session was accepted. She hoped care would be taken by the farm women to side step future invitations of a similar character, as it was not in the best interests of the organization. The half holiday had been the means of shutting off discussion on several important reports.

Miss MacPhail said the information contained in her report had been gathered by special committees in the United States and Continental Europe.

Miss MacPhail declared that rural education as constituted in Ontario lacked three-fold development, namely, head, heart and hand.

Comparing the system with systems of other countries there was a tendency in Ontario to force upon the children for examination purposes unassimilated facts, with the result that it left in its trail a barren area at the end of the public school system.

Mrs. O'Toole of Elora, presented a report prepared by Mrs. W. H. Wilmot of Harriston on "Citizenship."

The report emphasized the fact that all disinterested and uneducated women and all old folks, and funny looking people, do not live on the back concessions.

There were many of such type numbered in the population of larger cities and towns. She regretted that there were so many rural women so fascinated with domestic duties that they could not spare time to attend district clubs and discuss matters concerning citizenship.

A report dealing with rural schools and rural education was presented by Mrs. Harold Currie of Strathroy.

M. R. Wiman of Thessalon, the convenor of the Immigration Committee, regretted that so many of the women's clubs failed to realize the true value of this work.

The report of the secretary, made by Mrs. H. L. Laws, showed a marked falling off in membership in many clubs, while others had doubled their membership.

FABLES ON HEALTH

In planning meals for the children Mrs. Mann of Anytown found it convenient to divide the various foods into different groups; muscle forming, strength producing, energy charging, resistance building, and the like.

Thus there is a dairy products group, needed for all growing children and those who would put on weight and build up strength. It includes butter, eggs, milk and cream.

There is the starch and protein group, with bread and potatoes, macaroni, spaghetti and certain meats.

There is a grain products group, with cereals, rye, barley, rice, corn and other grains.

There is the fatty food group, with bacon, olive oil, peanut butter, cream, butter and the like.

There are the sugars and sweets, with candy, sirups and the like, and there is the vegetable group.

All these, if properly grouped by the housewife, cannot fail to give a well balanced diet for the family.

Of these, products milk is a needed foundation and the sweets are generally considered the least essential, though the most demanded.

Normal people require something from the dairy group each day and for children milk is in greatest need.

U.F.O. PROFITS

Waldron, who declared that legally, no payment to the patrons should have been made because it was a payment out of the profits of shareholders who were legally entitled to any profits which may have been made. Mr. McPeters argued that the creamery had promised the payment of a "deferred dividend" to the patrons. He explained also that, treated separately, the creamery in four years had paid 100 per cent. dividend on the money invested in it. The amount was lost in the failure of other U.F.O. ventures.

Drury's Opposition.

Mr. Drury, opposing the plan suggested by Mr. McPeters, declared that the U.F.O. had never lost a cent through enterprizes of co-operation, but had lost them through enterprizes which were not co-operative. The very point that the U.F.O. had set a limit of 7 per cent. to dividends was in itself sufficient evidence of their anxiety for real co-operation, he said.

"A U.F.O. co-operative movement," he said, "has no business to serve the general public. Its first and only business is to serve those who belong to it. The whole movement must be put on a commodity basis, but each must pay his fair share of organization. The man who pays up his share and is a member of the company must be above any risk as to his dividend before the producer of goods consumed is paid any more than the market value of his product. Producers have always the right to ask that capital provide but they have not the right to ask that capital shall split its profits with them. The co-operative capital should only invite the producer to share when capital had been placed beyond all risk.

The matter of a different system on the business of the creamery was left to the board of directors by vote of the meeting, as also was its change of name as suggested by a delegate. The manager of the creamery during the year wanted to make a payment on deferred dividend, but was prevented by the board on the legal advice that they could not pay shareholders' profits to patrons.

Besides having made a grand net profit of $74,198 during the year, the company has paid off $6,000 stock selling expenses, leaving only $4,489 to pay for the year, and has wiped out an Imperial bank loan of $73,500 according to the statement made by Manager Clemenes. As well, $25,000 was paid off the mortgage on the Toronto Creamery property and the remaining $20,000 is to be wiped off before Christmas.

Geo. S. Bothwell, president, who presided, was very optimistic in his review of the year's business and his outlook for the future. In the egg circle besides getting above the market value for eggs, the company had $25,000 for distribution among its members. He predicted that the U.F.O. had turned the corner and would now pay dividends instead of standing losses.

BRITAIN ALARMED BY RAPID RISE IN COSTS OF LIVING

Commission Named by New Government to Find Cause, Which May Spell Downfall of Baldwin Government.

By Clifford L. Day

LONDON, Dec. 16 (United Press) Britain is waging a grim, losing battle against a steady, unrelenting rise in the price of food.

With an army of well over a million unemployed swarming over the country, and with a wail for a cheaper dinner-pail going up from those lucky enough to have jobs, the government faces a winter of stern discontent.

Bread promises to play a big part in the fate of Premier Stanley Baldwin's second Tory cabinet.

Even Labour itself, as represented by the preceding administration of Ramsay MacDonald, found it humanly impossible to stem the mounting tide of living costs. In June, after MacDonald had already been in office for five months the price of food still was 60 per cent above the pre-war level. By November, when Baldwin returned to power, it had risen steadily to 79, six per cent above the figure for November 1, 1923.

During the month of October, alone the retail costs of food, rent, clothing, fuel, light and other items in the working man's budget bounded from 76 per cent above pre-war to 80. Food prices advanced seven points in October.

BREAD is blamed almost entirely for the recent leaps and bounds in the general rise. And the public has been further frightened by stories that the four-pound loaf will go to two shillings (about $0.46) by January. Experts have protested that the world's wheat situation does not justify the scare.

The "Economist" has estimated the total wheat yield for 1924 will be 145,560,000,000 pounds as compared with 159,000,000,000 last year, these figures not including Australia.

Despite the experts' feeling of comparative optimism, the price of a sack of flour went up 45 cents in London early in November, and the crying protest against a dearer loaf rang louder.

Baldwin has shown that he is thoroughly alive to the possibilities of the situation. One of the first things he did after returning to Downing Street was to set up a commission to investigate living costs. Appointment of Sir Auckland Geddes as chairman reflects the importance attached to the government's fight. It is Sir Auckland's first official assignment since he relinquished the British Ambassadorship at Washington.

NEW INSTRUMENT IN MEDICINE BUILT LIKE RADIO RECEIVING SET

Electro-Cardiograph Developed by the General Electric Company Renders Heart "Voltage" Visible.

A new instrument called the electro-cardiograph has been developed in the General Electric Labratory at Schenectady. It offers a new way for electrons, tiny particles of negative electricity, to aid the medical profession.

The cardiograph is, in some respects, much like a radio receiving set. The incoming voltages are considered extremely minute by the medical profession, but radio fans would think them relatively enormous.

The electrical impulse which reaches a receiving antenna is in the neighborhood of a microvolt, or one millionth of a volt. One considers that a shock from 110 volts is relatively unimportant, but the antennae of today deal with microvolts and microamperes.

The electro-cardiograph takes the voltage manifestations which come from the heart and make them visible. Instead of being an audio amplifier, the three amplifying tubes in this set are used to amplify the slight signal current from the heart so that doctors may observe the action of this organ and, by photographing the oscillating light spot, can, at later time, refer to the condition of a patient's heart, as indicated on a certain date. In such fashion progress may be noted.

The human body appears to be somewhat similar to a generating station. Every muscular action is accompanied with an electrical manifestation and since the heart is the most active of all muscle groups, the voltage which accompanies its pulsations or beats gives evidence of pathological and physiological conditions.

These voltages are led into the portable cardiograph by means of contacts applied to the forearms and left ankle. They are amplified by using ordinary radio amplifying tubes and the voltage difference is ultimately made visible to the operator and, if desired, recorded on a film.

The cardiogram, or trace, which is obtained is not new. The instrument which has been in use up to this time required an experienced operator and contained a delicate quartz-metal thread in the galvanometer. This thread, many times thinner than a human hair, is eliminated in the electro-cardiograph. Delicate operating parts are replaced by using vacuum tube amplification.

Another improvement in the new instrument is the elimination of what is termed "skin-potential." Inasmuch as an amplifying tube functions only when the voltage charges the portable cardiograph pays no attention to a constant electric charge. It is ultra-sensitive to a changing voltage. This is important because the old type of apparatus required considerable adjustment to set it correctly for each patient in order to obtain accurate records. The constant potential of the skin, differing in individuals, made necessary a correction each time the apparatus was used.

The power unit in the electrocardiograph consist of high voltage "B" batteries and a six-volt storage battery.

CHILD OF SIX A PIANO MASTER

PARIS, Dec. 17.—(United Press) —Seeing and hearing was believing at the Femina Theatre when Pietro Mazzini, six years old, proved to music critics that he was a master at the piano. He played Beethoven's Sonata in C. Minor, and other classical numbers, with the strong touch of a grown man and the feeling of a matured artist. The little Italian child, with chubby fingers and bare knees, came upon the stage. He was just a pleasant little youngster, with a shock of d hair and big dark eyes, until touched the piano. Immediately was apparent that he was an art

Pietro came here after succes in Berlin and Vienna. He has m ered Beethoven, Haydn, Cho and Mozart. He is the son of Pie Mazzini, an Italian publicist, Carla Benassi, a singer. He l learned music from his mother, after a year of study he show such promise that he became a p il of the widow of Leschetizky, w was the master of such celebrat pianists as Paderewsky and Fried man. Critics agree that he has a remarkable natural talent, and a pow er that they cannot understand in a child. He may soon be seen in America.

"A little more of the Corrigan touch, old son. We're not going to sit down until they choose to launch their attack. That's not my idea. Barring about three of the watchmen, who appear to have forgotten their religious beliefs, there's not a soul on the whole Kabun we can trust. If Zariman's the fellow I take him for, he'll leave precious little to chance. We're going to initiate a surprise attack, and endeavor to anticipate his zero hour. We're going to visit Zariman's brigade headquarters now!"

Jacobson looked up from a pedestal table in the ornate salon he had somehow managed to create in the midst of a tropical wilderness. He stared hard at the mosquito curtain stretched over the window frame. Presently he rose slowly to his feet and crossed the room.

"Funny," he muttered, half to himself. "I could have sworn——!"

He crushed an invading cockroach with his shoe and surveyed himself in a large mirroe in a gilt frame which hung from the wall. Suddenly he became rigid, peering into its depths as if he had seen a ghost. He swung round on his heel to see Corrigan framed in the doorway.

"Evening!" said the broad planter blandly, shutting the door after him.

"Good evening, Mr. Corrigan," replied Jacobson, his yellow face utterly devoid of expression.

"Satisfied?" demanded the visitor, his fingers still on the handle.

"I don't follow you."

"You were—looking at yourself in the glass, weren't you?"

The newcomer took a chair and sat down without being asked.

"Just dropped in for a chat," he announced. "Thought I'd try and patch up that little business of the other day. Nice little place, this of yours. Must have run you into a pretty penny. Shouldn't have thought you could afford it, with planting what it is. However, I dare say you manage a few little sidelines we old-timers wouldn't think about."

"What d'you mean?" snapped Jacobson, pushing forward his head like a lizard.

"Oh, nothing," Corrigan assured him genially. "Won't you sit down? Perhaps that little fall you had from your horse——"

Jacobson bit. He banged himself into a chair opposite his visitor, his upper lip drawn back over gold-filled teeth.

"I want to warn you, Mr. Corrigan," he snarled, "that I'm a man with very little patience. If you've any proposition to offer me, go ahead with it—and I'll listen. I don't mind reminding you that you've chosen an absurdly awkward time to call. There are some people I don't ask to dinner, you'll understand!"

"Precisely," Corrigan jerked out between his teeth. "There are some people I don't care to sit down with. However," he smiled innocently into Jacobson's face, "we aren't getting much forrarder, are we? As I was telling you, Mr. Jacobson, I just came in to have a friendly talk—and smoke the pipe of peace with you, and all that sort of thing."

Jacobson pressed something and Corrigan heard the clear ringing of an electric bell at the back of the building.

"You came in to smoke the pipe o peace, Mr. Corrigan?" He smiled queerly. "I can hardly raise any objection to that."

Corrigan, leaning back in his chair, noted that his host had not bothered to dress for dinner. He watched him reach out for a box of Japanese antimony and saw, as he held it toward him, that his hand shook and a smile of grim triumph played for a moment at the corners of his mouth.

"Thanks," said Corrigan politely, and helped himself to a cigarette with a faint yellow band at one end. Out of the corner of his eye he saw the other produce one which had no ring, with the adroitness of a master of sleight-of-hand.

Jacobson pushed forward a lighted match, but his guest did not appear to notice.

Jacobson uttered an exclamation as the flame scorched him.

"Sorry," said Corrigan, apologetically. He looked the other straight in the eyes. "There's only two people on the island smoke this brand," he said.

Jacobson started.

Corrigan pushed the cigarette with the yellow band between the other's lips.

"You're going to smoke that, my friend, and it's about the last you'll ever smoke, if I know anything about it!" Without shifting his eyes from Jacobson's, he groped in his pocket with his free hand and produced an automatic lighter. "Keep your hands straight out in front of you," he commanded coldly, "and smoke!"

Jacobson, a cold sweat breaking out all over him, squinted horribly at the pale flickering flame. His strength seemed to have left him.

"Get on with it, Jacobson!" came the voice of his tormentor. The barrel of the pistol pressed coldly against his forehead.

The cigarette dropped into the man's lap.

"I can't," he screamed hoarsely. "My God!—I can't!"

"Are they as bad as that?" demanded Corrigan, his finger stroking the trigger.

Jacobson nodded.

"You hound of hell!"

He remembered the headless body of poor Browning. For the moment he struggled with the temptation to send his left fist crashing into the face of the helpless man.

Suddenly he saw that Jacobson was looking beyond him, and he felt compelled to turn his head.

He side-stepped behind Jacobson's chair and saw, standing in the open doorway, a tall figure in a flowing white robe and red fez.

"Zariman!" The cry seemed to force itself from Jacobson's lips.

Corrigan dropped on one knee as the newcomer's pistol spoke—and then, from the window by the pedestal table came a report like a rifle. Zariman plunged forward on his head and a beaming face was thrust through the mosquito-curtain, a pair of rimless glasses dangling from one ear.

"How's that, Corrigan?" demanded White jubilantly. "It's got a nasty upward kick to the right—but it's all right when you know it, what?"

Corrigan smiled approval. He sat down on the table and looked at Jacobson.

"The game's up, my friend," he said.

For the first time Jacobson's eyes lifted from the prostrate form of the false prophet. Some of the vitality his coming had stimulated appeared to have remained. There was a faint flush on his cheeks. Suddenly his lips parted and he spoke.

"I have your permission, Mr. Corrigan?" he said, and picked the cigarette with the yellow band at one end from his lap. As the two men watched him, speechless with amazement, he placed the thing between his lips and lit it deliberately.

"Good Lord!" gasped White and stepped forward. Corrigan caught his wrist in a grip of steel.

Jacobson fell back in his chair, and a native girl pushed suddenly past Corrigan and fell sobbing at her master's feet.

DOING WHAT YOU LIKE

Extraordinary ways of making a living come to light now and then. Consider the unique work of Professor Jaggar as related in the Medical Critic and Guide:

"Professor Jaggar has devoted his life to the study of the world's volcanoes, and Kilauea (in Hawaii) is his special pet. He is most of the time in or near the pit of Kilauea. No mother has been more solicitous about her only baby, has watched it more tenderly than Professor Jaggar over Kilauea. He knows every inch of the ground, every stone, every crack. He knows her moods and understands her language.

"No ordinary layman can understand the interest in and the love that the true scientist has for his special subject—be it microbes insects, shells, stars, rocks or volcanoes"

You probably recall seeing Jay O. Turner who originated the occupation of impersonating a wax figure in store windows. He once offered $20,000 to anyone who could make him laugh while on the job.

A Jersey City man specializes at winding watches, often handling 5000 a week. He is part of a big watch-repairing organization.

We doubt if there is a single unique human want that hasn't a specialist somewhere to handle it, all the way from trivial details to phenomenal skill.

Considering the vast assortment of odd occupations, there is little reason for anyone to do work he doesn't like. There are many thousands of different routine occupations for a man to choose among, and in addition are hundreds of strange specialities.

Trouble is, no matter what a man selects as a means of earning a livelihood, it eventually becomes monotonous. Most of us are temperamental vagabonds, yearning to flit from one line of work to another.

The more you study the wide assortment of ways of making money, the more you realize how much there is to learn in this world and how little of the total any man can master in a lifetime. Industry is an almost infinite labyrinth. Each man has his corridor, and he dies without more than a vague realization of what takes place outside of his own "line."

Ventilated Bins Save Grain

How to Build a Well-Aired Storage Plant to Preserve Wheat According to Experts' Plans.

Experiments conducted by experts have resulted in a system of ventilating bins to produce the best results in storing grain.

Two types of wheat bins have been devised. One calls for horizontal ventilation. The other has both horizontal and vertical ventilators. Both have been found successful.

According to the experimenters, some $2,000,000 is lost annually due to the sale of damaged wheat. A large proportion of the wheat shipped comes to market graded one or two grades lower, due to heat damage.

For this reason, a better system of farm storage is needed. Ordinarily grain is in safe storage if it is fully ripe and dry when threshed. Since, however, the weather cannot be controlled at harvest time, and a great deal of wheat has to be threshed moist, or not quite ripe, a storage system suitable for damp or tough wheat has to be provided.

Reduced Loss.

One season's results from ventilated grain bin experiments show that farm grain bins can be so equipped with ventilators that the loss from damp or tough wheat due to improper storage can be eliminated, or at least reduced to a minimum.

To get satisfactory results the ventilation in the bin must be sufficient to keep the mass of wheat from heating while it is drying to a lower moisture content.

For this purpose the bin shown in the accompanying diagram, with ventilators laid crosswise, to every three feet square of bin space, proved effective. Wheat with 16 per cent. moisture kept in good condition.

Two Methods.

The lumber, nails and screen wire to build ventilators necessary to equip a bin of 1,000 bushels capacity cost from $10 to $12, or an average of about one cent a bushel.

Two methods of ventilation have been found practicable. One of these consists of all ventilators being horizontal and their ends connected with openings through the bin walls so that air from the outside of the bin could flow through the ventilators. Each ventilator is independent of all others, and areates grain in a space three feet square across the bin.

The walls, when built of wood, can be relied on to dry out about one foot of wheat.

The other system consists of a horizontal tier of ventilators near the bottom, with the rest upright through the wheat. Each upright ventilator stands on a horizontal one, getting its air circulation effective in this manner.

For this system to be effective the top of the bin can not be air tight. It must be open enough for the air to circulate or there will be no draft through the ventilators.

Construction.

The horizontal system is recommended as more effective, although the other method is considered efficient.

The ventilator sare made by taking two pieces of 1-inch board, either four or six inches wide and long enough to reach across the bin. These are set on edge four inches apart; and cleats four inches long are mortised into the upper edges of the boards flush with the surface and about one foot apart.

Then a strip of galvanized screen wire, six inches wide and as long as the boards, is placed on and tacked to hold it in place until one-inch molding could be nailed along the edges of the board to hold the wire in place under the pressure of the wheat. The under side is not covered with wire and the cleats are just nailed across without mortising them in when the ventilators are used in a horizontal position.

The upright ventilators are screened on both sides and over the ends.

Saving Work.

Where there are a number of ventilators to be made a simple and efficient way to put the wire on is to line them up and stretch the wire over all, nail it down and then cut them apart. Screen wire 24 inches wide will cover four ventilators.

An ordinary knife mblade ay be used to run between the ventilators to cut them apart after the molding is nailed, which will hold the wire taut while it is being cut.

The horizontal ventilators are made to fit inside the bin walls and rest on cleats nailed to the walls at either end of the ventilators. Other cleats are nailed against the walls at the sides of the ventilators to keep them from being pushed out of place.

Protection.

Just above the ventilators pieces of canvas or burlap are nailed to the wall and allowed to hang down and around the end of the ventilators to keep the wheat from running into the end of the ventilator where it would obstruct the air passage.

The holes in the walls are cut just as large as the opening in the end of the ventilators. These holes are covered with screen wire to keep anything from getting into the the ventilators and to keep the wheat from running out in case the ventilators are moved.

When these openings are made through the outer walls, where they are exposed to the weather, either a board or piece of tin should be nailed against the wall just above the opening, and at an angle that will keep the rain out.

Removable.

This method of installation permits the ventilators to be moved at will by simply lifting them out of their resting place. When the wheat is being moved out of the bin, as the ventilators are approached, they may be taken up and moved out of the way.

The ventilators placed upright are installed by standing them directly on top of the ones lying horizontal near the floor. They are held in place at the bottom by cleats.

A cleat is nailed across the top of the horizontal ventilator on either side of the upright one, and other cleats are nailed on the sides of the upright ventilator which extends a few inches down the sides of the horizontal one.

Thus, the lower end of the upright ventilators cannot be shoved out of place in any direction. The top ends are held in place by stays nailed to them and to the bin walls.

These ventilators are not much in the way when the wheat is being put into the bin and when it is being moved out, the stays at the top may be pulled off and the ventilator picked up and moved out of the way.

Space Covered.

The bin space occupied by ventilators made six inches square equal one bushel to each five feet of ventilator, and those made four by six inches equal one bushel to each even and one-half feet of ventilator. To equip a bin twelve feet square and nine feet deep with ventilators made six inches square and placed horizontally in tiers three feet apart requires nine ventilators twelve feet long, or a total of 108 feet of ventilators.

This amount of ventilators occupies approximately the same space as 21.6 bushels of grain. The smaller ventilators take the space of 14.4 bushels.

A bin twelve feet square and nine feet deep equipped with vertical ventilators requires three ventilators twelve feet long for the horizontal tier and nine ventilators eight and one-half feet long for the three upright tiers.

In this case, the three horizontal ones probably should be six inches square, but the uprights may be four by six inches. This requires a total of 112.5 feet of ventilators which occupy the space of 17.7 bushels of grain.

FORESTS.

Artificial lumber, made from waste fiber of sugar cane, weighs only a fourth as much as pine board, thus cutting transportation costs.

It is not impossible that the solution of our forestry problem will be worked out in the laboratory—synthetic timber. Asbestos shingles and concrete already have cut quite a hole in the lumber trade.

Justice Wright Annuls A Youthful Marriage

WELLAND, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Mr. Justice Wright yesterday declared the marriage of Walter B. Horne, of Port Colborne, and Myrtle Kathleen Pringle, of Humberstone, to be null and void to all intents and purposes.

The young couple, who are only 17 years of age, were married at Fonthill by Rev. W. Morrow, Baptist minister, on August 3rd of this year.

Following the wedding ceremony, both returned to their respective homes. They saw each other for a week afterwards. Then the news leaked out, and the lad's father forbade him going to see his young bride again, sending him off to Midland.

WOLVES IN QUEBEC.

SAINTE VERONIQUE, Que., Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Not for twenty years have local inhabitants seen such an invasion of wolves as at present are ravaging the neighborhood. Recently fifteen sheep were destroyed by these brutes. Six were trapped within the last few days by Albert Legault, of whom three were she-wolves.

A Christmas Conspiracy

Around the house these latter days,
It has appeared to me,
There's something funny going on—
Just what, I cannot see.
It looks like a conspiracy
To load me down with love;
The good wife and the kiddies, three,
Are in it "hand and glove."

When Ia rrive from work each eve
They greet me with a kiss;
With eagerness they wait a chance
To fill my slightest wish.
They run and fetch my slippers for
My tired, aching feet;
The good wife's sure to have prepared
For tea a special treat.

The children ne'er indulge in quarrels,
Nor join in boisterous play;
They go to bed at once when told—
'Tis not their usual way.
Their work in school has been improved,
Their homework's always done.
You could not find three better kids
Anywhere 'neath the sun.

The meals are always sharp on time,
And something good for each;
A hug when I come in, and go,
And every one a "peach."
It's time I put my think-cap on
To figure this thing out:
To find the reason for this love
And what it's all about.

My gosh! I've got it! What a dunce
To not get wise before;
In just four weeks St. Nicholas
Will knock upon the door.
Will I fall for their little game—
Anticipations fill?
And see old Santa's sack is full?
I'll tell the world I will!

Games For Christmas

Hoodman blind snap dragon, shoe the wild mare, hot cockles, the white loaf, bob apple, puss in the corner, besides card playing for counters, nails and points, story telling and dancing were the old-time Christmas frolics.

The following are a few games which are sure to prove full of fun for Christmas festivities:

15 Lines.—Provide pencil and paper and have each turn draw anything he chooses, using 15 lines, no more, no less. The object must be something definite in relation to Christmas, such as a tree, Santa Claus, etc. The pictures are displayed at the end of a certain time and the players must guess that the pictures represent. The one guessing the greatest number is awarded a prize.

Another paper and pencil game is "See How Many Words Can be Formed by Twisting the Letters of the Word Christmas." Or another contest is to provide a large sheet of paper and charcoal, and allow each player to draw Santa Claus with eyes blindfolded.

An exciting game for Christmas is the old, old game of Snap Dragon. Raisins and nuts are placed in a shallow dish filled with water. On the water is poured a little alcohol, or spirits of camphor. The alcohol is then lighted and all have a turn at snapping the "dragon."

A merry scramble is to give each pair of partners a thread with a needle on each end with which they are to string popcorn as quickly as possible. At a given signal all cease threading, and the pair whose string is the longest is entitled to a prize.

Some good contests are to see who can say "Bz-z-z-z-z-z" longest without taking a breath. Who can hop across the room in the quickest time on one foot. Who can stand on one foot on a small block and keep his balance the longest. Who can put the most cranberries in a bottle without spilling any.

Here are some more trees besides the inevitable Christmas tree. See who can guess the greatest number of the following questions, each one commencing with "Tree":

The tree that figures greatly between nations—Treaty.

The tree thats a liquid sweatemat—Treacle.

The tree that has special medical care—Treatment.

The tree that we all like—Treat.

The tree that is false—Treason.

The tree that has clover-shaped leaves—Trefoil.

The tree that carries the old name of Boston, Mass.—Tremont.

Star Contest.

Distribute star-shaped cards and see who is the best astronomer in party.

An astronomer—A star-gazer.

A famished star—Starvation.

A marine star—Starfish.

A bird—Starling.

A star used by the laundress—Starch.

A star at the right-hand side of a ship—Starboard.

A theatrical celebrity—A star.

A fixed star—Stare.

An inexpensive illumination—Starlight.

A sudden alarm—Startle.

A Lively Snowball Race.

Divide the guests into two lines, with an equal number in each line. At the head of each line leave a pile of fluffy cotton snowballs. At a signal the players begin passing the balls down the line. The side wins which has all its balls piled up at the end of the line first.

The Juveniles Will Love This Game.

Stretch a ribbon across the room. Then attach red cardboard stockings of different sizes. The guests in turn try to hit the stockings with bubbles blown from clay pipes. Allow five trials for each one. A pair of silk stockings would be a suitable prize to the most successful "blower."

Another game is to ask one person to leave the room while a word with many rhymes is chosen, like "night," "tree," etc. The guest returns and asks questions, which must be answered with a word chosen. The idea is for that person to find the word decided upon, and the one who cannot find a rhyme to answer a question must pay a forfeit.

BUYING FISH.

When you buy fish select those firm in flesh with stiff fins, bright scales and red gills.

FOR BEST FLAVOR.

Boiled ham, beef or tongue that is to be eaten cold should be allowed to cool in its own juice if you want the best flavor.

Convicts Help To Grow Flax

The Willamette River, in Oregon, found chemically equivalent to the Lys, in Flanders, for retting flax, has become the source of a growing linen industry. Above, convicts are shown laying down flax at the river's bank, preparatory to retting. Below, the mill at the Oregon State Penitentiary where linen and tow are produced.

By PHILIP J. SINNOTT.

SALEM, Ore, Dec. 17.—It's a matter of several thousand miles from the River Lys in Flanders to the Willamette here.

But because their waters are alike:

Oregon convicts are getting a new chance;

A fertile district has a profitable new crop;

America may change from importing to exporting linen.

For years the Willamette Valley has been known as ideal for flax production, but without mills and machinery for handling the experimental work nothing tangible was accomplished.

Now, however, the state government and the state penitentiary have declared themselves in onthe experiment.

State Co-operates.

For a proper test, Governor Walter M. Pierce is putting into practice a far-reaching scheme. He sums it up like this:

"To grow flax on a sufficiently large scale for a permanent experiment, the state supplied money to interested farmers to purchase seed and raise the crop.

"To provide a market, the state penitentiary receives all the flax produced at market prices. And to become a self-supporting institution, the penitentiary's inmates are used to turn the raw flax into a valuable commodity. Sales then give the grower his return, repay the state and give additional funds to the convicts."

Like the Lys.

For centuries, the Courtrai district, in West Flanders, has led the world in quality linen and flax products. The flax, gathered from the fields, is retted in the River Lys. Exhaustive experiments prove this one of the reasons for Courtrai's world supremacy.

In retting, the flax plant is submerged in water for weeks, until the fibre is easily separated from the pith. The chemical content, of the Lys is ideal for this.

The Willamette here is found to have the same properties.

Other agencies have joined the state in the work. The Portland Chamber of Commerce financed purchase of special flax handling machinery for the farms. Special flax handling equipment was installed at the penitentiary. And local capital is organizing to erect a small linen mill.

Paying Already.

Results show a yield of two tons to the acre. If manufactured into linen in Oregon, each acre's product would be $28,000.

Already Oregon is making money on the experiment. After paying farmers market prices, the state's convict plant produces a "tow" for upholstery stuffing in carload lots at $110 a ton. Threshing the seed and manufacture of meal brings another $130 a ton.

In addition, there is the long fibre for weaving, which must be sent to Ireland. And there is market for all produced.

"In our experimental work we can show a profit of $100.00 at the penitentiary. And proper development of the flax industry will solve the penitentiary problem.

"We pay the convicts in this work a small wage. This enables them to save funds until their release. And if prisoner has a little cash when released he is redeemed. The profits from the indus ry lessen cost of maintaining the penitentiary—and that means lower taxes.

"America now imports $100,000,000 worth of linen yearly. If we can produce in this country that which we now import, we can do much for development of this section."

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—A. B. Rosenthal, aged 35 ended his life in front of his home late last night by swallowing the contents of a four ounce bottle of carbolic acid. RUBBER.

Only a few generations back, people were laughing at Goodyear who was toiling, his teeth set against ridicule, to make a useful substance out of sticky rubber.

Census shows that the rubber industry in America last year had an output valued at nearly 954 million dollars. Old Goodyear certainly would have a good laugh if he were alive today.

The airplane enthusiasts, now smiled at, will laugh later.

AMNESTY BILL ADOPTED.

Former Premier Caillaux and Louis Malvis Will Get Liberty.

PARIS, Dec. 17. — (Canadian Press.)—The Chamber of Deputies last night adopted the General Amensty Bill which, after having been passed by the chamber several months ago, was amended by the senate and returned to the chamber. The vote was 365 to 120.

This bill grants amnesty to former Premier Caillaux and Louis Malvis, former minister of the interior. Caillaux was originally convicted in 1918 for having "impeded prosecution of the war," while Malvis was convicted of communication with the enemy during the war.

A Yuletide House Party

Christmas arriving as it does this year on Thursday, a house party might well be arranged to start Wednesday morning with the arrival of the guests. Since no Christmas would be complete now without "Good Fellow" work being included, the very first suggestion would be to plan to distribute one's baskets that afternoon.

The children will enjoy Christmas ever so much more for having planned a happy Christmas for other kiddies.

After lunch the hostess might let the children help her arrange the baskets—each family in the party providing one. Dainty ribbons, colored tissue paper and greeting cards will assist in making the recipients feel that they are not forgotten at Christmas time.

After those entrusted with the delivery of the baskets have returned, and dinner has been disposed of—then will come the important event of the Christmas tree.

Some families prefer to give their presents from the tree, others prefer the pleasant illusion of allowing Santa to fill stockings, to be enjoyed Christmas morning. It might be arranged to give each of the group a small present, especially an amusing one, from the tree Christmas Eve. Then stockings must be hung in place, and ho for an early sleep, for the youngsters will certainly rise early in the morning.

Christmas morning will arrive with shouts of glee as pajamas fly for the fireplace and its fat stockings. The grown-ups will enjoy the revel too, and all will be more than busy till breakfast.

Perhaps a bit reluctantly the kiddies will lay aside their new toys and treasures to get ready for church. But think how nice it will be to come back to them later!

Christmas dinner is always a very special event. The afternoon will need no planning, for after such a hearty meal, there will be naps for the little folks, and quite possibly some of the grown-ups will want to slip away for a little rest. The older children will be busy rehearsing for their tableau in the evening.

An impromptu play could be arranged instead of the tableau if the spirit so moves. In any case the more spontaneous and informally costumed, the more fun it will be for all.

Very light refreshments will be plenty after the bounteous dinner, and then will come the evening's performance. If a play is given, it will probably fill the entire evening. If a tableau, then dancing can follow, with cakes and fruit punch for a pleasant interlude.

Since Saturday night will be the grand ball—a cotillion, a happy occupation for the youngsters will be the making of favors.

Friday, if that kind of a day, may offer out door diversions—skating, sleighing, and coasting. But if the weather be stormy, and the entire group be compelled to stay in, the cotillion favors can be made by the kiddies, and card tables supplied for the grown-ups. An impromptu concert would be enjoyable for Friday evening. Of course all the Christmas music that can be found, must be brought out, and the evening should be completed with the singing of Christmas Carols.

Saturday morning might lend itself to outdoor sports—or perhaps the afternoon. But either way, time must be reserved for the decoration of the ball room for the dance.

It can be easily imagined that dinner Saturday evening will be a sketchy affair with the thoughts of most of the group on the coming ball. Such an exodus to dress, after dinner! Upstairs corridors will see flying figures in kimonas, making wild dashes for opposite rooms.

Presently the hostess will emerge, to be ready to receive the guests arriving for the evening's festivities. Music will be heard, and the house-guests too will appear. The favors for the cotillion, having all been made at home, will receive more than their usual share of appreciation. It is hoped that "a pleasant evening will be had by all."

Sunday morning will find folks rather sleepy, but refreshed with some hot coffee and toast, they will make the effort, I am sure, to attend church as usual.

After Sunday dinner will arrive that regrettable hour—the departure. But happy memories at least will remain, and for every one, there will linger in thought for many days, perhaps years, pretty pictures and incidents of their joyous Christmas house party.

Peterboro Defeats Parkdale 3 to 1 And Will Represent The O.H.A. in S.P.A. Finals With Soo

THIRD SUCCESSIVE VICTORY FOR PETES AGAINST CREAM OF O. H. A. MARKED BY SENSATIONAL FINISH

Parkdale Scored Only Goal in First Period—Petes Tied It Up in Second and Flashed in Front Two Goals in the Home Stretch.

BERT McLEOD BROKE UP GAME WITH GREAT RUSH THROUGH PARKDALE TEAM

Parker and Rose Got Peterboro's Third Goal on Beautiful Combination—Whole Team Again Provided Big Surprise For Arena Fans.

PARKDALE MINUS HARRY WATSON.

Peterboro surprised the hockey world for the third time in succession last night, when the blue and white sweaterd team beat Parkdale Canoe Club in the senior S.P.A. semi-final game at the Toronto Arena by 3 goals to 1 coming from behind, as they had to do against Preston, to turn the trick.

The Paddlers were without their star left wing Harry Watson who was suffering from a bad cold but even without the crack Olympic player, the Parkdale team with the services of such clever and experienced puck chasers as Don Jeffrey, Pork Romeril, Mose Lount, Dr. Harris and Frank Sullivan was regarded by most of the critics as amply strong enough to take last year's intermediate runners up into camp. In fact the Paddlers were quoted as 3 to 1 favourites.

The conquerors of Niagara Falls and Preston, however, succeeded in convincing the Toronto fans that they were a better team than Parkdale with Watson off the latter's line and that even with their ace in action the Canoeists would have been hard pressed to put the Petes into the dicard.

Not a Fluke

Last night's victory which gives the Peterboro team the honour of representing the O.H.A. in the S. P. A. final against the Soo Grey hounds on Saturday, was no fluke.

The Petes staved off the Paddlers when they opened out at a furious clip in the first period, held them to one goal in that session, came on in the second period and outplayed them by a wide margin, although only tieing the score, and then won a spectacular triumph by registering two beautiful markers in the last twenty minutes.

By periods it was 1-0 for Parkdale 1-1 and 3 to 1 for the Petes.

Effective Defence Work.

Parkdale scored their only goal at the game 18 minutes after play started and were blanked for the remaining 42 minutes, a record which shows how effective was the defensive side of the Petes play. Something that is even more convincingly demonstrated by the fact that three such strong clubs as Niagara Falls, Preston and Parkdale have been able to score but four goals against the blue and white in three games.

....The Petes' stubborn defensive work and the speed and aggressiveness of their attack—even though there were lost opportunities on plays that with practice will bring counters later on—won the verdict for them. As in the Preston game the first period was then worse and they did not hit their stride until after the first rest. They they cut loose so as that the side line experts figured they would collapse in the last dash and prove easy picking on end for the Paddlers big fast and tricky team. But once more the sharps guessed wrong for the honours in the final period all went to the Petes who stood the pace in spite of no practice, as well if not better than the losers.

Parkdale had the advantage in weight and used it freely with the result that the winners received more bumps than in their two first games combined, and Parker, Ranger and Bailey in particular are carrying souvenirs of the victory. It was not a tame affair at any stage and Referee Lou Marsh directed considerable traffic toward the penalty box with the Paddlers conspicuously in the majority.

It was one of the best games of the season according to Toronto enthusiasts and the pace particularly in the last two periods never flagged keeping the fans on their feet all the way.

Parkdale Strong.

Mose Lount took Watson's place at left wing and came close to being Parkdale's best player—always excepting McAllister the ex-Sarnia net guardian whose work throughout was spectacular. Lount rushed repeatedly and showed speed and stick-handling ability, while over on the other wing Jeffery pumped in some beautiful shots but completely failed to beat Dwyer. Romeril's best work was in checking the bulky centre man being of great help to his defence. Of the rearguard Harris who was a team-mate of Bert McLeod with Varsity last year was much the best and his dash for Parkdale's only goal was a clever exhibition of stick-handling. McAllister, with a style all his own, performed sensationally in the nets, making some beautiful saves after his defence had been beaten. His work prevented the Petes from taking the lead in the second period.

About the Petes:

The best criterion of Joe Dwyer's performance in the nets for Peterboro is the fact that he was beaten but once and that on a shot from the goal mouth. The veteran was accurate and cool and performed at the top of his form.

Parker and McLeod, both on the defensive and on the attack, gave their best exhibition at the series. They handled Parkdales dangerous attacks with cool judgment and were very difficult to pull out of position. Both rushed splendidly and it was on rushes by McLeod who went through alone to put the Petes ahead in the last period and Parker who engineered the play on which Ray Rose registered the final tally that the game was won. Halpin subbed on the defence and was always effective.

Up in front the whole attacking division played sparkling hockey. It was the best performance so far this season by Collins and Rose, who did immense amount of useful checking in centre ice, while Rose figured in two of the scoring plays. Ranger also went great guns until Romeril gave him a heavy toss half-way through the final period putting him out of commission for the balance of the game.

Bailey was fast and effective all the way and Burgess repeated his Preston performance, showing a great turn of speed and pulling off some spectacular sprints. Foley and Salmon were only used for a short time but gave all they had while they were out there.

The line-up:

Parkdale:
Goal: McAllister.
Defence: Harris Staines.
Centre: Romeril.
Right wing: Jeffrey.
Subs: Sullivan, Applegath, Harrington, Mogan.

Peterboro:
Goal: Dwyer.
Defence: Parker, McLeod.
Centre: Collins.
Right wing: Bailey.
Subs.: Rose, Burgess, Halpin, Foley and Salmon.
Deferee: Lou. E. Marsh, Toronto.

First Period.

Parkdale had the edge for the greater part of the first period. The Petes were slow in getting started, and for a while the clever attacks of Lount, Romerill and Jeffrey kept the visiting rear guard busy. However, McLeod and Parker were unflurried in spite of the vigor of the Paddlers' attack and held them out in good style, while Dwyer as usual rose to the occasion and blocked with cool accuracy. The Petes rushes of a solo or a two-man variety did not prove very successful early in the period and the advantage was with the Toronto representatives. However it was not until eighteen minutes had elapsed that the Canoe Club lads were able to ring the bell. Harris, the elongated defence man, was the successful raider. He broke away nicely with Jeffrey teaming with him, and crossed the Petes up by going through himself instead of passing. The play carried him in on top of Dwyer and he scored at close range.

Peterboro 0; Parkdale 1.

The blue shirts came to life with a vengeance then and in the two minutes that remained McAllister was the busiest individual in the Arena. The Petes swept in on him, and three times in quick succession he blocked shots from a mix-up in front of the nets when a score seemed certain.

The Petes' Period.

The second period saw the turning of the tide. The Petes had found themselves and showing more speed and better team work than in the first session, carried the attack to Parkdale throughout. They were aided by a bunch of Paddler penalties, the Toronto crew being twice minus two men at once. They had to fight desperately to keep the visitors off the scoring sheet the first time, but succeeded, McAllister being chiefly responsible. They were not so lucky the second time although they did hold the fort until one of the absentees returned. They were still a man short, however, when the Petes evened the count.

Rose broke away from centre, transferred the rubber to Ranger as the defence was reached, and the left wing, steadying himself for the shot, drilled a bullet like drive into the corner of the net.

For the rest of the period the blue and white were all over the Paddlers but bad luck around the nets, assisted by fast work by McAllister, prevented them taking the lead. However they were thoroughly satisfied when they left the ice for the second rest.

Putting Over the Win.

There was no let up in the pace when the third period opened. It was realized that the next counter would mean the S.P.A. finals for the team that scored and both squads cut loose with every last fraction of speed. The result was five minutes of lightning hockey with honours about even until Bert McLeod came through with the play that spelled victory. He broke up a dangerous Parkdale rush and broke down the centre at top speed. As he reached the Paddlers defence he swerved sharply to the right and swept past them and hitting on the eight cylinders drove a low swept shot into the net well out of McAllister reach.

Peterboro 2, Parkdale 1.

....It was a beautiful play and it won the game for the Petes who immediately droved back into a defence game, satisfied to nurse their own goal lead.

Parkdale threw every bit of hockey LORE they knew into play to pull the game out of the fire in the fifteen minutes that remained and they came streaming in at a pace that was surprising but the Petes strung out across the arena handled their raids with good judgment and Dwyer took care of everything they flung at him from the side. With only two minutes to go the blue and white cinchtd the game when Parker intercepted a pass and broke away with Rose in attendance. Parker skated aroun1 one defence man, gave Rose a beautiful pass to beat the other and Ray pr1ied McAllister out and slipped the rubber into the corner of the empty net for a spectacular goal.

Parkdale fought determinedly for the short time that remained but could not penetrate the ranks of the triumphant Petes who skated on S.P.A. finalists—the sole survivor of the eight O.H.A. teams to enter the preliminary series.

FIRPO HUMBLED, OFF TO FRANCE

Places Himself Under Management of Jimmy Deforest on His Return.

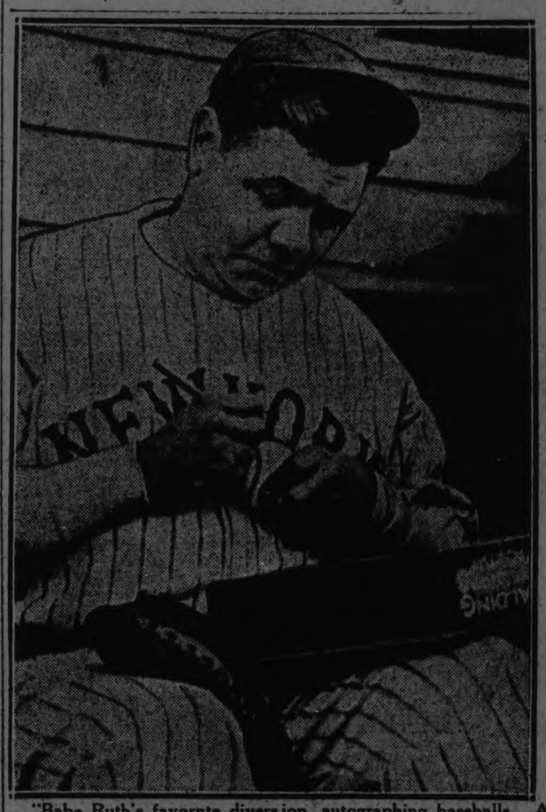
PLEASURE TRIP.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17.—Luis Angel Firpo plans comeback by which he hopes to climb into the ring for another title match with Jack Dempsey, who came within a few seconds of losing his crown to the giant Argentine a year ago. This was disclosed yesterday when Firpo, departing suddenly on a six week's pleasure trip to France, Spain and Italy, equally as unexpectedly announced he had again arranged to train, on his return, under Jimmy Deforest, veteran ring mentor, who piloted the South American to most of his important victories prior to the Dempsey match.

Firpo's decision to go back to Deforest from whom the Argentine separated after becoming dissatisfied with the veteran trainer's discipline was said to have been influenced by the Argentine's conviction that he needed more expert handling if he was not to pass into fistic oblivion. His successive defeats this year at the hands of Harry Wills and Charley Weinert proved to him, his friends say, that his own methods of training were not productive of successful results.

Firpo plans a busy ring campaign upon his return from France. He has eight matches under conideration, including a return bout with Weinert and is confident that he can climb back into the front ranks of Dempey's rivals.

Deforest last night confirmed the arrangement announced by Firpo but said he had not yet signed a formal contract.



"Babe Ruth's favorite diversion, autographing baseballs. A conservative estimate is ten thousand are given away each year as souvenirs.

When Not Hitting Home Runs Babe Throws a Mean Signature.

GOOD ADVERTISING.

Has Autographed Probably 10,000 Balls as Souvenirs Costing $15,000.

BY BILLY EVANS

Hitting home runs is Babe Ruth's first duty to the public.

Fandom gets a greater thrill out of a Ruthian home run than other circuit swats.

A lazy fly ball that just manages to clear the fence, if propelled by Ruth, is far more thrilling than a terrific drive by a personage of less fame.

It's cruel but true that Babe Ruth home runs have a distinctive appeal. No doubt because he was the originator of the home-run idea on a large scale.

When not busy swatting the ball farther than any other human being ever hit it, Ruth is catering to the public in another direction.

Ruth Great Showman.

The Babe is a great showman. He realizes his signature on a baseball makes a friend, is good advertising for the game. As a result he is never too busy to oblige.

All of which brings us to the crux of our story. How many Babe Ruth autographed baseballs are given away every year?

A very conservative estimate would be 10,000. In all probability it is many times that figure.

Every major league player and umpire receives at least 10 requests during the summer from various friends for a baseball with Ruth's signature.

Priezd Souvenirs.

Figuring 25 players to each of the eight clubs, it means that 200 players receive at least 10 requests for a souvenir ball.

That line of reasoning would account for 2,000 or one-fifth of the autographed balls that I estimated given away.

No one, not even Ruth, has any idea of how many souvenirs he personally donates to admiring fans.

One day last summer I went into the Yankee clubhouse at New York to have Trainer Wood attend to a minor injury. It was an hour before game time. Only Ruth and Wood were in the room at the time.

Real Advertising.

The Babe was busy autographing balls as Wood removed them from the sealed boxes. Ruth was just finishing the last of six dozen.

They were to be sent to charitable organizations all over the country. It is really surprising the figure that some of the Ruth autographed balls have brought at auction for a worthy cause.

Ten thousand baseballs probably cost about $15,000. That may seem like a lot of money to be literally tossed away. Yet, after all, it is the cheapest and best kind of publicity.

EXAMINER TAKE THREE STRAIGHT FROM DENTISTS

The Examiner continued their winning streak and also their high rolling when they took three straight from the Dentists in the Mercantile Five Pin League, at the Water Street Alleys last night.

The Examiner outfit have been turning in some big scores lately and last night was no exception. They rolled two games well over a thousand and the other was over eight-hundred. This is great rolling. In their last six games the Examiner has had four over a 1000, one over 900 and the other over 800.

By virtue of their three straight wins last night the Examiner stand a good chance of tieing of winning the first half of the Mercantile League.

George Cairns broke all the record scores in the Mercantile League last night, bowling in sensational style. Cairns rolled a big high three game score of 721, topping the former high three game score which was 710 and which was held by A. Parker. He also broke his own record for the high single game, rolling 299. The former score was 286. He will in all probability have the high average of the league also.

But beside Cairns' high rolling there were others in the spotlight. Dr. Buchanan had three nice games totaling up 608, and had a high single of 273. George Taylor had a score of 586, with a high single of 276, while George Johnson rolled a nice score of 584, with singles of 239 and 235 and Frank Gray had 528 with a single of 220. Most of the bowlers on these two teams are just being introduced to the game and have not yet hit the proper stride. After a few more games they should be turning in good scores.

HOW FLYING FISH FLIES.

Nearest Thing to Nature's Aeroplane.

Always interesting as a curiosity of nature, the flying fish has received increased attention from scientists since all methods of flight, natural and artificial, became of practical importance. A recent issue of Nature sums up the evidence and conclusions of the latest investigations, which show that the flying fish is the nearest thing in nature to an aeroplane. It is has been definitely established that the fish "flies" by using his pectoral fins as planes (not as wings), and his elongated lower tail fin as a propeller, so that he is as like as may be to a monoplane with its air screw in the place of its rudder.

But the propeller fin does not beat on the air but on the water. The fish gets its start by rising out of the water while swimming at full speed. Its body comes clear, and its planes are at once spread; then its tail vibrates in the water, and the added impulse sends the whole fish, tail and all, up into the air, through which its soars. During the "flight" the fish can renew its velocity by gliding down until its tail again touches the water and vibrates in it and it can do this two or three times before the flight ends. The pectoral fins are held steady all the time, and act solely as sustaining planes; if they do vibrate, as some observers have stated, it is due to the pressure of wind. In a strong wind the fish can only rise against it, just as aeroplane always rises easiest the wind, and if the fish wants to fly in the same direction as wind it has to start against it, then circle round. Its powers of direction are very limited; it can only describe a curve to right or of wide radius, and if it wants change direction quickly it has drop right back into the water, there, and start again on the line.

SOCIAL EVENING AT FAIRMOUNT CHURCH

Address By Miss Rorke, Returned Missionary, on Japanese Life.

CAVAN, December 15.—The social evening and tea, given by the W.M.S. of Fairmount Church Friday evening in honour of Rorke, missionary on furlough, a very pleasant and interesting event.

Those who were present enjoyed very much, her talk on the work being done.

She confined herself to describing two phases of the work—"in the slums", and "in the kindergarten."

The children in whom the great hope for the Evangelism of Japan lies, meet at the kindergarten every morning and during the session religious instruction is given.

Miss Rorke delivered her address in Japanese costume. She explained the use of the different curios in her collection, and told interesting facts about the originals of the pictures exhibited. Some of her curios were articles gathered after the earthquake.

During the evening the choir rendered two selections and a solo was sung by Miss Daisy Murray.

There were not as many present as the ladies would have liked to see, but those who were present found it very interesting and instructive and felt it a privilege to hear the work described by one who has laboured among these people for seven years.

Supper served in the Sunday School Room added much to the enjoyment of those present. Mount Pleasant appointment was well represented.

Those from Cavan appointments who attended were:

Rev. R. T. and Mrs. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. R. Matchett and Mr. Jas. Paul.

Sermon by Mr. Greatrix

On Sunday last the Rev. B Greatrix, occupied the pulpits on Cavan Circuit.

Mr. Greatrix is a former pastor and is always well received. His sermon was delivered from the words of Christ to his disciples "Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid. He emphasized the thought, that we must not judge of God's attitude towards us, by the storms which come.

Troubles often prove to be real blessings. He drew attention to the fact, that it was Jesus' well beloved disciples who were caught in the storm, and that at the time they were implicitly obeying the Master as he had constrained them to enter into the ship. In the heaviest trouble that comes to us, if we but listen and wait, we, too can hear His voice.

Mr. Harry McIvor returned home from Dr Wright's hospital, Toronto, this week.

Mr. G. Parker, Toronto was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. [illegible] over the week end.

OLIVE BRANCH OUT.

Baseball Moguls Hope for Peace Between Landis and Johnson.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press)—Settlement of all grievances existing between Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner, and President Ban Johnson, of the American League, is expected to be reached when the sixteen club owners of the American and National Leagues reconvene here to-day in the joint session postponed in New York a week ago.

Prior to the opening of this meeting, Colonel Jacob Ruppert, of the New York Americans, E. S. Barnard, president of the Cleveland Club, and President Thomas Shibe, of the Philadelphia Americans, constituting the American League Peace Committee, will extend the olive branch to Commissioner Landis at his office in an attempt to effect a reconciliation between him and the American Executive.

BESSIE BROOKS EASY WINNER AT DUFFERIN

No More Racing Now Until Christmas Day.

TORONTO, December 17. — The racing at Dufferin Park yesterday afternoon consisted of the unfinished race carried over from Monday, which owing to darkness, was unable to be decided then.

There were four heats to this race run yesterday afternoon, with Billy Abdell and Bessie Brook, each taking a heat and June Custer, the player's favorite taking the other two. It was "free gate" day and a fair-sized crowd of fans were on hand.

To-day's race concludes the racing here until Christmas day, when there will be four days of high class racing, all races carrying purses of $400 and with the pick of the horses stabled here entered for these events, large fields and keen contests can be looked for. This meet will be held under the auspices of the Toronto Driving Club, with "Sam" McBride doing the starting

The first heat this afternoon was reduced to four starters, owing to scratches. At the get-away, Bessie Brooks the pole horse, got out in front, and was never headed though threatened all the way by Billy Abdell and June Custer. Bessie Brooks took the heat from Abdell and Detour with June Custer pulling up with a smashed tire

The second heat of this race today was between two horses, Bessie Brooks and June Custer, each having two previous heat wins chalked to their credit Bessie Brooks led all the way and had little difficulty in taking the heat, and the long end of the purse.

A CARPET BALL GAME

The score being 19 to 14. A return game will be played in the near future. It is the intention to form a Carpet Ball League among the several Clubs in the city and the Sons of England will play All Saints on Tuesday evening next.

GIVES PETERBORO CREDIT FOR WIN

Parkdale Team Has No Alibis, Declares Lou Marsh.

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—(Canadian Press).—Commenting to-day on the Parkdale-Peterboro game last night, Lou Marsh in Toronto Star says:

The Greyhounds had better come down here fit and ready for a wolf hunt or they will go back with blue and white bows on their tails.

This Peterboro team played real hockey to defeat Parkdale last night and they fully deserved their victory.

Parkdale has no alibis. The west-end paddlers, or at least most of them, are too game and fair-minded to alibi themselves, for any defeat.

There may be a reason for their defeat last night, but the reason is not an alibi.

Harry Watson, their scoring ace, was at home juggling quinine and hot lemonade.

Probably that is the reason that the paddlers went down to defeat.

Peterboro defeated the best team they could muster, without the Olympic star, and they beat them on their merits, and that is all there is to it. But do not run away with the idea that this Lift Lock City crew is not one swell hockey club. It is Intermediate in name only. There isn't a Senior team in town which could toy with that fast-skating crowd.

The Intermediate team turned loose smart, fast hockey last night. It took every ounce they had last night to bring home the bacon, but they toted it home. The Petes staggered off the ice last night all in but shoe-laces.

INTERMEDIATE FOR THE PETES

Will Stay in the Lower Series if the O.H.A. Will Permit—No Game Here With Soo.

The O.H.A. executive is meeting to-night and Peterboro's location in the O.H.A. series will be definitely decided The Petes have come to the conclusion that they would prefer to remain intermediates reaching that decision finally last night but the O.H.A. committee may not agree with it.

The Mail and Empire says:—

Though Peterboro defeated Parkdale last night the club has decided not to accept the O.H.A. recommendation to play in the senior series this season, but will instead drop back to the intermediate ranks and accept a bye, a group for the Petes to play in not being available without imposing some hardship on the other clubs, due to Peterboro's isolated location. The O.H.A. was notified yesterday of Peterboro's decision which means that the intermediate runners up of last season will not play any scheduled game until the second round commences the first week in February. The Petes will endeavor to arrange exhibition games to keep the players in condition.

The decision made by the Peterboro Club is to be regretted for the Petes have shown in the games played in the S.P.A. series that they are a team strong enough for the senior series, and with a mighty good chance of winning their group or at least getting into a playoff for the right to enter the senior finals. And if they did win the group would be favored to go right on to the championship. The fans who witnessed the Pete's great victory in last night's game will be greatly disappointed if Peterboro does not play senior.

Mike Rodden says in the Globe:

After defeating Parkdale last night the Peterboro players and officials must be convinced that the "Petes" are a real senior aggregation. At the O.H.A. meeting here to-day it is not likely that Peterboro will be given permission to play in the intermediate series. If this were to happen, the Easterners who have beaten Niagara Falls, Preston and Parkdale in succession, would be given a bye in the intermediate series until the O.H.A. second round.

Local fans will be sorry to learn that the game with the Soo Greyhounds here on Monday night, is not likely to materialize. The Soo team asked for a guarantee much larger than the Petes could possibly give them, and unless they come down in their demands there is little chance of the game being played.

Eight O.H.A. teams and the Canadian Soo entered the S.P.A. series this year, the N.O.H.A.winners being given a bye in the finals. In the first round Varsity beat Kitchener, Preston defeated Galt, Parkdale walloped Aura Lea and Peterboro eliminated Niagara Falls. In the second round Peterboro won from Preston. In the semi-finals last night the Petes by defeating Parkdale won the right to meet the Allen Cup holders in the final for the S.P.A. trophy.

RUSSIAN GRAND DUCHESS TRAVELS DEADHEAD ON TEN DAY VISIT TO THE UNITED STATES

Hotel Managers Offer Royal Suites Without Charge, and Americans Contribute Ten Dollars Each For Side Show.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17. — (United Press).—When one is a Grand Duchess of Russia and one's husband is Pretender to a somewhat ephemeral throne of all the Russians, one rides, lodges and dines free, gratis and for nothing, even in democracies, it was disclosed today.

With the Grand Duchess Cyril on the high seas, homeward bound, or at least Cobourg bound, one of her hostesses, Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, prime mover of the Monday Opera Club, which is to be self-appointed as the keystone of a new '500,' the zenith of society revealed to-day that the ten-day visit here had been the occasion for an ambitious publicity stunt.

The Grand Duchess was given free transportation and lodging — all for the sake of advertising. As Mrs. Loomis put it: "The French line courteously provided the passage to and fro.

The Waldorf Astoria here courteously offered their royal suite without charge, and so did the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia and the New Willard Hotel, in Washington. The Rolls-Royce Co. placed cars at the disposal of the Grand Duchess and her party.

Hundreds of persons after being approved by the membership committee of the Monday Opera Club, paid $10 apiece for the benefit of Russian relief work, and received in return the privilege of kissing the Grand Duchess's hand.

Mrs. Loomis, at the pier when the Grand Duchess sailed, apologized profusely for the presence of ship news photographers and reporters. But the Grand Duchess did not mind. She was almost as democratic as her American admirers were otherwise.

THE GERMAN CABINET.

Stresemann Will Give His Answer This Evening.

(By Carl D. Groat, United Press Staff Correspondent)

BERLIN, Dec. 17. — President Ebert to-day asked Dr. Stresemann, leader of the Nationalist Party and Foreign Minister in the Marx Cabinet to attempt formation of a new ministry.

Stresemann, who recently went to a Sanitorium when the German Cabinet situation became particularly involved, will give his answer this evening.

Although the Nationalists are the second strongest party in the new Reichstag as a result of the National elections ten days ago, they represent the right wing of parliament and as such have not the sympathy of the powerful parties of the moderate centre group. Stresemann knows it is doubtful if he can form a cabinet that will resist opposition in the Reichstag, he has not been over anxious therefore to undertake the task.

KINGSTON, Ont., December 17. — (Special.) — Judge Lavall handed out his decision this morning in the case of Ald.-elect Jos. Nash, who it was held, was not qualified to sit in the council, owing to the fact that he was disqualified, and declared the seat in the council vacant. This means that there will be an election for the vacancy.

It was thought that Ald. William Peters, the next highest candidate, would be given the seat in the council. Mr. Nash headed the polls in St. Lawrence ward, so the decision means there will have to be another election.

(By Ray G. Marshall, United Press Correspondent.)

Kalgan was looted and partly burned by mutinous Chinese troops Monday night. Some American firms suffered heavy losses, but there were no casualties among the foreigners.

U.F.O. REMAINS SEPARATE GROUP

President of U.F.O. Takes Rap at the Progressive Party.

TORONTO, Dec. 17.—(Canadian ress).—That United Farmers of Ontario must stay in politics as separate group was the contention of W. Amos president of the U.F.O. in his address to the convention of that body here this morninfg. He took a rap at the new progressive party stating "As your presiding officer I might be permitted to point out the embarrassing and some what anomalous position in which the executive have been placed by the recent action of some of its members in their attendance at the convention which launched the progressive party." He said that the people were all at sea with regard to what is the proper function of the U. F. O. in political since the plebiscite.

A recommendation that provincial grants to townships for road purposes be stopped and was overwhelmingly defeated by the meeting which passed a resolution that the government pay the entire cost of provincial highways. J. J. Morrison. General Secretary will eport this afternoon. He will state that the U.F.O. was not intended for service of those who would "fa r the farmers." He advises the U.F.O. to to maintain its control of the Farmers Sun.

"Although some progress has been made towards a clearer and more definite directions of purpose, yet no year's strong pronouncement of the policy by the membership has been delivered," says Mr. Morrison. "Until such a lead is given no real progress will be made and the organization will continue to flounder." Mr Morrison pointed out that in other respects and Branches there had been splendid progress during the year especially in co-operative Company.

President, George A. Bothwell, Owen Sound.
Vice-president, Jas Ross, Woodbridge.
Third Members of the Executive A. J. Gilroy, Alvinston.

PROFITS OF MIDDLEMEN ARE SAID TO BE SMALL

Make at Present About 1 1-2 Per Cent. Profit at Present Price.

LONDON, Dec. 17. — (Canadian Press).—Sir Herbert Thomas Robson, chairman and president of the Wheat Experts' Company, Incorporated, New York, official agency to the Allied Governments in giving evidence to-day before the Royal Commission inquiring into the food prices, dealt with movements of the wheat crops in Canada and United States.

Sir Herbert said the profits of middlemen in the United States and Canada was very small. It was safe to say that very large quantities of wheat were moved from farms to the ocean ships on the basis of two cents or less per bushel profit to the middleman. That was to say, the profit was about 1¼ per cent. at present prices of wheat.

The Government of the United States and Canada, Sir Herbert continued, in recent years had done everything in their power to encourage higher prices of grain, especially wheat, as it was evident that there were long periods when wheat would be sold a good deal below the cost of production. It was not unreasonable to presume that if any combination of buyers in Great Britain or the Government itself attempted to force down the price of wheat imported from North America by controlling buying, the Governments of the United States and Canada would take measures to prevent the exploitation of American and Canadian farmers.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"THE DARK SWAN"

"The Dark Swan" is from Ernest Pascal's famous story.

The popularity of physical beauty on one hand and the dreary lonesomeness of the plain girl, is the absorbing theme of "The Dark Swan," translated onto the screen from Ernest Pascals' "best seller," which will be offered movie patrons by the Capitol Theatre to-day and Thursday.

With his vivid pen Ernest Pascal has painted the deep struggle of the plain sister, whose charm lies in her brilliant mind and sweet disposition as opposed to her more beautiful sister, who is given love and adulation with a lavish hand, for no other reason than that she possesses what her sister has not—"sex appeal."

Both sisters go their separate ways—one gay and filled with roses, the other grey and weary—until Lewis Dike comes along to complete the triangle. Both Eve and Cornelia want his love, but Dike, notwithstanding his sympathetic affection for the "dark swan", is swept off his feet by the gorgeous Eve, whom he marries, only to find the truth of the homely saying that "all is not gold that glitters."

In the photoplay that was produced by Warner Bros., from Mr. Pascals' novel, Marie Prevost, with her exotic beauty will portray the colorful peacock sister to Cornelia, who will be interpreted by Helene Chadwick beloved by fans for the wistful charm of her personality. The man in the case will be none other than Monte Blue, while Lilyan Tash man, Arthur Rankin, Mary McLaren, John Patrick, Vera Lewi and others complete the cast of "The Dark Swan" which was directed by Millard Webb.

AT THE ROYAL.

"STRANGER" ENDING SUCCESSFUL RUN.

"Welcome Stranger," the screen version of Aaron Hoffman's great Broadway play of the same name, closes its run at the Royal Theatre to-night.

It is a humorous story of how an enterprising Jew with a sense of humour overcomes the racial prejudice of a small New England town, puts it on the map and becomes a leading citizen.

"Welcome Stranger" was adapted for the screen by Willard Mack and James Young. The latter also directed.

HOOT GIBSON IN "BROADWAY OR BUST" ROYAL TO-MORROW.

He'd show New York new tricks with his million dollars.

And sure as shootin' New York awoke one day to see Dave Holles and his pal, bedecked in five gallon hats, riding real bronchos into a first class hotel!

An idle hope come true! Dave awoke the kingpin of Broadway, and the sensation of society.

And little he had ever dreamed that Virginia Redding, his sweetheart from childhood, were ever to haughtily bid him good-bye.

Little, too, had he realized that there lay a great radium deposit beneath his ranch. A million dollars! Then he buried himself in mail order catalogues.

So wealthy and interesting were these cowboys sensation-seeking society took them in immediately—to Virginia's surprise.

Then Dave deliberately snubbed her.

Came a day when she heard that she was in dire need of a real man's help that she had gone yachting with a vicious type of "lounge lizard."..... Did Dave pass it off lightly? Was he really indifferent?

See Hoot Gibson's latest sensation "Broadway or Bust," at the Royal Theatre next Thursday and enjoy a perfect "Hoot" treat.

HUNGER

The world's grain crops this year are 574 million bushels less than what the people need.

That means widespread hunger.

And hunger is one of the chief causes of wars.

Nature for the present is on the side of the militarists.

It's difficult to get a man or nation to fight when the stomach is full.

DRESSING FOR CHRISTMAS

By HEDDA HOYT.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 17.—(United Press).—Winter's fashions have been launched and everyone knows fairly well what's what in fashions. Still, many of us are wondering what we will wear during the Christmas holidays and what little furbelows we can add to brighten up our wardrobe for this occasion.

A few outstanding styles and new details will help familiarize us with the present mode. First, one thinks of color! The newest color to be launched is grey and it is being worn for day wear and for evening wear. One who looks like a lovely grey moth is decidedly chic. Shoes, hosiery, hat, gloves, umbrella, etc., add to the chic of the grey outfit. The grey evening gown of chiffon with bouffant skirt of layers of chiffon and with the bodice suggesting the curve of the figure would be one which would be noticed in a throng of more colorful frocks. Either silver or grey satin slippers could be worn with it, and if one wishes to carry a lovely ostrich fan which is shaded from grey to orchid, one has a decidedly lovely effect.

Then, one can add a new note in one's appearance by changing the hair-do. Many of the younger women are tiring of the ordinary marcelled bob and are wearing ringlets and bangs. They are also wearing the leaf bandeau around the back of the head, rather than across the forehead. The jeweled flower is another new hair ornament which is popular. Matrons are achieving a smart appearance by wearing the rear locks turned up in rolled effect at the nape of the neck. Those who can, are wearing the hair parted in the middle and drawn backwards from the forehead. There is no sign, however, of showing the ears this season.

Dresses remain about as they began this season; decidedly straight and without semblance of waistline for day wear, with short, tight skirts. Sleeves are generally long and tight-fitting. Fur is used a great deal as a hem-border.

Evening Frocks.

Evening frocks grow more bouffant in line and trimmed skirts far out-number the straight-lined ones. Velvets and chiffons are the popular material. Velvets, however, favor the single side trim rather than the layers of materials to give the bouffant skirt effect. Amber colored velvet is very new and a lovely shade of crimson is also finding favor. With the bouffant skirts, one sees semi-fitted bodices with a suggestion of waistline, and it looks as though the corset were to be worn again, for evening wear, at least.

As to coats, they are as slender as possible, and many have no trimming other than a band of fur about the hem. The collars and cuffs are untrimmed. Collars, by the way, are small affairs this season and the coat with a wide shawl collar is decidedly passe.

The newest thing in sports wear is the high-necked sweater which resembles the football sweater. These will be popular for all outdoor sports. Just now the all-white sweater is trying to compete with the bright red one.

Small felt hats which fit the head snugly are still the rage for street wear. They are worn with the most dressy of costumes as well as with the more tailored types. Velvet hats are lacking in chic as compared with these smartly made felts. A new felt model which hails from Paris is made exactly like a man's hat and its crown is worn high and not dented in. While these high crowns are decidedly chic, there are few women who can wear them becomingly. They are smarter on the matron than on the flapper, as it takes a certain amount of dignity to wear them becomingly.

Fashionable Fur.

Leopard may be called the fur of the season, as it is the most frequently seen fur. Whether the entire coat effect or used as a trimming on the cloth coat, it spells smartness itself. Among the most startling effects are the yellow or red cloth coats with collar of leopard and with a narrow band of this fur extending from collar to hemline. Plaid coats trimmed in the same manner are also new.

Here, one might offer a suggestion for the wearer of the leopard-trimmed coat. The little muff of leopard is the newest thing in Paris, and since small muffs are considered ultra chic this year, they would add greatly to the leopard-trimmed coat.

4 GALLONS BEER, 2 OF WINE, 1 QUART LIQUOR

Saskatchewan Farmers Seek Amendment— Want a Larger Allowance.

REGINA, December 17. — The clause in the new Saskatechewan liquor act, limiting per diem quantities of liqcor to be sold to an individual to four gallons of beer, two gallons of wine and one quart of hard liquor, came in for strong criticism during the discussion of the act in the legislature last night.

The opponents of the clause thought that while the per diem allowances were liberal, some provision might be made for the monthly or bi-weekly shipment of larger quantities for the benefit of those who live in the country districts with no stores close at hand. The premier would not promise to increase the allowances.

BALDWIN PROPOSES COMMITTEE TO STIMULATE EMPIRE'S TRADE

British Premier's Plan Rather Vaguely and Briefly Sketched to Commons.

REVERSE POLICY

Imports of Fruit and Meat From Dominions Specially Mentioned.

LONDON, December 18. — Premier Baldwin yesterday outlined somewhat briefly and vaguely, the British government's intentions for reversing the policy of the late MacDonald government, which, on the ground that they were of a protective tendency, abolished a number of war duties imposed on various commodities under the Safeguarding of Industries Act.

Mr. Baldwin repudiated the idea of using the Safeguarding of Industries Act as a wedge to introduce a protective tariff and admitted that taxation of food was not practical politics. He also stipulated that any industries requiring to be safeguarded must prove themselves important and efficient and to be suffering from exceptional competition through depreciated exchanges, bounties, subsidies or debased labor conditions in competing countries.

The Premier suggested submitting the question of lapsed duties and the like to an economist committee, which he said first should deal with meat and fruit. These articles could not be dealt with by taxes but he hoped that it was not beyond the wit of man to devise some plan by which, without taxing the food of the British people, it might be possible to modify the course of trade for the benefit of the Empire.

It was argued by the Premier that the Labor government abolished certain duties.

The duties had not been in force long enough to prove accurately their value. He proposed that any duty levied under the Safeguarding of Industries Act should be a general and not a particular duty. Discriminating duties against particular countries had their drawbacks in working, while a general treaty was no breach of the favored nations clauses in treaties.

Opposition Comment.

The Premier was strongly attacked by the late Chancellor of the Exchequer, Philip Snowden, and former Premier Lloyd George. Mr. Lloyd George declared the Premier really had announced a general tariff and that his method was not a very straightforward way of imposing a tariff.

Mr. Snowden said that unless the Premier more fully explained his plan in order to make it more intelligible, all he could say was that it was the most impracticable and ridiculous suggestion that ever emanated from the brain, even of a tariff reformer.

Mr. Baldwin in the course of his speech had proposed that the cash equivalent of any benefit that would be lost to the Empire through the dropping of food duties should be devoted to projects for developing the trade of the Empire and marketing, and that this amount would aggregate a million of pounds yearly. Mr. Sowden criticized this proposal a reducing the maintenance of the Empire to cash value—holding the Empire together by subvention.

Churchill Approves.

How Winston Spencer Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, who is a free trader, would regard the government's policy on this question was awaited with the keenest interest by the members of the House. Mr. Churchill gave a general support to Mr. Baldwin's proposal, for which he claimed the country had handed the premier a mandate. The chancellor provoked ironical cheering from the opposition when he remarked that the government must decline at the present stage, to be drawn into definitions and the exact clauses and specifications which would be introduced in the proposed bill at the proper time.

Mr. Churchill admitted that the bill must be very carefully drawn to preclude it becoming, in Premier Baldwin's word, "a wedge to introduce a general tariff." It must be clearly limited therefore to a minimum number of industries. This, the chancellor added, was no deep laid plot and there was no ulterior motive behind it except the necessary reason for reconciling the principle of safeguarding with the most favored nations principle.

Lady Astor created a mild sensation in the House. She was greeted with general cheering when, on rising to ask a question, it was noticed that she had replaced her familiar "parliamentary" hat, a small dark three-cornered affair, by a smart modern creation trimmed in bright colors.

Refer to Committee.

It was stated unofficially last night that the idea Mr. Baldwin advanced of spending a million pounds yearly is to stimulate empire exports of meat and fruit to Great Britain by subsidizing Dominion shippers who bring in consignments of meat, apples, and certain other commodities in excess of guaranteed quantities. The entire question however has to be threshed out by a committee, to include Dominion representatives, which are still to be appointed. It is considered probable that Argentine meat exporters may be incensed over this attempt to foster the Imperial meat trade.

FLOUR FOR RUSSIA.

Two Cargoes of 120,000 Barrels of Canadian Product.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Two full cargoes of Canadian flour, aggregating 120,000 barrels, were sold here yesterday for immediate shipment to Russia. One cargo, it was said, would go to the port of Batum on the Black Sea and the other to Petrograd.

Shippers believe that this demand is a definite evidence of shortage in bread grains in that important producing country.

HALF MILLION FOR LITTLE NELL MINE

Arsenical Iron Mine Sold to United States Financiers.

THE PAS, Man., Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—A half million dollar deal to purchase an arsenical iron mine known as the Little Nell group of seven claims at Beaver Lake, Saskatchewan, has just been effected between the owners A. J. and J. W. Collette, of The Pas, Manitoba, and several wealthy American financiers of Des Moines, Iowa.

The terms agreed upon is that $100,000 be paid to Collette Brothers within a period of two years and that during this time the balance of $400,000 in machinery and improvement work be invested in the mine.

Arsenic which is now being purchased in huge quantities as an exterminator of the "Boll Weevil" so ravenous to the cotton of the Southern States is in great demand, and it is believed that many great arsenical iron ore bodies in the northern parts of Canada, are already under option to large American concerns who will shortly develop them in producing mines.

POLICE ANSWER CHARGES MADE DURING PROBE

Judge Coderre Said Constables Were Somewhat to Blame in Demers Case.

CAUSED SHOOTING

Pawn Broker Who Lost License Appeared With Lawyer—Appeal Failed.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18. — After hearing the police answer to the charge made by a citizen named Demers, that he had been held up and assaulted by two constables, a charge of attempted murder being afterwards laid against him, Mr. Justice Coderre expressed the opinion at the police inquiry yesterday that there had been "some clumsiness" on the part of the Constable. Constable Dupuis had said that Demers was mistaken for a robber, while Demers had mistaken the constables and a citizen named Therrien who was with them, for robbers.

"Anyone might have taken you for the same," said the judge, addressing Constable Dupuis. "Think of the situation of the lane," continued his lordship. "Demers knew Therrien and at once said: 'I know you, you are Therrien.' Then Therrien denies knowing him. That was enough to make him believe that they were robbers. Then in the house, Dupuis says that Demers was so excited he did not know what he was doing. Why should not the fact have been explained at the police station as soon as the man was brought there? He had every reason to be excited."

"Here is a peaceful citizen who had no reason to be in prison. He was going around as a peaceful citizen has every right to do. He is seized by men who say they are police. His excitement is natural. And for having peaceably walked around the streets as he had a right to do, he is now in the rogue's gallery, and his record is tarnished with a charge of attempted murder. There is some clumsiness there."

Mr. Pilon "It was hardly clumsiness."

The commissioner "It was nothing else."

Witness Changes Date

Blanche Corbeil, whose testimony that she had given $50 to Capt. Sauve in 1918 was denied by the officer yesterday, told the court that she was mistaken in the date and that the incident occurred in 1919. Counsel for Capt. Sauve was given time to meet this change.

Constable Alfred Dupui gave evidence to refute the allegation that he and Constable Gagnon had beaten up a man named Demers. Witness declared that Demers was "nosing around" in a motorcycle and bolted when the constables approached. When captured Demers had been taken to his address and was set at liberty when he was identified. As the constables were leaving the house, however, Demers, according to witness, reappeared with a gun and, after loading it, pointed it at Constable Gagnon.

Dupuis said he jumped for the gun and was struck in the face by Demers. The gun was also discharge the bullet going through the constable's overcoat. In the ensuing struggle Demers had been knocked unconscious. A charge of attempted murder was laid against Demers but it had been reduced to assault and Demers pleaded guilty and was condemned to pay the costs.

Referring to the complaint of a grocer named Bellamaire that Dupuis had pointed a revolver at him witness said that he had mistaken Bellamaire for a thief and had "covered" him until he made sure. The matter had been satisfactorily explained, declared witness.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lanctot witness insisted that he saw Demers loading the gun. Asked if he thought Demers was capable of killing the constable, witness replied that Demers was so enraged he did not think he knew what he was doing."

Admits Charge was Stiff

Lieut. Demers of No. 15 station admitted to the judge that he had thought the charge of attempted murder was rather a stiff one and if he had known the circumstances as he now knew them, he would not have recommended the constables to lay a grave charge against Demers.

Morris Mendelsohn, the second-hand dealer, who recently lost his license as a result of evidence heard at the police inquiry, appeared accompanied by counsel, in an attempt to rehabilitate himself by showing that he had co-operated with the police in every way possible, checking up whether goods he bought were stolen or not and helping the detectives to catch the robbers.

Mr. Justice Coderre pointed out that his present statements flatly contradicted those he had made in his previous depositions at the inquiry. If he had lost his license because of the previous statements made by himself, Mendelsohn had only himself to blame.

HUNDREDS BEAT WOODS FOR BOY LOST ON MONDAY

Separated from Chum on Way Home from Hunt for Christmas Tree.

AT FORT WILLIAM

Mother Breaks Down When Present Purchased for Son Comes in Mail.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 18.—Search for Ernest Elvish, seven and a half years old, believed to have perished in a snow storm Monday night while searching a bush northwest of the city for a Christmas tree has up till noon to-day, proved fruitless. The little fellow became separated from his chum, aged nine, and has not been seen. The other boy, Jack Saunders, stumbled into a cottage half a mile from the city in a half frozen condition.

Three hundred people engaged in the hunt Tuesday afternoon until darkness drove them back with no encouraging word to Ernie's parents. After clinging to the hope that Providence had helped her boy survive the first bitter night in the whirling snow and that he was somewhere out in the white wastes alive, Mrs. Elvish gave up hope at dawn of ever seeing her boy alive again.

Mother's Pathetic Vigil.

The Elvish home faces the area in which the hunters expect to find the child, and the mother has kept silent vigil from a window since Monday night. Sleep has not closed her eyes since Ernie left home Monday afternoon munching an apple and saying he was going to play on a nearby rink with his playmates.

"His skates and boots come today," she murmured yesterday as she sat by the window. "It was a Christmas present."

To such an extent has public sympathy been aroused that volunteers from every industry and organization in the city massed early Wednesday to carry on the work of the tired-out searchers. Mounted and city police, boy scouts, collegiate cadets and citizens at large, have played a part in endeavouring to find the child."

To Search New Area.

Cross-questioning of Jackie Saunders has decided the hunters to continue the search in the area near the cottage. By noon every snow drift had been pierced and every hollow penetrated, but to no avail. Ernie Elvish seems to have been swallowed up in the terrific snowstorm leaving beind him no tracks, no clues, that might guide the searchers.

1,000 to Join Search.

Yesterday afternoon Indians from the mission have joined in the search. The city waterworks staff are giving all the time they can spare to the search, and Mayor Edmeston sent out a call for volunteers and expected to have a thousand men answer it to-day, and the organization will be centered in the city hall where the parties will receive their instructions and sent out under capable guides. It has been decided that not an inch of ground where the lad is likely to have wondered shall be left uncombed.

The grain inspection men and the staff of the Fort William elevator where the father is inspector, have sent parties out and the hunt is being carried out with all the energy possible.

BUILDING PERMITS FOR YEAR LESS THAN IN 1923

Decline For Eleven Months 7.2 Per Cent.—November Gained.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18—Building permits in 56 Canadian cities in November showed an increase of 18.9 per cent over November last year and a seasonal decline from October 1924 of 17.1 per cent. The total for November 1924 was $9,555,472 as compared with $11,533,111 in October 1924.

The permits issued in Montreal, though lower in value than in October, were over twice as large as in November of last year. In Toronto there were minor gains in both comparisons, while Winnipeg registered losses. Vancouver recorded a rather greater total of building authorized than in October 1924 but a decline as compared with November 1923. The value of building permits issued during the first eleven months of 1924 was 7.2 per cent lower than in 1923 and 15.8 per cent lower than in 1922. These facts appear in a bulletin issued by the Dominion Bureau of statistics

CHURCH WINDOW WAS BLOWN IN

Loss of $300 to Church in Nelson, B. C., by Severe Blizzard.

SWEPT DISTRICT

NELSON, B.C. Dec. 18.—Cancelled steamers, delayed trains, telegraph and Telephone wires blown down, and windows broken, resulted from a blizzard which has swept the Kootenay district.

The steamer Nasookin, was forced to cancel her trip from Kootenay landing to Nelson on Monday night owing to the heavy weather. The Eastbound train was eight hours getting through the first 20 miles, owing to snow and trees blowing down across the track.

The steamer Kusanook from Nelson for Kaslo, after waiting many hours, made the trip without calling at any points enroute. Coast trains due here on Monday and on Tuesday night, in each case arrived the following day.

In Nelson the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church lost a $300 stained glass window by being blown in. Since Monday morning, a fitful wire service to Spokane, has comprised Nelson's only contact with the outside world.

HEALTHY IMMIGRANTS.

Medical Examination of Europeans Proves Effective.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18.—(By Canadian Press).—The regulations requiring the medical examination of European immigrants have proven most satisfactory and today there is a high standard of health among the new arrivals in Canadian ports, Dr. J. A. Anyot, Deputy Minister of Health told the Dominion Council of Health here yesterday, at the final meeting of a three day conference. The $200 fine on steamship companies for bringing diseased persons to Canada has been very effective, he said.

The conference discussed the danger of poisoning from spray painting machines. In the matter of standards for ice cream, the council was of the opinion that ten per cent butter fat (no other form being allowed) was a reasonable standard.

U.F.O. EXPRESS DISAPPROVAL OF MILITARY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

Power of Rural Ontario Exhibited in Liquor Plebiscite Result.

A MORAL FORCE

"Cigarette Evil" in Cities Specified by Young Farmer as Moral Danger.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The United Farmers of Ontario in convention here yesterday went on record as disapproving military training in schools, and protesting against any expenditure for such purposes by either Federal or Provincial governments. Another resolution demanded that Public School Teachers' Conventions should be held in the holiday seasons and not during school time. Another resolution that government grants should be in greater proportion to experience and qualification and less in portion to the salary paid teachers also passed. A resolution that Bible training be made compulsory in public schools was held over.

Mrs. H. L. Laws, secretary of the United Farm Women's Association in reviewing the work of the organization said that the rural districts of Ontario had shown their power in the vote on the liquor question last October. Mrs. J. S. Amos, president of the Women's organization, said that agriculture could not be improved by individual effort but only through co-operation.

"Farm women are no longer automatic household machines" she declared in speaking of the place they now occupied in the social life of the Dominion.

Peter Porte, president of the Young United Farmers, said there was a great moral danger in the drift of rural young people to the urban centres. He condemned what he spoke of as lack of morals in the cities referring particularly to the cigarette habit. Rural people of Ontario would not stand for any system of local option in the liquor traffic which would make Toronto the bar room of the province.

ANARCHY AFTER SOVIET PASSES

Captain Francis McCullagh Says Communistic Govt. Will Last Ten Years.

CZARISM DONE

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—The communistic government in Russia is good for another decade. Then will come complete anarchy. And out of that village soviets, a sort of peasant democracy.

That is the opinion of Capt. Francis McCullagh, soldier, journalist, and author, speaking after a six-year study of Russia, both tsaristic and bolshevistic. He is in Chicago to arrange for a lecture on Dec. 31. He will address his audience in Russian.

"Russia, a land of 170,000,000 souls is really ruled by a governing class of 10,000," said Capt. McCullagh. During the world was he commanded a company of the Irish fusiliers at Gallipoli.

"Bolshevism Is Failure."

"Bolshevism, as I see it, is a complete failure," he said. "Theocommunists already have abandoned many of the doctrines they started with. But there appears to be no remedy for it until it eventually topples over through an excess of centralization. There are numberless spasmodic revolts by peasants, which are ineffectual, and robber bands, led by former army sergeants, which prey upon anybody who has property. In a word, the land is worse off than under the tyranny of the Romanoffs."

The setting of Trotzsky's star didn't surprise the journalist a great deal. Although his name was always coupled with Lenin's, McCullagh said, the living man is not the was a most capable lieutenant, with a capacity for unlimited work, but genius that the dead man was. He was not a captain. Morever, he is now up against a very strong triumvirate, the visitor declared.

Writes on Conditions.

"Bolshevik Persecution of Christianity" is the title of a book that Capt. McCullagh has written out of his knowledge of conditions over there. Christianity is absolutely incompatible with bolshevism, he declared, and the heads of the government appreciate the fact.

"They are suppressing religion by making it a penal offense to teach religion to any one under 18 years old," he said. "They have abolished seminaries and they have established a rival 'red' church, which is but a tool of propaganda. The church buildings are under government control and are used for political meetings and cinemas when the priests are through with them."

Capt. McCullagh is highly skeptical of any danger to America through the infusion and spreda of "red" doctrines here. The American workingman is so different a person from the Russian, for one thing, he declared.

Most of America is middle-class and that part which isn't now is making every effort to become so.

Does Not Fear Royalist Revolt.

He also declined to believe that any tsaristic revolt, with the end in view of placing some grand duke back on the throne would come to any good. The royalist lot is a poor one, nearly helpless when forced to make its own way in the world. Nor is another Napoleon I possible in Russia. For the Russia of 1900s and the France of the late 1700s are two nations, and inhabited by two races. The Russian is at the same time more apathetic and more bloodthirsty than the revolutionary Frenchman, he said.

Capt. McCullagh, after his lecture in Chicago, leaves for Washington and will make his way about to Australia, arriving in time for the antipodean visit of the American fleet.

QUEBEC, Dec. 18.— A solid blockade of ice extending for a line of forty-five miles from Three Rivers west to Contrecoeur, was reported here this morning, and the residents along the bank of the St. Lawrence river in that locality are preparing to build their regular winter roads between the north and south shores. There is no rise and fall of the tide west of Three Rivers.

Appeal In Supreme Court With Canadian Northern

OTTAWA, Dec 17 — (Canadian Press)—The appeal in the Supreme Court of Manitoba rate agreement with old Canadian Northern (now part of the Canadian National,) began to-day.

F. P. Chrysler, K.C., for Manitoba, outlined the agreement made between the Manitoba Government and Canadian Northern in 1901 which permitted the Government to determine the maximum railway rates within the province and between Manitoba and the head of the lakes He also related how this agreement as well as Crow's Nest Pass agreement were set aside to make way for higher rates in war time. The present case was an appeal from order of the railway commission made at the time of the general increase.

CITY MAY TAKE SHARE IN HYDRO

Proposal Made By By Sir Adam Beck Is Now Under Consideration in Peterborough.

JOINT OWNERS.

A proposal has been made by Sir Adam Beck that the city of Peterboro take over a proportionate share of the assets of the Central Ontario power system, the Peterboro street railway, and the Peterboro gas plant, and is at present before the City Council.

With a view to formulating the attitude of the business men of the city toward the proposal, the Chamber of Commerce has appointed a committee of three to keep in touch with Sir Adam Beck and follow the plans closely. The committee includes G. A. Gillespie, vice-president of the Chamber; W. R. Morris, K.C.A., and Leon Frazer, secretary.

In the event of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission transferring a share of the assets of the Central Ontario power system to the municipality, it will place Peterboro in the same position as the municipalities of Western Ontario—joint owners of the power system.

SMOKE BUT NO FIRE IN ELECTION TALK

Nomination For City Positions Open to December 23 in Council Chamber.

As usual at this time of the year there is a lot of smoke obscuring the intentions of the present office holders in the City Council, and Board of Education, as to running in the approaching election, but not much fire as a basis for it. While one alderman, speaking for himself and intimating that he is in the confidence of the other four retiring members of the Aldermanic Board, has openly declared that none of the retiring members will accept nomination, it is stated on other good authority that all are willing to run again. New names are conspicuous by their absence, and not until nomination day will the citizens know who are on the docket.

Nominations for the Utilities Commission, Board of Education, and Mayor, will be made at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of December 23rd. Nominations for the Aldermanic Board will take place at 7.30 the same evening.

On January 1st, election day, the polls will be open from 9 a.m., to 5 p.m.

GERMAN SLAYER'S TRIAL CAME TO AN END TO-DAY

Says He Wants to be Beheaded in Public Square So Everyone Can See.

HANOVER, Dec. 18. — (United Press).—Fritz Haarman, whose trial ofr the murder of thirty youths, came to an end to-day, declared in court he would like to be beheaded in the public mark-place here, with the whole city present and to have motion pictures taken of the execution.

He expressed the hope that the court would follow the suggestions of the States Attorney, who yesterday demanded the death penalty. Joking with his jailers, the impertureable made man ordered his last meal and said he wanted his grave decorated annually by Haus Grans, an accomplice. The latter will probably be tried for complicity.

THAT WELL KNOWN CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

How Edith Won the Affection of Her Mother-in-law-to-be.

Mrs. Honeywell drew aside the hanging curtains to place the holy wreath with its red silk bow in the window. Suddenly her front door blew open with a whirl of snow and Edith stomped in, her arms filled with her Christmas bundles.

Edith, tall and rosy-cheeked, clerked in the 'big store." She had been taken on as an extra for the holiday rush. The excitement, the crowding of insistent customers, the continuous demand for cheerful service had been her first business experience.

'Hello, Mother bunch!" cried Edith as she closed the door and dropped her bundles, her fur piece and her great coat.

'Are you tired, dear," asked Mrs. Honeywell, for she knew that this was the last shopping day and she imagined a day of exasperation for her daughter in serving the numberless last minute folks.

'Not a bit," promptly rejoined Edith; 'I do believe that people are following somewhat the muchly advocated saying of doing their Christmas shopping early. Of course, there were a lot who had to get something for their cousin or a friend or a wife whom they had forgotten, but they seemed to appreciate the act and were the nicest customers I ever had.

'You know, mother," she went on, 'you sort of lose the idea of Christmas when you are in the centre of so much buying and selling. But to-day I met several customers who were the loveliest I have met."

Edith strolled on out into the kitchen with her mother and helped her with the preparations or supper. Mother and daughter had been 'batching it" together or some years, living on the income from Mr Honeywell's insurance which had provided for Edith's education as well as a air living — or both of them. Now, however, Edith felt she should make her own way at least. They needed pretty clothes; she and her mother liked the theatre and some day they were going to get 'that car."

'I have a little surprise or you, Mother, or rather the surprise is or me," murmured Edith, while she stirred the gravy.

'I thought so," answered her mother, 'you've been looking quite mysterious. —Look out you're burning the gravy I suppose you are going to tell me that Fred will be here to-night?"

'Oh, Fred will be here all right He'd be here day and night if I'd let him. But that is not my special surprise," said Edith as she and Mrs. Honeywell sat down to their gate-legged table.

'I am going to be kept on at the store," Edith continued, 'and it all came about on account of a certain Mrs. Worthington. She came into the china and glassware section and she seemed to be quite put out and annoyed and told me how she had purchased a nice tea-set as a gift or her daughter and the set had been delivered broken, and here it was, the last day with no got. I sympathized with her and helped her make a new selection and arranged with the floor-man to have the set delivered by a special messenger It wasn't much for me to do, since it had happened before many times, especially this time of the year, but it seemed to impress Mrs Worthington. I have since found out that she is one of the most important customers the store has As soon as I finished with her she went to the buyer of the section and reported to him how I had handled the matter for her and told him that he ought to keep me after the rush. The buyer said he agreed with her and would arrange or me to be employed permanently and he notified me before I left this evening. So mother, that settles the job question! And it must have been the Christmas spirit that got into Mrs. Worthington. The other to have a knd word or anyone."

The door bell gave a sharp ring and Edith rose hastily with an eager look in her blue eyes. The next instant Mrs. Honeywell heard a soft murmur.

"Oh, Fred, how cold your nose is!" Whereupon Mrs. Honeywell demanded to know how Edith knew. There was a series of repressed giggles and chuckles as Fred entered and greeted a much loved mother-in-law-to-be.

A.Y.P.A. BAZAAR AT MILLBROOK

Eighty Dollars Realized From Sale of Fancy Work and Confections.

OTHER SOCIALS.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 18.—A successful bazaar was held under the auspices of the A. Y. P. A. of St. Thomas Church Saturday afternoon in the store formerly occupied by J. L. Byam. Miss M. B. Turner was general convener and had a helpful oversight for all other workers.

The sale began at 3 p.m. and from then until the closing hour there was no lack of activity, interested buyers passing in and out constantly.

Mrs. L. S. Morton, Mrs. W. Hilton and Miss A. Attwooll were in charge of the counter of tempting-looking homemade bread, cakes, pies, tea biscuits and home-made candy, while Mrs (Rev.) M. B. Williams and Miss M. Attwooll were kept busy attending to the wants of those purchased from the fancy work department.

Quite a number patronized the afternoon tea tables, the chilly atmosphere out of doors making the hot cup of tea particularly enjoyable. The hot supper served at 6 p.m. was also popular, many of the business men taking advantage of a meal down town since it was "open night" for the stores. Mrs. T. Harkness and Miss M. Christie were the capable "hostesses" for this section of the bazaar, Misses Gertrude Harkness, Gertrude Gray and Pearl Lamb giving attentive service both for the afternoon tea and again at supper time.

The "fish pond" was looked after entirely by the Boy Scouts and the financial results were satisfactory. Mr. Barnes, of the Bank of Toronto staff, is Scout Master.

More than eight dollars was realized as the result of the sale, and practically everything was disposed of. The Woman's Auxiliary of St. Thomas church had nearly sixty dollars from their sale of homemade baking held about three weeks prior to the A.Y.P.A. undertaking which was on a rather more extended scale.

Missionary Program.

The quarterly missionary program was taken up in the Methodist Sunday School on Sunday afternoon, the "Boneka" Bible Class, Mrs. (Rev.) Howard teacher, having charge.

Mrs. F. W. Smith, president of the class, acted as leader and among those taking part were Mrs. Allen Mitchell, convener of the missionary committee, Mrs. Ross Edmunds, Mrs. T. H. Aiken and Mrs. J. Todd. Notes on the work being done, especially under the auspices of missionaries supported by the Sunday schools and Young People's Leagues, on the foreign and home fields were read, Mrs. Mitchell's account of the philanthropic activities of the famous Chinese Christian, Mr. Liu Dse Ru, who recently visited Canada, being particularly interesting.

Mrs. G. W. Sayles sang an appropriate solo and the hymns chosen were all of a missionary character. The usual quarterly offering for missions was received amounting to over eight dollars with a donation from the Primary department yet to come in.

Cafeteria Tea.

The "cafeteria tea" held on Monday evening under the auspices of the missionary department of the Young People's League proved a most enjoyable event and drew a large number of guests from both town and country.

This was almost the first occasion of its kind given locally and was evidently of so popular a character that a repetition would prove equally successful at some future date. Mrs. G. W. Sayles is vice-president of the missionary work of the League, and is indefatigable in her efforts to make the department a decided success both from the educative and the financial standpoint. The hospitality of her own home was extended for the tea on Monday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Sayles being assisted in receiving their guests by Miss Estella Hetherington, president of the League, and by Misses Marjorie Sayles and Jean Burnham who looked after the removal of wraps and directed to the kitchen where trays were secured and the desired menu chosen.

Ample provision was made to satisfy all appetites, roast chicken, roast beef, salads, pickles, jellies, bread and butter, tea biscuits, and pies of various kinds being the list supplied. Misses Marie Kenyon, Etta Peel, Margaret Howard, made attentive waitresses the tables being arranged in the wide hall, living-room, and large front room so that all guests were comfortably accommodated.

Following the supper a delightful musical programme was given, the items including a piano duet by Misses Ethel Richardson and Ella Elson, cornet duet by Messrs. G. E. and Ernest L. Burnham, piano solo by Miss Kathleen Sutton, vocal duet by Mrs. Sayles and Mr. W. H. Coombe, and others.

Games and puzzles were provided giving everyone a chance to find congenial employment and the continual hum of voices with occasional peals of merry laughter gave evidence of the general enjoyment of the occasion. The financial receipts were satisfactory, the money going towards the $100.00 which the League sends annually as its share of the salary of Rev. E. Hibbard, of Chentu, West India, who represents the Sunday Schools and Young People's Leagues of the Peterborough district on that far-off field.

Mrs. W. West and Mrs. P. Stinson were among the League members who gave assistance on Monday evening in looking after the comfort and enjoyment of the guests.

Rebekah Lodge.

The regular business meeting of "Golden Sheaf" Rebkah Lodge No. 176, held this week was followed by the initiation ceremony, Dr. L. J. Stuart and F. E. Alcorn being the candidates received into membership in the Rebekah Degree.

The attendance was good, showing a commendable interest being taken in the Lodge work, the fact that the membership roll frequently receives additional names being another evidence of growth and sustained activity.

Brief addresses were made before the session, which was presided over by the Noble Grand, Sister Irene Fallis, closed. Lunch was served during the pleasant social hour which concluded a profitable and enjoyable evening.

TOWNSHIP SMITH COUNCIL MEETING

Bylaws Appointing Deputy Returning Officers—Accounts Passed.

The members of the Council of the Township of Smith met in the county clerk's office on Monday, Dec. 15th, at hour of ten o'clock. All the members were present, with Reeve Middleton in the chair. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

By-law No. 819 to appoint deputy returning officers and poll clerks for the year 1925 and also by-laws 820 and 821, appointing Mr. Thos. H. Graham as road superintendent for 1925 and authorizing the abolition of statute labor, passed their several readings.

A request from the Beekeepers' Association of the County of Peterborough that the assessor of the township make a note of all ratepayers who keep bees, met with the approval of the council and instructions to that effect were given.

A letter from the Department of Lands and Forests stating that Mr. F. C. Hungerford, of Peterborough, had made application for certain privileges on East Esplanade street, Chemong park, was received. No action taken and the latter was referred to the township solicitor.

Mr. Fred McKee, of Smith, addressed council re cutting brush on the 5tht concession, opposite lot 18, Very little wood was derived and labor costs far exceeded value of same. Requested a grant of $15.00, which council thought was just and right.

Gas on Stomach Made Her Nervous

For many years Mrs. Cook had gas on the stomach and was nervous and short of breath. Finally she took Alderika, and it did her a world of good. Adlerika helps any case gas on the stomach unless due to deep-seated causes. Because it is such an excellent intestinal evacuant it is the very best remedy for constipation—it often works in one hour and never gripes. McDermid & Jury, and E. L. Payne, Druggists.

BOY TELLS OF HIGHT'S VISITS

Son of Mrs. Sweetin Said Children Were Sent Out to Play.

OTHER WITNESSES

MOUNT VERNON, Ills., Dec. 18—Sobbing convulsively, Staunton Sweetin, 14, testified on the stand yesterday in the trial of his mother Mrs. Elsie Sweetin, for the murder of her husband in a "love pact," with Lawrence M. Hight, former pastor of Ina, Ills.

Staunton was asked to tell about Hight's visits to the Sweetin home.

"Most of the time we (the children) were sent out to play when the pastor called," the boy said in a voice shaken with sobs. "I do remember, however, that father never was home when the minister called."

The boy broke down completely and was led from the court room.

Mrs. Sweetin sobbed as her son stumbled through his testimony.

Other witnesses recounted various incidents of the love affair of Mrs. Sweetin and Hight, which the prosecution charges led to the poisoning of Sweetin and Mrs. Hight.

Another witness, Mrs. Harry Lee, said that when Hight preached the funeral service for Wilford Sweetin his attention was directed towards Mrs. Sweetin all of the time.

"When he prayed his eyes weren't closed. I knew he was watching Mrs. Sweetin," Mrs. Lee said

It was indicated that Hight finally had decided to address the jury when the closing arguments are started.

Conduct at Camp Meeting

Then there was evidence as to the conduct of Hight and Mrs. Sweetin at a camp meeting a few weeks after Sweetin's death at which Hight was one of exhorters.

Mrs. Ollie Clinton of Ina testified she attended this camp meeting and that she frequently observed Hight leave the tabernacle, the large building in which services were held and "go north." Shortly after this, she said, Mrs. Sweetin would "leave the tabernacle and go north, too."

Mrs. Irene Christian of Ina testified that during the months of last May and June she saw Hight go to the Sweetin home frequently.

"He would go around to the back door," she testified.

Vivian Taylor testified concerning the funeral sermon over Sweetin preached by Hight.

"Mr. Hight in his opening remarks said he felt unworthy to preach the sermon," she testified "Among other things he said he prayed to God for a chance at this man, and then told how he saved his soul on his deathbed."

Esther Fowler of Ina testified that she had seen Hight standing on the tie pile, some distance from the Sweetin home with his hat off.

"He was all alone," the witness said. "Some times he sat out on the pile."

PETERBORO MALE VOICE CHOIR

Final Rehearsal This Year—Successful Social Function.

The final rehearsal this year of the Peterborough Male Voice Choir was held on Thursday evening in the Green Muisc Studio, with an attendance of over fifty members.

The music under study was rehearsed from 8 to 9.30 o'clock, the numbers including "The Massacre of Macpherson," "The Last Chieftain," "John Peel," and a Concert Waltz.

Under the direction of Mr. Martin B.. Chenhall the choir, since the season commenced, have made rapid strides with the music numbers, and have trimmed the rough edges from the choruses, and the result is some very fine music will be heard from the choir at the annual concert this year.

The executive have met often, and much business has been transacted, and the committee are now corresponding with agencies throughout the Province regarding suitable talent for the annual appearance of the choir.

At the close of practice last night the Social Committee arranged an informal cake and coffee affair, and a "huge success" was the verdict. Songs by Messrs. Kimmell, Rush, Parlour and Mr. Colwill of Montreal were enjoyed, with Fred J. Gandy as M.C. Mr. Colwill also delighted the members with story and dialogue on "The Charge of the Light Brigade." Mr. Dave Moore also had a story to tell.

Votes of thanks, greetings, "Auld Lang Syne," and the National Anthem closed a noteworthy evening.

The choir will be on vacation until 6th January, 1925.

MAKING IT EASIER.

At this season of the year when the delivery system of the city's stores is heavily taxed by the unusual amount of merchandise that has to be transported, the thoughtful shopper can relieve the burden considerably by carrying small parcels.

Too many people have got into the habit of saying "Send it, please" when the article is small and light enough to be carried without any difficulty.

It is a practice not easily defended at any time, but just now when the men engaged in delivering parcels are at their busiest there is not the slightest excuse for this lazy custom.

There are so many ways in which shoppers can make the Christmas season happier for those who serve them, but they are all involved in the one word, "courtesy."

The sales staffs of Peterborough's stores are busy day after day, dealing with a flock of Christmas shoppers, many of whom have only a faint idea of what they want to buy.

It is a time when there is considerable nervous strain upon sales people, and, in addition, many clerks are perhaps but temporarily employed for the holiday rush and the work is strange to them.

The considerate shopper will remember these things and show kindliness and courtesy in his or her dealings.

HYDRO REPRESENTATION.

The attempt of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association to have ex-Mayor Alfred Maguire of Toronto appointed to the Provincial Hydro Commission has met with little success.

Probably the association showed poor tactical judgment in naming but one man for the post, instead of submitting a list of those considered by them as suitable to serve on the commission, but that does not alter the fact that municipalities are very vitally interested in the Hydro enterprises and have a very direct claim to representation.

It is true that labour and industry have made similar demands, but, after all, it has been the co-operation of the municipalities that has made the huge power scheme possible, and while the appointment, of course, belongs to the Government, yet the selection of a member approved of by the municipalities would be but giving just recognition to the very important share they have had in the development of the Hydro.

The appointment has been too long delayed in any case, for it is obviously a mistake to leave a vacancy of any length in a body with such tremendous responsibilities as those of the Hydro-electric Commission.

The Government should deal with this matter without delay.

LIKE DARKEST AFRICA.

"Masked hooded men broke into the General Hospital here today, covered attendants with shotguns, and carried away Samuel Smith, a 15-year-old negro boy, who was hanged to a tree and his body riddled with bullets."

The above dispatch is not the recital of something that happened in the centre of Africa; it is the story of a lynching in the city of Nashville, Tennessee.

The boy, it is true, had tried to hold up a storekeeper, wounded the latter and was himself shot in the battle that followed the hold-up.

But there are laws to deal with such cases, and it makes the blood curdle to think of a mob of cowardly men dragging a fifteen-year-old boy—a child in years and probably an infant in mentality—out of a hospital bed, stringing him up on a rope and pouring a volley of lead into his body.

Mob law in sections of the United States has been responsible for as dastardly outrages as ever were charged against the Germans during the World War, and there has nothing worse been recorded than this Nashville lynching.

The leaders of the mob should be arraigned for murder—but, as usual, in such cases the identity of the lynchers is professedly a mystery.

HE SLIPPED AND FELL.

The most interesting phase of becoming successful after years of effort, is that we don't last long as a rule after we get there.

A man climbs to the top of the ladder. He hardly gets his breath before he finds himself falling through space. The fellow on the rung below, who has been following him, has showed him from his place.

Success has been described as a ladder. It is. The ladder leads to a diving board from which plunges a steady stream of "successes."

A few men stay at the top so long that they become chronic national characters. But usually a man is through after 10 years or less at the top.

Maybe he keeps "the name." But, chances are, he's more or less of a figurehead. A newcomer is doing the real work—exerting the real power and authority.

Compared with the number of years it takes to climb the ladder, the average success remains at the top just long enough to examine the scenery and discover what's happened to him. There are, of course, exceptions. But exceptions prove the rule.

Have you noticed that, while men seem to rise to success faster than they used to, they also tend to slip sooner? Here's a man in his late thirties. He has a big income. Comes a period of depression. He's out of a job, probably broke. Maybe he comes back, maybe not.

Average ability is increasing. So each year it becomes more difficult to win out against competition—also more difficult to keep a position of success after we get it.

Twenty years ago, writers of good fiction were scarce. Now there are schools turning out writers in hordes. Writing itself has been analyzed and systematized so that it is merely high-class "carpenter work." Fortunately for writers, their sales market has widened as fast as the increase in competent followers of this profession.

So it goes in nearly every line. The "stars" have their understudies, quite as capable as themselves. Psychologists and systematizers have "taken the works apart" and laid bare all secrets.

That's why it's harder to stay at the top than it used to be. Average ability has risen. Where there used to be only one available man to handle a big job, now there's a mob.

THE CHICAGO RIVER.

(From "Judge" of Some Years Ago.)

The Chicago River is one of the immortals—it has a personality. Some people claim it is wet. A flock of ducks plunged into it and, to their great astonishment, slid across. A man who fell from the Clark Street Bridge broke his leg on the surface. He sued the city for damages. The bricks of which Chicago is built are made of the river cut in sections and baked. There are wild animals in this stream. A restaurant-keeper swears that he can't make a stew of this water—the animals eat the oysters. These animals themselves complain that there is not enough liquid in the river to keep them clean. Chicago signs tell you to boil the water, but add: "If it won't boil fry it." The odor of this stream has been admiringly compared to Samson and Sandow; not, however, when either was present. The Chicago people are fond of the odor on that account—it adds strength to the city. Some say the Chicago River flows uphill. As there is no hill in Chicago this proposition is a poser. The United States coast survey detailed an engineer to test this peculiarity. The engineer planted his apparatus in the river, but never saw it again. This was his report: "The Chicago River does not flow—it stands still. It has no banks except the First National and others. It has no bed like other streams—its bottom is always on top. The merchant marine traverses it on roller skates. In summer the city is filled with dust. I asked a civilian whence it came. 'Why,' said he; 'you must be a stranger in these parts. The dust blows off from the Chicago River.'"

A CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

(Article IV.)

No policy of immigration and colonization that is limited to agriculturalists and others willing to go on the land would continue for long to have large results unless agricultural conditions were such as to give reasonable promise to success to the right type of settler. Records of progress and ultimate prosperity by those already on the land have been and will continue to be the most convincing argument in favor of land settlement.

For this reason (as well as for others) a Canada Forward Policy should recognize frankly that agriculture is and must be for some time Canada's basic industr yand that there can be no general or permanent prosperity in this country except under conditions that make for a prosperous agriculture.

This does not mean—as many have urged—that the effort to secure a larger farm population should be delayed until agriculture in Canada is in a more prosperous state. It will be aided in reaching that state by the lightening of the burden of taxation and railway costs that would come through its distribution over more people and more traffic. The movement for a larger population and the movement for more favorable agricultural conditions are inter-dependent and complementary and should be concurrent.

* * * *

In some parts of Canada there is a demonstrated need of better facilities for credits for periods in keeping with the nature of the farmers' business and of lower interest rates than now obtain. To some extent the absence of these is due to Provincial legislation that has impaired the basis of security and thereby has caused a withdrawal of capital and consequent lessening of competition for loan business. Removal of such legislation should be a Provincial contribution to the new Canada Forward Policy. If that should not provide sufficient relief some reasonable and equitable measure of long term rural credits should be provided by Federal enactment.

* * * *

As prices for much of what our farmers produce are governed by world conditions, every cent by which the farmer can increase the spread between his production cost and the world price is an addition to his net profit. The prosperity of our farmers being a factor in stimulating land settlement and generally the basis of our national prosperity, it would be good national business to provide every reasonable and possible assistance in increasing that spread.

The aid that might be given through changes in the freight rates structure, scientific research and promotion of increased foreign and domestic demand will be referred to in later articles that will deal with these subjects in general relation to a Canada Forward Policy. Additional possibilities are presented by co-operative marketing and every reasonable facility for the utilization of these should be provided as a matter of Federal policy. This would include a very efficient and accurate service of statistical and other information as to world crop and price conditions and tendencies, quality and quantity requirements of various markets and methods of marketing in other countries.

* * * *

Even under the trying conditions of the past three or four years many Canadian farmers have continued steadily to improve their position. With maintenance of recent increases in prices of farm products and the further aids which a soundly based Canada Forward Policy would provide, we could look with confidence for an early and very decided improvement in the financial return to those engaged in agriculture.

"Stopping the drift of population to United States" will be the general subject of tomorrow's article.—Edmonton Journal.

Wise and Otherwise.

Silent airplanes are not the greatest threat of the next year. The thought that the Red Cross may issue crossword puzzles scares us.

It's funny how some respected citizens regard "Please Remit" on an overdue bill as nothing short of blackmail.

The carol, "Silent Night, Holy Night," is 100 years old this Christmas, which should be celebrated.

Steamboat load of autos sank in Lake Erie. All the crew and maybe a few pedestrians were saved.

The postoffice lost almost forty millions in 1923, mostly on second and third class. Being below first class never pays.

Loeb and Leopold, it seems now, got the greatest punishment. They are being made to teach school.

Christmas isn't what it used to be when there was no income tax payment due 10 days before.

Just as we were feeling some better a New York woman up and died and left $5000 to a pet cat.

A woman in Louisville, Ky., who thought she could run an auto ran amuck instead.

They say poets are born. Now doesn't that sound like a poet? Trying to dodge the blame.

All the world is a stage upon which "If Winter Comes" is playing its annual engagement now.

As a man thinks so is he until somebody who thinks otherwise gives him a poke in the nose.

This reducing business is being carried entirely too far. Why, even the milk is getting thin.

The burning question is not so much the price of coal as it is "Who will build the fire?"

Give her an electric waffle iron for Christmas so she can make you some hot cakes with non-skid treads.

A THOUGHT.

WHITHER.

A dream leaps up from the dark
And out of the dream there springs
A thought—but a tiny spark
Of ambition that faintly sings.
From afar sounds a luring call
That leads—does it lead to a wall?

CURED HIS RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 489L Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Export business on a large scale helped to lift wheat and rye yesterday to the highest prices yet this season, but heavy selling to realize profits gave the market a set-back later. Wheat closed unsettled at 2½ cents net lower to 3-8 cent advance, with December 170 to 170 1-8, and May 147¼ to 147 3-8. Corn finished 2½ to 3 1-8 cts. down, oats 3-8 to 3-4 cent off, and provisions varying from five cents decline to 30 cents gain. According to some estimates, new export business yesterday in wheat and flour was equal to more than 2,000,000 bushels of wheat.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The demand from English importers for Canadian grain here yesterday showed a slight improvement and a few sales of barley and oats were made for December and January shipment from Canadian winter ports. CHRISTMAS SALE AT THE LYCEUM

Many Attractive and Useful Articles—Large Crowd Last Night.

The big assembly hall at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum is a bright centre this week, for the Christmas Carnival being held there under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League. There was a good attendance last evening "Knights of Columbus Night," and an excellent patronage for the various sales and the games which comprise part of the entertainment.

Mrs. John Coughlin is general convener of the Carnival, and is assisted by various members of the League, the Christion Mothers' Confraternity and the Young Ladies' Sodality of St. Peter's Cathedral. The stage has been converted into the daintiest of tearooms with little individual tables where afternoon tea and luncheons are served, the menu including salad of many varieties and delicious home-made things.

The front of the stage has been banked with Christmas trees behind a gay, red lattice, there is a tall golden-shaded piano lamp and overhead streamers of red paper and tinsel, with a big central red bell. White curtains at the rear windows add the finishing touch to a very dainty tea-room, which is in charge of Mrs. E. H. Tinsley and Mrs. R. M. McGarvill, assisted by Mrs. E. G. Hiland, Mrs. F. J. McFadden, Miss Croft and Miss K. McAuley.

Mrs. James W. Fitzgerald and Mrs. R. Sheehy, Senior have the sale of home-made cooking that comprises quantities of delicious pies, cakes, cookies and biscuits.

A very attractive booth is the corner section where soft drinks are sold. This is a real Christmas-time stall, and has been arranged with much care and taste with coverings and frillings of bright red and green paper. Mrs. W. O'Brien and Mrs. A. Henry have charge of this section.

The Country Store, decorated with flags, with its varied assortment of pretty and useful things, is a popular centre. There is everything imaginable here, from delicate pink satin camisoles to heavy bags of flour. Miss Ann Hurley and Mrs. J. McCarthy have charge, assisted by Mrs. W. Turcotte, Mrs. W. J. Young and Mrs. S. Coffey. Mr. T. Turcotte also assists in the evenings.

The booth for the sale of home-made candy is prettily decorated with yellow and white paper and little frilled baskets hold the sweetmeats on sale, in charge of the Misses May Grady and K. Sharpe.

A very dainty section is the doll and Christmas gift booth of the Young Ladies' Sodality, arranged artistically in the pale blue and white of the society's colors. Dolls of all types, from Jackie Coogan and the gingham baby to aristocratic beauty in yellow evening gown, are on view here, and there are quantities of lovely little novelties for Christmas. SANTA CLAUS COMING!

Santa Claus will pay an official visit to Peterboro this year, Mayor J. J. Turner has been informed, and will on Saturday make a tour of the city in company with His Worship, who has been asked to escort him.

Whatever business conditions exist in the various factories and trade centres throughout Canada, one branch of industry has been working overtime preparing for boys and girls. This is the North Pole toy shop, where all the wonders of toyland are made.

Everybody knows that Santa Claus is the distributor for this big concern, and that he comes out of the frozen north every Christmas time laden with the products of the big factories.

This year, owing to the many visits expected at Children's Shelters, Sunday schools, lodge rooms and veterans' societies, the short, round-faced, jolly old fellow will make a special trip on Saturday evening about half-past six to distribute presents to boys and girls of the Caledonian Society in Victoria Hall. He has expressed a desire to walk down the main street in Peterboro so that he may see the store decorations, and has asked the Mayor to meet him and accompany him to the hall. Coming from the north, Santa Claus will first be seen about the Y.M.C.A. corner or Central Park, as near half-past six as he can arrive. He will be extended a welcome by the Mayor, who will see that he is not run over by automobiles and street cars, after he leaves his sleigh and reindeer in a sheltered nook in one of the parks.

If the weather is fine there should be a large crowd out to see the jolly visitor and give him a hearty welcome to Peterboro.

OBJECT TO TESTS OF AUTO DRIVERS

Chamber of Commerce Has Counter Proposal That It Is Felt Will Give Relief.

Peterboro Chamber of Commerce, commenting on the proposal that automotive drivers in the Province should be examined before given permission to drive, has passed a resolution objecting to the proposed measure and has made a counter proposal which it is felt would serve the purpose desired.

It is pointed out by the Executive of the Chamber of Commerce that the plan mooted by the Province would entail the examination of 500,000 persons, with considerable expense to automobile owners. The proposal being made to reduce to a minimum careless and reckless driving on the highways, in which object the Chamber concurs, it is believed that the purpose can be served by the issuing of drivers' permits at a nominal fee at the same time that markers are issued. These permits might be cancelled or suspended for certain periods at the discretion of the magistrate or judge on the occasion of an infraction of the Highway Traffic Act.

Copies of a resolution embodying this proposal were forwarded to the Premier, the Attorney-General, the Minister of Public Works, the Associated Boards of Trade, and the Ontario Motor League.

CITY MADE MONEY DOING OWN WORK

Kingston Made Big Saving on Pavement Construction.

KINGSTON, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).— Kingston has been constructing its own pavements for nine years and Engineer Dick states that during this period a saving of $125,000 has been made over doing the work by contract.

During the year building permits to the value of $1,028,605 have been issued, the largest in the history of the city. Last year the amount totalled $649,233. The large increase this year is due to permits being taken out for a clinical building, skating arena and ladies' residence at Queens' University.

YOUNG MAN ACCUSED IN MURDER VERDICT

Slayer of Father Takes Word Calmly; Friend on Party Also to Be Held.

CHICAGO, Dec. 18. — George Shaw, who killed his father, Bruce Shaw, with a saber, was ordered held to the grand jury to-day on a charge of murder. Taken into custody with him was Earl Todd, a soda dispenser, who is alleged to have provided the alcohol that drove young Shaw into his killing frenzy. Todd was charged with having been an accessory before the fact.

The defendant took the verdict of the coroner's jury calmly. The formal announcement of the charge on which he is to be held seemed to steady his nerves which had been jumping visibly throughout the testimony of the morning session. Todd, however, paled at the recommendation that he be included in the murder charge. Until the moment that the jury brought in its finding he apparently had not considered this possibility.

Widow Near Collapse

Mrs. Shaw, weeping inaudibly and so close to collapse that a physician had to be called upon to administer restoratives several times during her testimony, was the first witness.

She was half-carried into the under taking rooms of Charles S. Dreschler, Oak Park, in which the inquest was called. Her daughter Marie, who took part in the quarrel that preceded the struggle and witnessed the fatal climax of the sword, assisted her into the room and stood close by as she sank into the witness chair. Mrs. Shaw was questioned by Deputy Coroner Adolph Herrmann. Robert Cantwell, Jr., was present as attorney for the family. Assistant State's Attorney Harry W. Meneely represented the state.

Wanted Money for Presents

"George came home at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon," said Mrs. Shaw in a voice that broke continually. "He said he wanted money to buy Christmas presents for his sister and her baby. His father gave him a check and he went out. He came back about dinner time and announced that he was going to a party. He asked his sister Marie to go with him.

"Marie did not accept the invitation at once. But George told her the name of the girl he was going with and finally Marie consented to be one of the party.

"About 3 o'clock Sunday morning I saw a light in the garage. I looked out and saw George coming across the yard and from the look on his face I could tell that he was drunk. I asked his father to go down and take care of him. Mr. Shaw came back after while and said that there was a girl with George but not Marie.

"I went out then and found George. The girl was standing helplessly near by. She was crying. I told her not to worry; that it was late, and that we would put her up for the night. Then I put her to bed in Marie's room.

Breaks Into Room

"Everybody went to bed and the house was quiet. Marie came home and went to her own room. Then there was a terrific noise in the hallway. The girls had put a chair against their door, but somehow George had forced his way in. Mr. Shaw, who usually was more than a match for the boy in strength went out and found him in the girl's room, threatening Marie with the sword. When I saw what was going on I ran downstairs and telephoned for the police.

"Next I saw my daughter leading hre father downstairs. He was bleeding. She put him to bed on the couch and telephoned for a doctor."

Father's Dying Words Revealed

Bruce Shaw's dying statement was offered in evidence at the inquest. The statement was read by Lieut. Fred R. Onthank of the Oak Park police department, who obtained it. The statement read as follows:

"My son went out of the house 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon after we had been shopping. He did not come home for supper and I did not see him again until early Sunday morning, when I saw him come into the house with Mrs. Hazel Brady, whom I had never seen before.

"I had ben sleeping, and upon seeing them I became suspicious of my son and arose. Hurrying into my son's bedroom. I found him and the woman. I ordered the girl out of the room. Just then my daughter Marie returned home and I told her to take Mrs. Brady to her room and put her to bed. Then I went back to my room. About an hour later I heard a commotion. I went to my son's room and I saw that he was trying to force his way into his sister's room, where Mrs. Brady was also sleeping. We struggled and he deliberately plunged the sword in my chest. I withdrew it, bent it on my knee and threw it under the bed. My son then hit me in the eye and head with his fists."

ATTRACTIVE NECKWEAR

Engaging novelties in neckwear are seen more and more frequently in department stores and in the smaller shops. Many different styles in muslin or linen, lace-trimmed styles or with old lace or sheer batiste embroidery, are worn, giving a dainty finish to the daytime gowns.

The bare neckline in dark-colored frocks, which was so trying, is quite passe. Most of the new things are of snowy white, though some chic collars and cuffs have the touch of scarlet that is all the rage at the moment.

The fluffy jabot in muslin and lace or chiffon or georgette finely pleated is very fashionable and is always a flattering accessory in street dress.

AGED MAN CLAIMS LIVING OFF FARM GIVEN TO DEAD SON

Judgment Reserved by Mr. Justice Logie in the Cournoyea Affair.

BELLEVILLE, Dec. 18.—Judgment was reserved in the last case in the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court before Mr. Justice Logie, that of Simon Cournoyea against Felix J. J. Rachotte, of Hungerford, and Rachel Caset, executors of the estate of Mary Alice Cournoyea, the daughter-in-law of the plaintiff. The evidence of the plaintiff, an aged man, was taken. The question before the court was the interpretation of a deed given by the plaintiff in 1903 to his son and the question of maintenance on the farm.

It appears that the aged man gave his son a deed of land, and he son deeded it to his wife. Later the son died. The wife kept the old man on the farm for some years. Then all the parties went to Peterborough to reside, the plaintiff going with them. There the daughter-in-law died, leaving by will the property in question to the defendants in trust for her children.

The plaintiff claims from them maintenace off the farm. The defence contends that the plaintiff is not entitled to maintenance.

SALOON KEEPER SHOT BY PROHIBITIONISTS

Claim Agents Demanded $5-000 Bribe Money and When Bootlegger Refused to Pay, He Was Killed.

CHICAGO, Dec 18.—(Canadian Press).—Charges by Cold Finch that his father, Homar Finch, Hotel Keeper, was shot to death a week ago by three Federal Prohibition agents because he failed to pay them a bribe when they found him selling alcohol holesale, were being investigated by Federal and State Authorities today.

Young Finch said he was an eye witness of the killing, which occurred in the saloon. He said he and his father had been engaged in redistilling denatured alcohol and his father had been caught by the Prohibition agents with four drugs of the re-distilled product. They held him a prisoner for a day and demanded $5,000, he told the assistant state's attorneys.

His father was released when he promised to raise $1,000 as the first payment to be brought to a rendezvous the next day, his story went. His father did not go the following day, four men wearing Government badges came into the saloon and after reproaching Finch all began firing, young Finch said. He and two other occupants of the saloon at the time were not molested.

SPENDING

The railroads will spend 1100 million dollars in 1925, for new equipment and improvements, in addition to the 2136 million authorized during the last two years.

This gigantic program will help general prosperity. It is typical of plans being made for next year in many leading industries. You can safely bank on 1925 being a boom year.

The majority will simply spend more. A minority will save—and, later, sit at the top of the ladder.

In a lifetime you don't encounter many years when its easy to save and get ahead.

MORE EVIDENCE IN SMALL CASE

Maid Who Disappeared at Time of Theatre Magnate, Turned Up.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Miss Florence and Miss Gertrude Small, sisters of Ambrose J. Small, the missing Toronto millionaire, were informed to-day by an official at the Parliament Buildings that Catharine Dunn, a maid employed in the home of Ambrose Small, at the time of his disappearance in December, 1919, herself disappeared from the Whitby Asylum at the time of the Small disappearance. Miss Dunn gave some information to the press. Subsequently she was an inmate of the Whitby institution for many months. The Small sisters have been following all clues in the hope of solving the mystery of their brother's disappearance, and sought an interview with Miss Dunn. No reply came to the appeals addressed to the officials of the institution. Yesterday Inspector Dunlop of the asylum was told on the telephone by one of the Small sisters that she would take the matter to the Premier if no reply was forthcoming to the request, and she was then told that Miss Dunn had disappeared last July. He believed she had eloped, but at any rate no trace of her had been found.

WOMAN INJURED.

OMEMEE, Dec. 18.—During the high wind and snow storm which struck Omemee on Saturday evening, the Hydro was cut off and the town was left in darkness. Mr. C. L. Morcombe, who is employed by the Power Company, immediately got in touch with Belleville, who located the trouble and soon had it repaired, but not until many residents had produced a coal-oil lamp, which is kept in readiness by every thoughtful housewife for such times as this. Many more sat in darkness waiting for the lights to return, which was about half an hour.

MRS. HENRY LAIDLEY OF OMEMEE BURIED

Died in 83rd Year—Was a Pioneer of Durham County.

OMEMEE, Dec. 16.—The passing of Sarah Galbraith, beloved wife of Henry Laidley, at her home in Omemee on Wednesday, December 10th, at the advanced age of almost eighty-three years has removed from our midst one of the oldest residents of the village. The deceased lady was the daughter of the late Robert and Sarah Galbraith, early pioneers from Ireland to Port Hope and Cobourg and later to Emily township where she was born. In her early life she was adopted by the late James and Margaret Laidley, and in the year 1872 was married to her now sorrowing husband. Almost all her life she has lived in this vicinity and was dearly loved by all who knew her, for her kind loving and quiet disposition.

During the last two years she has been mostly confined to her bed, where she received every care that was possible for her devoted daughter, Mrs T. C. Stephenson to bestow.

The late Mrs Laidley was a member and supporter of the Methodist church and as long as health permitted was always found in her accustomed place of worship.

The funeral which was held on Friday afternoon, December 12th was largely attended by sorrowing relatives and friends. The service being conducted by her pastor, Rev. E. W. Rowland, assisted by Rev. A. T. Weir, rector of Christ church after which the funeral cortege wended its way to the Emily cemetery where the remains were laid to rest by four nephews, Messrs. Clarence Laidley, Dr. C. Laidley of Lindsay, Fergus Porter of Janetville, Benson Dunn of Oshawa and Messrs. E. Ferguson, Lindsay and Charles Laidley of Dunsford, who assisted as pall-bearers.

Those left to mourn her loss are the aged husband, one daughter, Mrs. T. C. Stephenson and three sons, Messrs. James and Howard of Swift Current, Sask. and Fred of Denver, Colorado, to whom is extended the sympathy of many friends.

Many beautiful floral tributes from friends paid in a silent way their tribute of love and esteem to the departed, namely: large wreath of lilies from husband, pillow from the three sons; crescent, Mr and Mrs. I. Laidley, Mr. C. Laidley, Lindsay; spray, Methodist church; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. Bryson and Mrs. T. T. Boyd, Toronto; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cornell; spray, Mrs. (Rev.) Phelps, Lindsay and daughter, Miss Nellie Phelps, Kingston; spray, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Ivory; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills; spray, Misses Annie and Irene Clemett.

Those who attended the funeral from a distance were: Mrs. A. E. Bryson, Mrs. Boyd, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. I. Laidley, Mr. Clarence Laidley, Dr. C. Laidley, Mrs. (Rev.) Phelps, Mr. and Mrs. W. Curtis, Mrs. B. Courtney, Mrs. Brethour, all of Lindsay; Mr. B. Dunn, Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. Fergus Porter, Janetville, Mr. Charles Laidley, Miss Ida Laidley and Mr. Thurston of Dunsford.

Straight frocks of black satin are distinctive with white collars and cuffs and many small white pearl buttons.

STORM STRIKES WARSAW FOLKS

One Man Ditched His Car and Another Had a Broken Axle.

WARSAW NEWS

WARSAW, Dec. 17.—A good many Warsaw people were caught in the storm on Saturday afternoon and evening.

Ralph Wasson and Norman Crowe broke an axle of their car. Another ditched his car within a few yards of home when a sudden blast struck. All were glad to reach home safely.

Those who had turkeys to take in on Saturday were satisfied with 30 cents a pound. Cheikens were not so satisfactory, except for those who had engaged sales and had the very best. In Warsaw they went for 18 cents.

But few cars have been in the village since Saturday, and some of them are in the garages for repairs. If one must run the car in cold weather, it is well to be prepared with non-freezing fluid in the radiator and to have proper covers for the engine.

Sleighs, cutters, buggies, wagons, and motors, all were in the village on Monday.

Special Services.

In the Presbyterian church, Sunday there was a fair attendance for the day. Rev. W. Atkinson, continuing his series of sermons preached on "The Mastery of the World." Next Sababth he will be away and Mr. Pinkerton, a Baptist student, will conduct a union service in the Presbyterian church. He will preach at Cottesloe in the afternoon and at the Indian River Baptist church in the evening.

The Presbyterian Sunday School children are practising for their entertainment of January 1.

There were but two buggies in the Methodist shed on Sunday evening. A fair representation of village people were out. Rev. F. G. Weir preached on "War", as a sort of preparation for next Sunday's sermon on "The Prince of Peace." He spoke of several prominent people who had declared that they would never again sanction war. Among other things he said there were three kinds of war: 1st, wars of aggression, that no Christian should countenance; 2nd, wars of protection or assistance. A Christian could hardly stand by and not help some one who needed help; 3rd, Wars of defense. It is surely not a Christians' duty to stand still and allow others to destroy all he loves.

There is to be a dairy meeting in the Warsaw Town Hall on Thursday afternoon. There will be several special speakers.

Women's Institute.

The regular meeting of the Warsaw Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon. A debate and pie social will be held on Tuesday, January 13th.

Mrs. Richard Batten gave her report of the convention. She spoke of the garment clubs and classes, which are being held in many places. She was especially pleased with all the music, contributed during convention. Most of it was by young people. There were some especially good choruses by school girls.

Mr. Butnam gave a history of Institute work. The institute is over twenty-six years old, but this was the twenty-third convention. The first few conventions were held in Guelph. There were several at this convention who had been at the first.

There was a very interesting address on what might be done to promote health, especially among children. Anyone may have water tests made free by sending a sample to the Provincial Labratory.

The convention passed a resolution to ask parliament to have the O.T.A. rigidly enforced.

They also passed a resolution to suggest having a doctor stationed in outlying districts. Some times there are several months when no doctor is near certain districts.

They also thought it would be wise to have the license taken from drivers who became intoxicated.

The subject of women on school boards was discussed.

One woman told that they had a thriving institute and decided to build a memorial community hall. In different ways they raised $3,000.

The school-trustees decided on a new school and the proposal was made that the school and institute unite forces, and that a good school, with all equipment be erected. It would be used as a community hall, and there would be a dresing room and other conveniences. The women were to put in their $3,000, and would have the freedom of the building, the only thing of which they had the actual control was the furnishing of the kitchen. By the time everything was done, there were two trustees on the board opposed to Women's Institute and the women were ordered to take their belongings, and have nothing more to do. Naturally they could not take the whole $3,000.

In some place the institutes have seen to it that the school pupils have hot lunches. In other places they have secured a school nurse, have helped secure a doctor, and pay the necessary fees, have helped make the school surrounding more artistic.

The institutes have a responsibility, that benefits and elevates woman's life, benefits, elevates and adds to the comfort of the community.

At the next meeting, Thursday, January 8, the subject will be "The Social side of Farm Life."

Personal Mention.

She is resting as well as she can, and is much relieved to know there is no fracture.

DISTRICT DAIRY MEETING HAS GOOD REPORT AT CAMPBELLFORD

Big Increase in Number of Cows Supplying Milk to Factories.

MORE MILK USED.

Cheese Increased By Nearly Five Hundred Thousand Pounds.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 18. — The annual district dairy meeting for the county of Northumberland, was held in the Public Library at Campbellford yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario.

About seventy-five men were present. Mr. Richard Honey, director for the district, was in the chair, and called the meeting to order. He said that dairy produce had kept up better than anything else since the war, and there is no doubt that it will stay good. The dairy cow has carried us well over the time and is a friend to the rich and poor, old and young and is a good mortgage lifter. He then called upon Mr. Murray, the local dairy instructor, to give his report.

District Progress.

Mr. Murray said his district had made good growth. The following is a brief report submitted by him of the work in the Campbellford district:

This district is comprised of 24 factories in the northern part of Northumberland county, with two in Peterborough county. In this district there were eight hundred and ninety cheese factotry patrons, supplying in six months 36,382,427 pounds of milk from which was manufactured 3,148,661 pounds of cheese, requiring on an average 11.55 pounds of milk to make one pound of cheese.

The average price per pound of cheese this year was approximately sixteen and one quarter cents for first grade, depending on the length of season each factory operated. Taking sixteen and one quarter cents as the average price per pound of cheese and adding to this the value of whey, cream and butter, it would appear the milk delivered to the cheese factories was worth $529,716.

The number of cows producing this milk was 9,379, showing an average of 3,879 pounds per cow. The total number of composite tests made was 5,663, which showed an average fat content of three decimal one nine.

Comparing with 1923 we have made the following advance:

All Around Increase.

Increase in milk 5,384,406 pounds; increase in per cent. fat, .01; increase in cheese, 482,296 pounds; increase in patrons, 92; increase in cows, 1,279.

Decrease in price per pound cheese of two and three-quarter cents and a decrease of .07 pound milk per pound cheese. He spoke of the grading of cheese. Some of the factories made one hundred per cent. firsts and these factories should get the benefit of the price. Almost every factory is in good condition and the maker keeping things neat and clean. Causes of trouble: Milking machines, drawing of whey in milk cans and turnip feeding.

Address on Grading.

Mr. J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy produce grader, gave an address on his work, also some points of instruction. He mentioned the meeting held at Warkworth last year. In his address he brought out some of the outstanding points. He was pleased to meet the men of this district. His address, in part, was as follows:

We have now completed our second year of official grading of cheese and from it we can no doubt learn many things that are of interest and benefit to the industry. At this meeting of representatives we will take up a few of the more important points that have been brought to our attention this year, and make a comparison with our results for 1923.

This year's grading has been closer than that of a year ago, for at that time we allowed one vat of good No. 2 cheese to pass on every five vats of No. 1. This, however, was pointed out as a mistake, and consequently this year all cheese has been put up in its respective grade, which accounts for the increase in the number of pick-outs for 1924. However, results from this step have been gratifying as complaints from Great Britain have been practically eliminated.

The use of a registered number for each factory was introduced this year and has given splendid results. It eliminates the possibility of a factory changing its shipping brand each week, as was practised a year ago. It also enables us to keep an accurate account of each individual factory, and further it ensures protection to the grader and the buyer, as the cheese can now be traced in every phase of its manufacture and selling stages, finding accurate details of its origin, etc. The result of this is that no responsibilities will be placed upon the wrong parties, but each will have to shoulder his own. Very little trouble was encountered in getting the factories to register and secure their numbers. At the request of the producers and their organizations the grades were stamped on the boxes. In 1923 the factories claimed that the merchants were selling No. 2 cheese as No. 1, thereby getting exorbitant profits. The merchants then claimed that it would be difficult to sell the cheese if stamped. These protests, however, have proved to be imaginary, as the British importers in place of entering any protest against the system, have approved of it. The system in itself should produce confidence in the mind of the producer that he is getting exactly the full market value for his cheese, and also eliminate suspicion from both the buyer, and the importer, that the cheese exported and imported are exactly the quality as marked by the government stamp on the box.

The correct marking of the vat number on the box is of the utmost importance.

Owing to this marking in many cases being done incorrectly in the past season, a great deal of confusion has ensued and many complaints have been registered from the old country buyers. This confusion is caused because in some cases it has been impossible for the buyers to distinguish the vat number from that of the weight. A circular was mailed to every factory describing and illustrating the correct method of marking. Nevertheless it is most imperative that your attention is drawn to the fact that this careless marking during the past season has injured the name of Canadian cheese in the old country. Owing to this the Department has decided to protect the man who does his work correctly by grading the cheese that is improperly marked as a defect, and cutting it in score as it deserves. We therefore ask you that in 1925 you will see that the instructions sent out will be followed.

New System.

We have decided next year to have you commence your vat numbers at 100, when your cheese does not exceed 95 pounds, in cheese where it exceeds that weight start your vat number at 150. The weights will be marked in black and the vat number in red, and placed as shown in the circular which will be mailed to you. Figures for weights should be 1 1-8 or 1 1-4 inches in height, vat numbers smaller. In 1925 let us get down to business and see that every box before leaving your factory is properly marked and is neat and legible. You will be surprised at the good results and will be rewarded for your effort. It will be appreciated and that means a lot.

Defects in Cheese.

Considering the cheese graded in Central Ontario as applied to defects and placing it under their different heads: Flavours, Over 90 p.c. of our twos and threes were placed there on account of flavors, which are described as follows: Rancid, fruity, turnipy, gasoline and not clean. We had more "not clean" than all the others put together. These are generally known as livers and at times it is very difficult to decide upon which grade they should go in. Turnipy flavour was not so prevalent as a year ago, and if entirely eliminated would be a boon to the trade.

Little fault can be found in texture. We had, of course, a few that were weak, open, mealy and some acidy. During the month of June we had our greatest amount of weak and open cheese, which was quite general throughout the Dominion. This was owing to the fact of changing from cool weather to warm and the cheese being full of moisture were weak and opened up. This is a condition which the cheese makers should be on the lookout for. Invariably a number are caught unprepared, the result being that our percentage of number 2 goes up. Do not forget this another season. It will always happen at the latter part of May or the beginning of June.

Very few cheese were graded down for closeness, only as mentioned under texture.

A wonderful improvement was found in color over 1923, when we had a large number graded down for uneven color and mixed curd. We still have a few who mix their curd. Don't do it again.

A marked improvement over last year is shown in finish. A few lots, however, were graded down for this defect as they were outstanding. Improvement can still be made, and will be looked for in 1925. The demand for an attractive and well-finished cheese is becoming very keen, and the result will ultimately be that a cheese which shows evidence of slovenly workmanship will not be wanted.

Boxes Are Better.

We have had better boxes and more care has been shown in boxing than ever before, yet there are still a number using boxes too large in diameter for the cheese and some too low for the cheese. Some of the boxes are of poor quality and not properly nailed. As most of the manufacturers are putting out a very good box, there is no reason why the ones who are not toeing the mark should be patronized. In some cases where we have the cheese improperly boxed, we give the cheesemaker the opportunity of reboxing, which, after all, is a very unsatisfactory way.

Far better to have things right in the first place and avoid trouble and expense.

In conclusion, the progress we have made for the betterment of the industry is creditable. Our No. 1 cheese is possibly the finest ever made in Canada, and in a greater percentage of them, many of the defects are gradually being eliminated. The cheesemakers never tried so hard to do their work well as they have this year, and even if they had some low grades, their work is a credit to the cheese industry. If in the few failures we have had, we have learned something why then some good has been accomplished, as we will turn the lesson to good account. During the two seasons of grading observations have shown that where a spirit of co-operation existed between maker, his patrons, his instructor and the chief instructor, much good was accomplished in the way of cleaning up any existing defects. Where the opposite condition existed, however, very little good was done.

Please bear in mind that no one connected in the instruction, work of grading, etc., is there for any selfish, personal interest but solely to try and produce the finest Canadian cheese and eliminate the lower grades, and, further, that any information given by anyone is to try and improve and thereby get as close to 100 per cent. as possible, bringing one of our greatest Canadian industries to an enviable peak of perfection.

Mr. Irwin then gave some figures for 1923 and 1924 as follows:

Central Ontario Grading

Total boxes graded—120,341; Special 1313, per cent 1.09; No 1, 103121, per cent 85.70; No. 2, 15,541, per cent 12.91; No. 3, 366, per cent .30.

Per cent special and No. 1 86.79; per cent under No. 1 13.21.

Total boxes graded 92,886; per cent. specials 6.37; No. 1 79.92; No. 2, 12.14; No 3 1 55; Specials and No 1 per cent 86.32; Under No. 1 per cent 13.69.

Less on No. 2 and 3 Grade Cheese at $1 per box $15,907.

Total boxes graded 1924 to Nov. 1st 1,455,534; total boxes graded 1923 to Nov. 1st 1,272,514; increase No. of boxes 1924, 183,020.

Good Showing

To my mind this a remarkably good showing so far as the improvement in quality is concerned, Mr. Irwin said, and is pretty good evidence that a great proportion of the makers tried their best to make good cheese. Some will say that the favourable weather conditions which we experienced last season was a great factor in connection with the improvement. However, when you analyze these figures and find that there was an improvement every month it shows that the makers had a lot to do with it. I like to give praise where it is due, but at the same time I do not wish you to think that we have reached that state where all factories are making the best type of cheese. Some factories have a very bad record and it is entirely due to the efforts of the best men in business that there was so much improvement.

This address and reports were well worth hearing and there were about fifteen cheese makers present at this meeting.

Alex Hume Elected

The election of a director for the district was then taken up. Mr. Publow took charge of this. There were two nominations by motion, Mr. Alex. Hume and Mr. Richard Honey Mr. Honey dropped out in favor of Mr. Hume, so Mr. Alex. Hume is the District Director for 1925. Mr. Honey and Mr Hume are both appointed to attend the Dairymen's convention to be held at Cornwall in January 7th and 8th 1925.

Chief Instructor Spoke.

Mr. G. G. Publow, chief instructor for Eastern Ontario, in an interesting address said: The object of this meeting and giving this address is to see if we are practising methods that are not the best. The dairy industry is not only national but international. Both governments are interested in it. The Dominion government looks after transportation and grading, and the Provincial government, sanitary laws and instruction. The cheese industry is the only branch manufacturing its own products. Last year was the first year we hda independent grading; over 15 per cent. of the cheese made in Canada in 1923 was under No. 1 grade. Last spring Mr. Publow made an appeal to the makers to try to lower the number of undergrades at least 5 per cent., and 14 per cent less milk to make a pound of cheese. There are nearly 7 per cent. more first grades this year than last. The makers must have put forth every effort and the patrons who produce must have been doing better work this season.

He had been in the work for 50 years and he found the best grade this year and September and October cheese was the finest he ever saw in this country. Our special aim is to reduce the undergrades and eliminate the conditions that are responsible. What is there that has to be done? With a more critical inspection what can we do to persuade those indifferent parties on the farms and in the factories to measure up?

Must Obey Laws.

He especially mentioned the requisites for a good up-to-date factory. The instructor is to see that the laws put there by the Government are obeyed. No manufacturing concern should be more attractive than our cheese factories. Try to have conditions changed. Think of the enormous investment you have in your farms and what it means to get full returns. No check is made in this; stoppage of leaks enables you to get better returns. Those who have this investment should be more concerned about the conditions. It is the obligation of the cheesemaker to make milk into cheese with the smallest loss. There is not one maker in fifty who checks up his own work, samples of milk tested, pounds of milk, pounds of fat, weigh cheese, etc.

He should get 2.6 for one pound fat. If this is not the case something is wrong. Inquire into the loss. Every instructor should have a report and see where the leakages are. Some factories are taking one pound more milk to make one pound of cheese than others. The most up-to-date men are enquiring and looking into these things. Sanitary inspection is compulsory but not Instruction. Grading is the right thing, but it does not end there. These cheese have to measure up when they reach the Old Country. Cheese will made will go on improving till they are ripe. They must be in the best condition when they go to the consumers. Ninety-five per cent. or more of the defects are due to flavors. There is more need for clean conditions.

The manufacturing plant should set an example to the farm producer and the maker should have pride enough to have no second grade. The maker should be held responsible for the lack of ability or carelessness.

Give Time to Ripen

Some factories are not keeping the cheese long enough after they are manufactured. They should have time to ripen.

District Representative.

Mr. Smith, district representative of the Department of Agriculture, gave a short address. Part of the work of this department is to improve the dairy cow. A large number of farmers are interested in the improvement of livestock.

It pays to look after the testing. It is a decided advantage to have individual tests as one, two or three in a herd may be causing the trouble. Elimintae these from the herd. Fifty per cent. of the men who send to cheese factories are not particular as to the kind of cows they keep.

BEGGARS MAKING PLENTY OF CASH

Clean Up Between $10 and $50 a Day.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 18.—(United Press).—Pan handling is the most lucrative profession for the holidays, A. E. Nissen, special agent for the Salvation Army, reported to-day after an exhaustive investigation. Beggars will collect fully $500,000 here during the next two weeks, he estimated. Beggars, capitalising the Christmas spirit, are making from $10 to $50 a day, Nissen said, giving their four best 'selling talks' as follows:

"I have a penny and need another for a postage stamp."

"Got change for half a dollar" (after which the pan handler pathetically discloses that he has no four-bit pieces and requests a nickle to get a bowl of soup).

"Let me have some car fare to get home on, mister."

"Say, Buddy, youse was in the army?"

WIFE SUES "IRISH TENOR."

Discloses That Walter Scanlan's Real Surname Is Van Brunt.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The real name of Walter Scanlan, "the Irish tenor," is Walter J. Van Brunt, according to papers filed in the Supreme Court. He was directed to pay $50 a week alimony to Mrs. Lillian Van Brunt, pending trial of a suit in which the plaintiff alleges he has neglected her and has been attentive to other women.

Mrs. Van Brunt alleges that the singer deserted her in 1920 and that she would have sued him earlier had he not pleaded with her to "spare him the publicity that would result from the disclosure of the fact that Walter Scanlan, known to the public as the 'Irish tenor,' was Walter Van Brunt, who deserted his wife and lived with another woman, representing her to be his wife."

Herman Nugent, of Mount Horeb, Believed to Have Died From Heart Failure.

OMEMEE, Dec. 18.—Mr. Herman Nugent, 20-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nugent, of Mount Horeb, met his death very suddenly last evening.

He had been working all day, and after putting his horses up for the night he did not return to the house. His grandfather, with whom he had been working during the day, went to the barn to do some chores, and on reaching the stable he found the boy lying unconscious near one of the horses.

A doctor was summoned from Lindsay, but the boy never regained consciousness. On examination, it was found that there were no marks or bruises on the body, and it is believed that he died from heart failure.

Voice Of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In answer to Conservative in last nights' Examiner let me say that Porter and Criminal lawyers are poor material to form the Constitution of a country on, and so far as I am personally concerned they both must go—Hoop Harrah.

Conservative must have just returned from trip to Saskatchewan and must have enclosed in that elastic hide of his one quart of Scotch, 2 gallons of wine and 4 gallons of beer, as he has entirely forgotten his own name.

Yours truly,

IS PRINCIPAL FRAZER A "MODERNIST?"

To the Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Are our Anti-Union friends utterly lacking in humor, that healthful preservative of the amenities of life, or are they lacking in honor? For if they have humor why do they not see the absurdity of their attacks on the Unionists for "modernism," while keeping Prin. Frazer as their titular head? If they have honor, how can they lend the name of their Association to the printed matter distributed in a number of congregations attacking the Methodist Church for modernism?

Now it seems that Prin. Fraser resents the charge of "modernism." No one will more readily admit than the writer, the futility of tags or pigeon holes in trying to determine the intellectual or theological status of a man. "Modernism," like "Bolshevism" can be made to cover a wide, wide field. So we must just take it that Dr Fraser is not a "modernist." But what do members of Principal Fraser's organization, like Rev. Mr. Dunn, Rev. J. Inkster, or Mr. Alan Thompson think of such words as the following written by Prin. Fraser for the Harvard Review—

"In the Presbyterian Church there is required an apparently rigid subscription to the Westminster Confession as a subordinate standard. Various methods of casuistry are resorted to in order to mitigate the severity of this ordinttion test. The phrase 'as adopted by this Church in the basis of Union' sometimes affords relief for it is commonly understood that there was a tacit understanding in 1875 between the Old Kirk Liberals and the Canadian Presbyterian Conservatives that large liberty should be allowed in interpreting the Confession, and it was partly on this ground that the heresy charge against the late D. J. MacDonnell of Toronto was dropped."

Dr. Fraser critisizes the Doctrinal Statement of the Basis of Union because it is too orthodox for him, he says: "It is so largely an apparent compromise between systems that have had their day and ceased to be. Should a pre-Christian Semitic poem of the origin of evil be set down in cold prose as binding in Christian intellect in the twentieth century? Should a doctrine of the fall of man be put forth in a form that conflicts with the scientific theory of evolution? Is a child born with a sinful nature? If, so, is it because of the sin of Adam and Eve? Are the miraculous conception and the virgin birth of the essence of the Christian faith? If they are lacking in our highest Christology, that of the fourth gospel, are they necessary to a modern statement? . . . Why not give a doctrine of Atonement which preserves the scriptural and universtily human principles of vicarious suffering and which will be intelligible to those brought up in the atmosphere of evolutionary thought?"

Now, would Mr. Alan Thompson and his friends please inform us whether anything so unambiguously "modernistic" has proceeded from Knox or Victoria theological colleges, from The Christian Guardian, or even from Prof. George Jackson himself?

To the Editor, Evening Examiner:

Dear Sir: I have given careful consideration to Rev. Mr. McConnachie's letter in your issue of the 16th inst., and can only say that I have nothing to add to, or retract from, my statement contained in your issue of December 12th.

Since that letter was written Rev. Mr. McConnachie brought the matter before Presbytery while in session at Cobourg last Wednesday, when two ministerial members of Presbytery pressed that I should be charitably censured with a view to preventing a recurrence of the alleged offence. It was suggested that if I would apologize for my action the motion would be dropped. This I declined to do, upon the grounds set forth in my letter of the 12th inst., in the Examiner. The Presbytery after due consideration declined to ask me to do so, and the motion was not pressed.

One other matter mentioned by Rev. Mr. McConnachie deserves mention. At the spring meeting of Presbytery a resolution was adopted suggesting that sessions refrain from carrying on propaganda either for or against union in other congregations without the consent of the ministers and sessions concerned. During the discussion in Presbytery last week of the proposed resolution of censure, one ministerial member of Presbytery stated that Unionists as well as Anti-Unionists had repeatedly violated the intention of the resolution adopted by Presbytery last spring.

Although himself a Unionist, he, therefore, moved that this resolution should be rescinded. On being put to a vote this resolution, as stated by Rev. Mr. McConnachie, was declared lost. It was the manifest opinion of Presbytery, however, that sessions should act judiciously, and should move in accordance with the wishes of their people, and not against them.

Rev. Mr. McConnachie claims that in their discussion ministers are "privileged." He contends that they have the right to "inform" their people on the findings of the church courts, and to "explain the same."

May I be pardoned if I point out to Rev. Mr. McConnachie that the people constitute the highest court of the Presbyterian church, inasmuch as all the powers of the courts of the church to which he refers have been given to them by the members of the church, and the courts are responsible to them for their actions. Many of our ministerial friends seem to be overlooking this fact.

This matter of Church Union now has been referred back to the people for their decision. There is a growing feeling on the part of the people that the strenuous efforts being made by many ministers to lead the people into Union constitutes an interference with the rights of the people to settle this matter for themselves. These efforts are being strongly resented—especially where ministers are using their pulpits for propaganda purposes, while refusing the right of the other side to reply—and are the cause of much of the increasing opposition to church union.

Rev. Mr. McConnachie claims that many ministers, in order to maintain peace in their congregations, have sought to prevent this matter from being discussed. This policy seems well-designed to carry the people into Union without their having the privilege of expressing their opinion. Would our ministerial friend be as anxious to maintain peace if by preventing discussion their congregation would be kept out of Union?

As Rev. Mr. McConnachie and I now have both expressed ourselves twice on this subject, and at considerable length, it is my hope that the matter now will be allowed to drop without any impairment of our Christian fellowship.

Sincerely yours,
JAMES DUTTON.

DR. CATHELS' LETTER A PERSONAL OPINION.

Wide attention is being drawn by those in favor of Church Union to a private letter sent by Dr. Cathels, Moderator last year of the Church of Scotland, to a Toronto minister, in which the idea of Church Union is supported. Copies of this letter are being sent through the mail to members of Presbyterian congregations.

The Peterboro branch of the Presbyterian Church Association points out in reply that this letter expresses only Dr. Cathels' personal opinion, and that it in no way represents the opinion of the Church of Scotland. A careful reading of the bill shows that Dr. Cathels expresses himself as in favor only of the general principle of Church Union without attempting to discuss any of the provisions of the Church Union Bill with which, presumably, he is entirely unfamiliar. In Canada many people who nine years ago voted in favor of the principle of Church Union are now opposed to the Church Union Bill, because of many provisions it contains which take important rights from the people and give them to the courts of the Church. For instance, Part 4 of the bill, page 38, under the heading, 'Benevolent Funds,' gives the General Council of the United Church power to decide how much money local congregations shall be required to raise to provide funds to aid aged and retired ministers and widows and orphans of ministers and the Act stipulated that as a by-law it shall be "obligatory" upon congregations to raise the amount assessed upon them. This is a form of tyrany that thousands of Protestants, several centuries ago, gave their lives to escape from.

Declaration of Faith.

Much is being said, also, about the excellence of the Declaration of Faith adopted for the new Church. Practically nothing is being said, however, about the fact that Part 5 of the bill, page 31, under the heading, "The General Council," gives the "General Council" "full power" to change the doctrines of the Church without consulting the people. Thus people who vote to enter the United Church may awake within a few years to find that the Declaration of Faith has been radically changed by the General Council along modernistic lines and that the people have given away their powers to control the situation. Protestantism grew out of a protest against this very condition, and now the people are being asked to quietly surrender rights to the courts of the Church which tens of thousands of their forefathers died to gain for them. The Peterboro branch of the Presbyterian Church Association points out that if Dr. Cathel knew such points as these he probably would become a strong opponent of Church Union.

Rev. Dr. Parker's Comment.

Commenting on Dr. Cathels' letter, Rev. Stuart C. Parker, of Toronto, in a published statement, said recently:

"May I remind Presbyterians that Dr. Cathels is speaking in this letter as a private individual, and not in the name or with the permission of the Church of Scotland? Needless to say, there are individuals here and there, in a Church of more than half-a-million communicants, who would applaud the present scheme in Canada. But the Church of Scotland officially has avoided such an attitude. Unlike the United Free Church, it has given as yet no semblance of countenance to the movement, but intends to proceed cautiously, waiting to be fully informed and to see the issue before committing itself to any official step. Dr. Cathels' personal opinion is his personal opinion, for which he alone is responsible. It is not shared by other leaders of the Church. Even the non-committal pronouncement of the U. F. Assembly has been made under considerable misapprehension. The statement in a recent issue of the U. F. Church Record, that Union in Canada is being opposed by 'wets' and the evil influences of the Dominion generally, shows the kind of information upon which the U.F. Assembly has been fed, and upon which it has been rash enough to act.

"We have all the assurances we require that the Church of Scotland, and also the Free Church of Scotland, will act with extreme caution."

THE CHURCHES AFTER UNION

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—In press despatches these days we read of ministers who have declared their "intention to continue our ministry in the Church of our fathers, which is now entering into the United Church of Canada." A statement recently issued by the Union Committee says: "You must go with your Church or separate yourself from her." "Why should you go with your mother Church rather than withdraw and maintain a separate existence?"

Statements such as the foregoing are either intended to deceive the simple or they are due to ignorance on the part of those who make them. Every one who has read the act passed by the Federal Parliament knows that, while this act provides for a "United Church" composed of such members of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches as wish to enter the Union, it also provides that congregations which by a majority vote decide not to enter the Union shall be deemed as not being in when the act comes into effect next June. This new "United Church" will be as distinct from the Presbyterian Church as is the Anglican Church or the Baptist Church. Presbyterians who enter it will lose their identity as Presbyterians. Presbyterians who remain out may for a short time be members of independent congregations, but they will lose no time in organizing a Presbyterian Church of Canada.

"The Presbyterian Church in Canada" will on June 10, 1925, legally cease to exist; it will be "merged" (as the Church Union Bill expresses it) into an entirely new body and will thus lose its identity. But on that same day its members who remain out of the Union will reconstitute their Church, which will continue without a break in its constitution, with all its traditions, for all those who desire to remain in it. So all this talk of "the mother Church entering the Union" is nonsense. Only those members of the "mother Church" who desire to enter the Union do so. Those who wish to remain out of the Union do so. The act of Parliament gives them this right, and it is they who will continue the Presbyterian Church of their fathers. The others will have ceased to be Presbyterian and will have become members of a new body to be known as the "United Church of Canada." The act gives them this right, and no one must interfere with such right, but it also gives a similar right to those who do not wish to enter the new Church.

If we only recognize each other's rights under the act, our quarrelling will cease, and we will go our separate ways in peace. Organic Union may come some day, but, if so, it must come as a growth. It cannot be forced. This has been the great mistake in the present movement, so meantime a separation is inevitable.

KILLS ALL HIS FAMILY EXCEPT SLEEPING BABY.

Austrian Ex-Officer Shoots Wife, Son and Daughter, Then Poisons Himself.

VIENNA, Dec. 18.—In a suburb of the Styrian capital, Gratz, paradise of pensioned army officers, a former cavalry captain, Paul Danners, shot to death his wife, adolescent son and daughter and then killed himself by poison. A two-year-old baby boy, asleep, was spared.

Captain Danners, though not wealthy, was comparatively well off. The family lived in their own villa and it appears he bequeathed $500 to charities in the suburb of Judendorf. Thus it is believed the deed was not caused by financial worry, but by temporary insanity, as the Captain was known as a sufferer from melancholia.

AN OLD-FASHIONED XMAS PROGRAMME

Splendid Suggestions to Make an Ideal Entertainment.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

By M. H. DIXON.

A simple fireplace arrangement will make a pleasant and suitable background for the Christmas programme herein suggested for the schoolroom. The selections to be read, or acted, group themselves naturally about the hearth. Children love to "dress up" and may do so, for the singing of the carols, as well as for the acting.

The Christmas carols suggested are old favorites. Others may be substituted or added where the teacher finds it advisable. The programme will be briefly as follows:

1. Christmas Music. "It came upon the midnight clear."
2. Slections from Snow-Bound by Whittier.
3. From "A Christmas Carol" by Dickens, the scene, "Bob Cratchit's Christmas."
4. "'Twas the Night Before Christmas."
5. Christmas Music. "Holy Night, Silent Night."

Costumes for the Christmas music can be similar to those used for the Dickens' sketch. The first verse of the old hymn, "It came upon the midnight clear" is as follows:

It came upon the midnight clear,
That glorious song of old,
The angels bending near the earth
Their wondrous story told:
Peace on the earth, good will to men,
From heaven's all-gracious King;
The world in solemn stillness lay
To hear the angels sing.

Other Christmas songs may be added here or instrumental music.

"Snow-Bound," a winter idyl, by John Greenleaf Whittier, should be appropriately announced. Two small pages or heralds might do this, or one of the members of the cast might come before the curtain and give the title.

The copy of Snow-Bound at hand shows an excellent picture of the fireplace in Whittier's home, which would assist in constructing the stage setting already suggested.

Of course the poem is too long to be given in full. It would need to be cut. The boys would probably like the first parts, and the girls could take up the part starting with:

"Shut in from all the world without,
We sat the clean-winged hearth about."

Different actions for the group are suggested in the lines:

"We sped the time with stories old
Wrought puzzles out, and riddles told,
Or stammered from our school-book lore," etc.

The aunt and uncle could be given, but perhaps not in full, and the "master of the district school."

"Another guest" could be omitted to advantage and the poem taken up at this point:

"At last, the great logs crumbling low Sent out a dull and duller glow," and finish with the description of the Doctor.

If any slight changes are necessary for the stage, instrumental music could come next, before the youthful pages announce: "A Christmas Carol" by Charles Dickens, Stave Three.

A reader for the descriptive parts will be necessary and he can sit at one side of the stage in front of the curtain. For it would never do to omit, "Then up rose Mrs. Cratchit, Bob Cratchit's wife, dressed out but poorly in a twice-turned gown, but brave in ribbons which are cheap and make a goodly show for sixpence," etc.

The first action will be shown in pantomime, while the reader gives the first long paragraph. Mrs. Cratchit's first line starts, "What has ever got your precious father, then?"

The dialogue continues in a lively manner until the reader takes up the tale with, "Bob's voice was tremulous as he told them this," and continues with the Christmas dinner, the actors performing in pantomime.

The dialogue starts again with "A Merry Christmas to us all, my dears, God bless us."

The parts of Scrooge and the Spirit seem necessary to the story, and can be acted by two children or read by the reader. A last paragraph seems to close the pretty little episode nicely with "Scrooge had his eye upon them and especially on Tiny Tim, until the last."

The next selection on the programme can be omitted especially if in the school room giving this programme, this old favorite has been "done to death." If it hasn't been given for some time a very small child might try it and win his share of applause.

More music might be added to the last part of the programme. The song suggested, "Holy Night, Silent Night," would be a happy finish as a sort of benediction, leaving a pleasant and yet reverent thought to carry away home.

AN OLD FASHIONED CHRISTMAS DINNER

Historical Dates of the Festivities of the Early 50's.

TURKEY AND PIE.

"An old-time Christmas" is an expression that can be used in a relative sense only, when speaking of the celebration of this holiday in America. It was not until the very late '50s that keeping Christmas as it is understood today could be called a custom of the country. Among the influences that brought about this change were English and German novels, by this time being widely distributed, and the keeping of their old home holiday customs by newly arrived families from Great Britain and Germany. Puritan prejudice was compelled to yield in the matter of the celebration but refused to give up the place of honor at the Christmas feast to the foreign goose. Turkey, the King of Thanksgiving birds, became the Christmas bird as well.

Fancy plays joyfully with the thought of those by-gone days, filling them at will with songs and laughter—the thin tinkle of sleigh bells, with the new keen fragrance of pine and fir. There was leisure then for the great gatherings of kinfolks and old friends, plenty of time for story telling, singing and dancing, and the playing of games, the very names of which we know no more.

Those slow moving days had a flavor, an atmosphere, surely that shall no more return than the games or the odors of the Christmas feasts over which fancy loves best of all to linger.

It is to be led astray by story-book stuff to picture the days just before Christmas as full of the hurry of cooking, to believe the December air laden with the scents of vinegar, fruit, spices. Such things belong to Thanksgiving times. Not a self-respecting housekeeper of 1859 or '60 but had her pound cake and her spice cake packed away in tight boxes, her doughnuts mellowing in high jars, her cranberry "jell" in moulds ready to serve. If a son home from college or a married daughter returned for the holiday wished to recall childhood's memories, he or she, must visit the cool dusky cellar, lift the stone covers from certain brown deep jars and inhale the perfume of mince meat packed away for winter's use. Odors of the East were there.

In an outer room, as the returned one well knew, where the air was like that of a refrigerator, were hanging shelves heavy-laden with mince figs, baked and frozen, ready to be reheated for Christmas guests, and chance visitors. The shelves held besides perfect apples, polished until they shone, and baskets of the finest nuts selected from autumn stores.

The call for dinner comes at last and excited fancy dashes wildly about trying to paint the scene. Such huge tables as were set and such meals as were spread! In those days they often spoke of their tables as "groaning boards." No wonder. That phrase did not grow out of "thin clear soup" and "crisp head-lettuce" and "iced grape fruit." Ah no. Such like make no boards groan. Christmas tables in those days bore monster turkeys, stuffed with bread, sage and onions or with crackers and oysters, baked hams, huge and juicy. There were chicken pies of the kind today known only in dreams. Dishes and dishes and dishes of mashed potatoes, dishes of mashed turnips, baked squash and boiled onions and there were sweet and sour spiced pickles and purple and ruby and gold jellies and jams and preserves. An unbelievable list.

Benevolent host wielded grandfather's Sheffield carvers and urged more helpings and choice "stuffings." Gracious hostess sat behind grandmother's silver service and poured coffee and added cream and urged the merits of the chicken pie. Sons and daughters and cousins passed everything between whiles of their own eating. Thus they ate and ate, those incredible forefathers of ours, and they talked and talked and laughed and laughed and planned other dinners and lived to eat them.

There at last came the pies—mince and pumpkin and apple and cherry—and the cakes—pound cake, cream cake, spice cake, and the plum pudding and the doughnuts and finally the nuts and apples. There is documentary evidence otherwise no one would believe such dinners ever were.

Women then indulged in the practice not unknown today of exchanging favorite recipes. From a cook book of those days of old; quaint enough to satisfy the most exacting story-writer and full of written-in recipes in dim brown ink, is taken the appended brief but hair-raising formula that the modern cook may try.

"Mrs. Ferris' Sponge Cake"
4 cups of Flour.
4 cups of Sugar.
9 Eggs.
2 tablespoons of Vinegar.

"CORRIGAN" by EDMUND SNELL

III.—EMANCIPATION OF MISS SUONHENG.

It was the purest accident that gave Donald White the opportunity he had been looking for ever since the voyage began.

He was down in that Holy of Holies to which access is only given at stated times, the storehouse of all luggage labelled "Wanted on the Voyage." It wasn't at all clear how it happened, but a heavy, iron-bound trunk, disturbed by the feverish activities of a baggage steward, descended suddenly upon the unprotected head of a fat Chinese gentleman who was pensively sorting out a bunch of small brass implements that looked more like fish-hooks than keys. There are limits even to the resisting powers of Chinese skulls, and Mr. Oel-Kuang-Yin uttered a peculiar little grunt and fell to the floor in a state of unconsciousness.

The two male passengers who were nearest lifted the offending ox from the legs of the prostrate oriental; the baggage steward sent for the doctor; a woman screamed, and White made for the upper deck to break the news to Miss Suon-Heng.

He adjusted his rimless glasses.

"What is it?" asked Miss Heng, raising her weeping lashes.

White looked hard at a long chair where a book had been turned face-downward to mark the page.

"Oh!" said White with an effort. "The—er—Chinese gentleman who accompanies you has met with an accident. I thought I'd better tell you."

The girl did not display the slightest sign of dismay or surprise. She inclined her head slightly to one side and honored him with a smile he did not quite understand. She removed the book from Mr. Kyang-Yin's chair.

"I believe you are rather glad," she said.

White gasped and collapsed in the place she had made for him at her side.

"Really, Miss Heng!"

"Glad of this opportunity, I mean," she told him sweetly. "You've done nothing but stare at me since we left Southampton. You've no idea how much your glasses magnify. It has been most embarrassing!"

"I'm awfully sorry!"

"Please don't apologize. I'm honored." She allowed her beautiful long hand with their wonderfully polished nails to rest on his sleeve for the fraction of a second.

"I say. That's frightfully good of you!" stammered White.

"Not at all," said Miss Heng. "Now please tell me what has happened to my fat but honorable gaoler."

"A trunk fell on him and laid him out. He looked pretty bad when I left. They've sent for the doctor. I'm afraid he'll be laid up for the whole trip."

She uttered a sigh of relief.

"Isn't it providential!" exclaimed the amazing Miss Heng. "You see," she continued before White could break in, "I'm just a poor, little, fluttering bird in a cage, a prisoner bound by the conventions of my own country, and hating to leave the delightful unconventions of yours." She passed her hand, with an eloquent gesture, down the glistening surface of her coat. "Behold my prison-dress!"

"But I like it," protested White, warming up. "It suits you amazingly."

She looked along the deck, half nervously.

"You are sure you were not mistaken? It is not possible he will recover—soon?"

He shook his head.

"You can stake your life on that."

"Listen," she began, reassured. "Mr. Kuang-Yin is my uncle, symbolical of dear old China as it used to be, under whose customs I am condemned to marry a man I have not seen since I was a child. I am a daughter of the new era. You cannot realize the thickness of the wall I had to break down before I made them send me to Europe to study. Now it is all finished," she concluded sadly. "I have grown so English—and I hate to go back. Isn't it rotten luck?"

"By Jove, it is!" said White fervently. Her perfect command of his own language amazed him. "Who are you going to marry, Miss Heng?"

"You wouldn't be any wiser if I told you," she laughed merrily. "I shall be Mrs. Lai-Ho very soon now and my prison will be in the wilderness. He is what you call a rubber king. He is rich and his plantations are everywhere: Java, Sumatra, Malacca—"

"And Borneo!" White jerked out suddenly.

The girl started.

"You have heard of him, then?"

"I should think so! He's just acquired an estate near Kinarut, bought it from Jacobson's executors. Miss Heng," he cried excitedly, "d'you know we shall be neighbours!"

She regarded him sadly.

"It will be so suburban," she said. "Chinese women never know their neighbors, especially when they are English!"

White's face dropped. He clasped his hands between his knees and looked down at the deck. Suddenly he felt a gentle tug at his sleeve.

"Won't you tell me about my future husband," she said softly.

"Good Lord!" exclaimed the Englishman. "Of course, you don't know what he's like."

* * * * *

Donald White leaned on the white rail of the boat deck and looked gloomily out over the dark waters. He stood alone, for it was after eleven and the stars blinked down at him from a sky of infinite blackness. The fifteen days since his first meeting with Miss Suon-Heng had slipped by like the fleeting moments of a wonderful dream. Soon they would be only a happy memory. He would be back on the Orang-Puteh Kabun, urging his sweating coolies to supreme efforts, planning new buildings planting fresh rubber, toiling under the ever-watchful eye of the great Corrigan. Miss Heng had broken down a wall that countless centuries had built, and was going back through the gap she had made, to see the great stones piled in their place again, held fast by ever-enduring mortar; every instinct in White's being wanted to scale that grim barrier, the Great tDivide of east and west, and pluck he forbidden fruit that grew therein. The dragon that guarded the tree had many heads and the stout heart in his small frame quailed, not for himself, but for Miss Suon-Heng.

Suddenly a slim form crept to his side from the shadow of a boat. His arm stole round her and she fell sobbing on his coat. The sweet spices of the mysterious orient rose to his nostrils, intoxicating him; the rich silk of her jacket was pleasant to the touch.

She looked up at him through her tears.

"I have come to you Donald," she murmured. "My uncle is almost well. To-morrow he will get up, and my prison doors will close on me forever."

He felt her trembling in his arms like a frightened bird.

"Is there no way out?" he asked, softly.

She shook her head.

"To disobey—is death!" she whispered.

"I'm not afraid of death, Susie," he told her, using the pet name he had invented in his dreams.

She smiled proudly.

"It can never be," she said. "I must go to my cage on the one side of the way. I shall know you are there—on the other side, but I shall never see you. Will you mind—very much, Donald?"

He crushed her to him.

"It'll be hell," he cried, hoarsely, and kissed her lips.

A man with a bandaged head, who had just come up from the deck below, saw the two figures by the rail. His yellow face, as he turned to retrace his footsteps, was utterly devoid of expression.

* * * * *

"Come in, Mr. Lai-Ho!"

The stout Chinese rubber king handed his red umbrella to a servant and came slowly up the steps to where Corrigan was waiting. Corrigan—huge, clean-shaven and genial—held out a welcoming hand. The oriental, clasping his sun helmet to his chest, sat down in the chair the Englishman had placed for him.

"Thanks," he murmured, with a peculiarly gutteral intonation. Corrigan pushed forward an open tin of cigarettes.

"I am not blind," he said presently, tapping his temple with a forefinger.

Corrigan raised his brows.

"No," he agreed politely. "I should scarcely have thought so."

The oriental flicked the ash from his cigarette and sat back in the long krosi, his dark eyes regarding Corrigan through diagonal slits.

"When I have a fiend," pursued Lai-Ho, "I do evelything that I can for him; but"—a malevolent light flashed suddenly from his eyes—"if I have an enemy, Mr. Colligan, it would be better for him if he had never lived at all!"

"A very admirable code," said Corrigan, his hands in his pockets; "but I fail to understand——"

"You are my friend, and that is why I come to you this afternoon. You will lemember, Mr. Colligan, the circumstances of my malliage. Following the customs of my country, it was allanged for me by my palents in my infancy. Thlee weeks ago I blought my wife to her new home." He shook his head slowly from side to side. "The world we live in is too small, my fiend!"

Corrigan fidgeted with a stray end of bamboo that had somehow worked up from the arm of his chair. From the little he knew of this oriental magnate, he felt convinced he had not come there without a purpose. He knew, too, that his neighbor was not prone to wasting words; but he could not, for the life of him, discover to what end the conversation was leading. He had never set eyes on Mrs. Lai-Ho, to his knowledge. He assumed an expression of intense interest.

"My wife was sent to your countly. She study—and she learn your language.' He appeared to be leaning further and further forward in his chair. The friendly tone he had first assumed seemed to have grown gradually cold, until each sentence he uttered rang out like a bitter threat. "The teachings of the old China are forgotten; The Eulopean idea glows up. I find I have taken a serpent whose touch is cold. Down, deep down inside, she has an heart that is led and warm, Mr. Colligan; it beats not for me, but for somebody who must forever be my enemy!"

Corrigan stirred.

"What on earth has all this to do with me, Mr. Lai-Ho?" he demanded, his brows knit. "Personally, I have never seen your wife. Quite apart from that, I happen to have one of my own; in England for her health, I admit, but still very much in my thoughts. I'm far too devoted and too busy to bother about other people's family affairs."

Lai-Ho rose from his seat and, crossing the veranda, pulled aside the blue sun blinds. He pointed dramatically.

"Look!" he said, his finger shaking with a fury that was almost consuming him. "It is for this that I come to you!"

Corrigan strolled toward him and looked over his shoulder.

He saw an infinite expanse of waving rubber trees, green and flourishing; just showing above the topmost leaves, the house of Lai-Ho, his neighbor, lying astride a slope like a squat Noah's Ark; and, standing out in the near distance, One Tree Hill silhouetted against a sky of deeper blue. A man in khaki drill sat beyond the shadows of a breadfruit tree, his glasses glinting in the sunshine. As Corrigan shaded his eyes against the glare, he saw an arm wave suddenly like a semaphore, and from the window of the bungalow something fluttered for a moment, as if in reply.

I see," said Corrigan grimly, recognizing at a glance the man—and the situation. "This must stop."

"In China," pursued the oriental, "the betrayal of a poor man is a joke—of a wealthy man—a tlagedy." He swung slowly round, letting the blind swing into place. "I go now to catch the tlain to Jesselton, for the boat to Labuan leaves to-mollow. In ten days I leturn. I look to you, my fiend, to plevent this—tlagedy!"

"I think I can promise you," said Corrigan, holding out his hand. "I can usually answer for my employees."

"Thanks," replied Mr. Lai-Ho, picking up his hat and making for the steps. From the distance came the shrill scream of the approaching train. He hurried off down the slope, Corrigan watching him from the doorway.

Donald White sat, in sarong and singlet, listening to the contented murmur of voices from the coolie lines. The night was dark and starless and a faint breeze shivered the dried leaves of the thatch above him. In the living room beyond the veranda, a Chinese boy was clearing away the remnants of a meal. A ferrier lay outstretched at his master's feet on the moist earth, his head on his paws, both ears pricked. Suddenly he emitted a low growl and sprang to his feet, his coat bristling, and began barking furiously into the blackness at something White could not discern.

He rose slowly, calling the dog to him, and a slim form came running into the pale light thrown by the oil lamp, and slipped to the ground, both arms clasped round his knees.

"Susie!" He gasped incredulously.

He gathered her up in his arms and carried her to the veranda.

DOCTOR'S DEFIANCE OF MEDICAL BOARD

Struck Off Register for Writing Article in Weekly Magazine

"A FLAGRANT WANT"

Distinguished Member of Profession Discusses the Case

The General Medical Council yesterday found that Dr. Hadyn Brown, of Cavendish-square, W., had been guilty of unprofessional conduct, and the registrar was directed to erase his name from the medical register.

He was summoned to appear before the council on the charge that he sought to obtain patients or to promote his own professional advantage by means of a signed article containing his portrait published in a weekly magazine. The article was entitled "Childbirth; Amazing New Discovery."

Dr. Hadyn Brown said his article was intended to draw attention to the defects in medical society organisation, which had failed and still failed to recognize important scientific discoveries sooner than it did.

He claimed that articles in medical journals had resulted in nothing advantageous to the profession, or to the public. He deliberately chose to write in this particular magazine because it reached a large number of people, and he believed that the action might lead to recognition of his own treatment for childbirth.

"How did you think recognition of your scientific discoveries would be achieved in this way?" asked the president.

"I considered," Dr. Brown replied, "there was a great likelihood that it would lead to an inquiry on the part of the General Medical Council. I desired an opportunity of calling attention to what I consider a flagrant and unfortunate want in the medical profession."

The president: You deliberately anticipated that this article would bring you within the scope and notice of the council?—I did, sir.

"Many other doctors have written signed articles in papers," said Dr. Hadyn Brown to a representative of the "Daily Express". "Some have written in the particular paper to which I contributed. Then why should I be picked out?

"I have not decided yet what action I shall take, though I believe I have the right of appealing to the High Court. It is probable, however, that the council may show a little leniency, having only meant to establish a precedent. In any case, I do not know yet exactly what the effect will be on me professionally."

Dr. Hadyn Brown holds the degrees of L.R.C.P., L.R.C.S., Edinburgh, and L.R.F.P.S., Glasgow. According to a medical directory he is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine and a member of the Psychical Research Society. Dr. Brown was awarded a medal and four clasps for service in the South African war.

He has written a number of books, including "The Secret of Good Health and Long Life," "The Secret of Human Power," and "New Era Psychology."

WOMAN LEADER IN TRAWLER FIGHT

Fishing Feud Culminates in Rifle Attack by Crabbers

Ella Trout, who was awarded the O.B.E. for her gallantry in rescuing the sole survivor of a steamer torpedoed off Start Point during the war, was one of the leading figures in a fight at sea between a Brixham motor fishing boat and a motor crabbing boat from Hallsands.

The incident, which was the outcome of a feud between Start Bay crabbers and Brixham trawler men, occurred when the firing of shots at close quarters apprised the Brixham crew of the other vessel's hostile intentions.

Some of the trawlermen lay down on the deck to avoid the shots, but a bullet extinguished one of the lights.

Both boats were soon travelling as fast as they could, and the crabbers, so the Brixham men allege, tried to cut through the trawl warp, but were foiled.

When the vessels were ranged alongside one another, Ella Trout daringly led the Hallsand men aboard the trawler, and, brandishing a knife, said she would cut through the warp. She was, however, dissuaded from so doing.

Blows were struck aboard the trawler, but a free fight was avoided.

The Brixham skipper denies that he was trawling on The Skerries at the time of the raid.

WOMAN IS MADE ANATOMY PROFESSOR

Has Skull of German Savant on Her Desk

Mrs. Mary Lucas Keene, M.D., D.Sc., is the first woman in the world to become a professor of anatomy. In appearance she is as unlike a professor as any woman could be. She is fair-haired, and looks attractive in her white working overall, which hides a smart frock.

A glimpse of her office at the London (Royal Free Hospital) School of Medicine for Women, however, reveals a skull grinning on the desk, while a complete skeleton stands in a glass case in a corner.

"That was Cullimore, a professor of literature in Germany, who left his brain and body to the school," she said. "I have put him there because we want to take care of him. I am used to him now."

Professor Keene, who was born at Gravesend thirty-eight years ago, studied medicine in opposition to her father's wishes. Her career has been meteoric, and she became lecturer in embryology in 1917. It is her favorite study, and she does research work in this branch of science in her spare time.

Mrs. Sarah Fletcher has died at Tewkesbury at the age of 102.

Man Lives Two Years With His Spine Fractured

A remarkable operation was disclosed at the inquest at Bath on Thomas Frederick Friend, who died as the result of his spine being fractured two years ago.

It was stated that Dr. Thomas Fraser—who had since died from blood-poisoning arising from a scratch while performing another operation—removed all the pieces of broken bone from Friend's back, but unfortunately the spinal cord did not respond to treatment.

The man, though his life was saved, remained paralysed from the waist downwards.

FIVE YEARS ON DOLE OF $4.50

Young Laborer Had Done No Work All That Time

Vincent O'Toole, a young single man who was before the magistrate at Stokes-on-Trent on a charge of assault, admitted that he had received the dole of $4.50 practically ever since it was instituted, five years ago.

He said he was a stonemason's laborer, but had done no work all that time.

The magistrate said the case was certainly one for inquiry. The idea that a stonemason's laborer was unable to obtain employment for five years was absurd, and the man should not have been paid the dole for such a long time.

O'Toole was fined £3 with £1 16s. costs for assaulting a tramcar driver.

The magistrate said O'Toole was evidently looking for leniency because he was out of employment. If the fine were not paid he would go to prison for a month.

FLITCH WINNER NEVER HAD HITCH

Old Bethnal Green Couple Still Happy in Double Harness

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Thorn, a Darby and Joan of real life, well known in Bethnal Green, won the Dunmow flitch 42 years ago, and have been conducting their married life in the same harmonious spirit ever since.

"I am the only native of Dunmow who ever won the flitch," said Mr. Thorn proudly.

"We have brought it back home to Bethnal Green, where I have lived for the last 65 years. It weighed three-quarters of a hundredweight. I took it round to the nearest public-house, where they sliced it up for the neighbors, and all I had for myself was six pounds or so.

"The vicar had a good portion, I remember, but he deserved it, for he had given Mrs. Thorn and myself a fine testimonial about our married life."

Mr. Thorn, who will be 80 in December, was married to Mrs. Thorn, who is a year younger, in 1866.

Bride Objects to Shape of Ring and Weds Without it

A bride's objection to the shape of the ring delayed a wedding in a North London register office.

When the bridegroom, before the ceremony, showed her the ring, which was of platinum and had four corner-like projections, she said: "I don't like that; it does not look like a wedding ring; it's almost square."

After a discussion the man went out to obtain another, but returned in half an hour, saying that he could not buy a platinum ring of the usual shape in the vicinity.

The registrar said that the use of a ring was a mere formality, and they agreed to be married without one. The bridegroom afterwards placed a ring from his finger on the bride's finger, and they went out smiling to buy one to her liking.

FULL OF LEARNING, WOMAN STARVING

Clever Dublin Woman Arrested for Begging in London

A poorly dressed Irish woman named Mary Josephine Brennan, charged on remand at Westminster with begging, was stated by P.C. Sharpe to have had only a penny in her possession when arrested. She had, however, her velum certificate of B.A., University of Ireland, and high references as to educational attainments, including those of examiner under Dublin official authority as examiner for years in French and Italian.

Miss Lever, the missioner, said inquiries had not elicited much as to the cause of Brennan's change of circumstances, except that she came to this country about two years ago and spent her savings.

Mr. Francis told Brennan that he was extremely sorry to see a person of her education come down as she had, but he had not the smallest doubt that she was begging. He discharged her, but warned her not to come before a court again similarly charged.

FIRE TURNS ON WATER

SEVENTY-YEAR OLD HERO SAVES LIVES

Scottish Fisherman Plunged Into Stormy Sea to Wreck

FIVE DROWNED

Survivors Pulled Ashore by Rope by Gallant Old Man

A 70-year-old fisherman, by plunging into a stormy sea, has saved the lives of three men from a wreck on the Scottish coast.

During a heavy rainstorm, accompanied by fog, the Portgordon (Banffshire) drifter Pressmore, was driven on to a reef opposite the fishing village of Portlethen.

In a quarter of an hour the vessel was pounded to pieces by the terrific seas, and Skipper Coull, realizing the danger of the position, ordered his crew to make for the shore.

Their only hope of reaching safety was to scramble over the sea-swept rocks.

Five were caught by giant waves and perished, but Skipper Coull, with James, his son, and William Innes, the mate, managed to reach a high rock, from which they dared not move.

Seeing them clinging there, George Craig, aged 70—who had hastened from his bed on hearing distress signals from the Pressmore's syren—declared that he knew of stepping stones to an intervening reef which impeded rescue work.

Refusing to be dissuaded by his son and others from undertaking the perilous passage through the boiling surf, he agized a rope and, scrambling from boulder to boulder, immersed in the surf at times up to his neck, succeeded at last in reaching the reef.

On the further rock the skipper's son, barefooted and scantily clad, was in an advanced state of exhaustion. The rope thrown by Craig was tied round this seaman's waist by his shipmates.

Old Craig pulled him through the surf on to the rock upon which he stood and repeated the process in respect of the other two men.

The rope was then thrown ashore, and in turn the three shipwrecked men and their gallant rescuer were hauled on to the beach, all being submerged in the broken water in the process.

Those who lost their lives are:

James Hendry.
Joseph Hendry (his nephew).
John Reid, aged 16 (his grandson).
Alex. Innes (brother of the rescued mate).
Alex. Geddes.

As a result three women are widowed and eight children left fatherless.

Fifteen Years in Jail Sentence for Throwing Vitriol

Sentence of 15 years' penal servitude was passed at the Manchester Assizes on Henry Richard Horrocks, 56, a Manchester commission agent, who pleaded guilty to throwing corrosive fluid at Alfred Edward Chatham, a Manchester solicitor, and Henry Elliott, deputy registrar of the Salford Hundred Court of Records, on October 31.

Horrocks, who appeared in court with his head bandaged through burns he received in throwing the fluid, said he had engaged Mr. Chatham professionally in a claim he was making for £28. He complained after a time at delays in the case, and the money he had to pay out for its prosecution. He at last declared that he would not pay any more, and on October 31, when the case was heard and went against him, he threw the fluid. He had not intention of killing Mr. Chatham.

Mr. Justice MacKinnon, in passing sentence, said it was a horrible crime, the very nature of which must excite detestation in everybody. The paltry grievance about money was not sufficient cause to inflict these horrible injuries on these unfortunate men.

Refused Operation And Died During Christian Science Help

It was stated, at the inquest on Mrs. Stella McLallan, aged 46, of Park road, North Finchley, that after two operations for internal trouble, two years ago, she declined a third operation that was advised, and asked her husband to buy her a Christian Science book.

She went later to a boarding house in Notting-hill, where she died.

Emily Herrick, of Westbourne street, W., said she had attended Mrs. McLallan six days a week since July at the nursing home, and had administered Christian Science treatment.

Dr. Weir, of North Finchley, said death was due to cancer and dropsy, and the former witness, asked by the coroner if Christian Science was suitable for cancer, said she was not learned in that subject.

Recording a verdict of death from natural causes, the coroner said adults were able to exercise their own discretion as to treatment.

Welsh Debarred From Singing at the Cenotaph in London

Surprising action was taken by Scotland Yard in cancelling a musical service by a Welsh choir at the Cenotaph.

The reason given was that the crowds which would be attracted would cause an obstruction.

Hundreds of people, mostly Welsh, who had gathered to hear the choir, were deeply disappointed. The organizers accepted the police decision without protest.

The Treorchy (Rhondda Valley) District Male Voice Choir, the organization concerned, with 110 members, mostly miners, came to London with their relatives and friends to attend an Eisteddfod in the Central Hall, Westminster.

A crowd numbering several hundreds assembled in Whitehall about 1 o'clock, included among them being many persons who had lost relatives in the war.

A policeman inquired why so many persons had assembled, and, after an explanation had been given, suggested that the choir officials should consult Scotland Yard.

SAFE IN HARBOR NOW

G. H. G. Smythe, Toronto canoeist, and the frail craft in which he crossed the English Channel. He has resumed his journey to Rome, via the Omer Canal from Calais to Paris. The picture shows him bidding goodbye to a friend at Westminster Bridge on his departure from London. The first part of his journey was from Sydney, N.S., to New York.

Book is Returned To Scottish Library After 102 Years

At a meeting of the newly appointed Aberdeen University Library Committee—Professor Marshall presiding—the interesting intimation was made of the return to the library of a book (the first edition of Dr. Beattie's "Dissertation") which had been borrowed 102 years ago, on September 21, 1822.

BIG PROFITS IN COFFEE STALL

It was stated at Marylebone County Court of a man who kept a coffee stall outside Westminster Hospital that he made £20 a week out of it. He employed two men and had also a motor garage.

Stratton said that although his name was on the coffee stall, it did not belong to him. He was paid £1 a week salary and 1s. in the £ on the takings.

SNOWDEN GOT THE TAXES PAID UP

It is stated in well-informed quarters that the tightening up of the methods for collecting income tax inaugurated by Philip Snowden while Chancellor of the Exchequer has proved extremely successful.

A very large sum not accounted for has apparently been accumulated at the Treasury and may prove of considerable assistance to the new Chancellor, Mr. Winston Churchill.—Daily Mail.

POLICE BESIEGE WELSH FARMHOUSE

Police besieged a farm in a Welsh village called Gwalchmai, on the main Holyhead road.

The tenant, who it is stated was armed, was given until 5 p.m. to surrender, failing which, he was warned, the house would be attacked. The man ultimately surrendered.

The incident followed the shooting of a constable, and Anglesey police were drafted to the place.

CONVICTS LISTEN IN TO CONCERT

Six hundred convicts at Parkhurst Prison, Isle of Wight, were provided by the British Broadcasting Company with a special wireless concert by the aid of a loud speaker.

The program included such favorites as "Comin' through the Rye," "Come to the Fair," and "Friend of Mine," together with a number of humorous songs and patter.

A lecture by a local chemist on the "History and Uses of Salt" greatly interested the prisoners.

COTTON MILLS IN STOCKPORT ABLAZE

Friction in the rope race is believed to be the cause of a serious fire which broke out at the Kingston Cotton Mill, Stockport. Over 400 operatives, mostly women, were in the mill at the time.

Several fainted and had to be carried down the fire-escapes, but no one was injured.

A second fire, caused by spontaneous combustion, broke out at Lower Wellington Mill. Nearly 50,000 pounds of cotton mixings were damaged.

FAMILY PORTRAITS IN THE FIREPLACE

Few fathers of large families have gone to the length of a Lancashire man who, years ago, proud in the parentage of 19 children, had their likenesses sculptured in bas-relief upon the overmantel of his fireplace.

This quaint story, together with many little-known and interesting facts about the development of the English fireplace through the centuries, was told at the Geffrye Museum, Shoreditch, in a lecture by L. A. Shuffrey.

One of the finest kitchens—that of Cardinal Wolsey at Hampton Court—was shown on the screen. It was large enough to spit and roast a full-sized animal.

DRAIN FLOODED PIT AFTER 32 YEARS

Flooded since the great coal strike of 1892, the Castle Eden pit in the southeast corner of the Durham coalfield has been emptied of water, and is now being equipped for mining operations.

This is due to the enterprise of the Hordon Collieries, Ltd., who bought the flooded pit several years ago. By conducting delicate boring operations from their Blackhall colliery they were able to tap the water in the Castle Eden mine, pump it to the surface at Blackhall, and discharge it into the sea.

As a result of this development it is hoped that employment will be provided for a considerable number of men.

Note Forger, Who Learned His Art In Jail, is Jailed

It was stated at the Kent Assizes that Ernest Everett, 54, engraver, who pleaded guilty to having in his possession 450 forged £1 Treasury notes and uttering some of them at Gravesend, was convicted of a similar offence in 1918 and sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. While in prison he studied works on engravings and chemicals.

The judge expressed surprise at the statement, and asked that the attention of the Prison Commissioners be called to it. He passed sentence of seven years" penal servitude.

WOMAN DIES ON 100TH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Ellen Goodchild, of Corfe Castle, died on her hundredth birthday.

She collapsed just after she had seen Mrs. Samson, of Wareham, who brought the greetings of the Weymouth Lodge of Freemasons.

Until last year she enjoyed the best of health.

TURBOT CARGO IS JOY TO RAMSGATE

Great excitement was caused at the Ramsgate fish market when the steam trawler Paramount landed 30 trunks of turbat, valued at £750.

Such a catch of turbot has never been known at the port.

Skipper F. Setterfield said they were caught off the French coast in the neighborhood of Sangatte.

RADIO LICENCES NEARLY 1,000,000

Though the full returns are not yet available, it is stated that in round numbers 997,000 wireless licenses have been taken out up to the present time in England.

New licenses issued during the month of October were, to some extent, counter-balanced by the failure to renew old licenses by a number of people.

LADY ROSS LOSES ALIMONY DEMAND

Counsel for Lady Ross in her defended petition for divorce against Sir Charles Ross, Bart., of Balnagown, moved in the Court of Session at Edinburgh for the increase to £100 a month of the alimony of £50 a month which Sir Charles Ross is voluntarily paying her.

Lord Morison said that Lady Ross seemed to have between £1,600 and £2,000 a year, and he refused the motion.

VILLAGE SCHOOL HAS NO CHILDREN

The school at Patney (Wilts), a village of 100 people on the edge of Salisbury Plain, is to be closed because of a shortage of children.

Only five scholars, four girls and a boy, are now attending, and there are no more likely applicants for the empty places for several years.

A youthful certificated mistress from Trowbridge conducted the work of the class.

WIDOW REPEATS GIFT TO COLLEGE

A gift of £40,000 by the late Sir Joseph Constantine, shipowner, for the erection of a technical college at Middlesbrough, has been repeated by his widow and family.

Financial difficulties have thus been overcome, and the work of building a college designed to make Middlesbrough a centre of naval architecture will begin at once.

ODD COINCIDENCE OF TWO CLOCKS

Two clocks conspired to mark by coincidence the end of a lifelong friendship at the pretty Devon village of Ashton.

The friends were two women. One of them was taken ill and died in hospital at 3.45 in the afternoon.

Exactly at that time the clock in the kitchen of her home and also the clock in her friend's home stopped, although both appeared to be properly wound and in good order.

BOYS TIED COWS' TAILS TOGETHER

Two boys of Rhosymedre, North Wales, tied together the tails of two milking cows, and turned the animals into a meadow.

The cows struggled in the night to get free, and finally one of the tails broke off. It was produced in the Ruabon Police Court yesterday, when the boys were charged with cruelty.

"We did it for sheer deviltment," one of them stated, adding that they did not realize the cruelty and consequences of their action.

They were cautioned and bound over.

LADY MARJORIE AND HUSBAND IN COURT

Daughter of Lord Dundonald Tells of Stormy Period

DINNER QUARREL

Black Eye Result of One Encounter With Irate Spouse

Lady Marjorie Gwendolin Elsie Rowley, daughter of the Earl of Dundonald, went into the witness box in the Divorce Court and related some stormy episodes in her married life.

Her husband, Mr. O. V. F. Rowley, of Morcott Hall, Uppingham, Rutland, seeks a divorce, and has charged her with misconduct with Major E. G. H. Clarke. Lady Marjorie has cross-petitioned for a judicial separation, alleging cruelty by her husband. All the charges are denied.

Lady Marjorie said that after her marriage her income was £600 a year, £200 of this amount being an allowance from her people. Her husband had an "awful" temper, and thought that women ought always to stay at home and never go anywhere.

Trouble arose because she was in the habit of betting. "I have always denied betting all my life," she explained.

Sir Edward Marshall-Hall: On the whole, have you lost or won?—Oh, I have won much more than I have lost.

On one occasion, Lady Marjorie added, she paid some of her debts after having backed a Derby winner.

"CURSED ME."

Sir Edward: Did your husband say anything about your extravagance?—Yes, he cursed my family and called me a "blasted expense."

In February, 1920, there was a ball at Morcott, during which her husband complained to her about the expense of feeding the guests, and gave her a black eye. She complained to his father.

Was the black eye visible to the people there?—Yes.

How did you account for it?—I told them I got it while out hunting. I often fell off while hunting.

What was the general attitude of your husband when you were ill?—He never believed I was ill.

What was it when he was ill?—Oh, he thought he was dying.

Lady Marjorie then gave her version of the crockery-throwing episode described on the previous day by her husband. While they were at Cox's Hotel, London, the manager of her hotel at Broadstairs sent a rude telegram about the unpaid bill she had left there.

AT BREAKFAST.

There was a terrible row over it, and her husband said: "I'm d——d if I pay it." She was having her breakfast and he attacked her. She thereupon attacked him, and threw the milk jug and other things at him. "I was very sorry it missed him," she added.

Whenever she went away for a time her husband always said she had a lover. "He had them on the brain."

When at Morcott in November, 1922, she told her husband about the second baby, and he said it was inconvenient to have a baby in the middle of the hunting. He nearly knocked her down, and said, "Your d——d old mother ought to pay for the baby."

Lady Marjorie admitted that she threw a scent bottle at her husband and a glass at her husband's brother, Mr. Dick Rowley.

In December, 1921, she asked a lot of people to a ball, and she had ordered dinner. Her husband had also ordered dinner, and said he was not going to have her dinner. There was a quarrel, and in the result they had no dinner except oysters, which her husband had ordered.

DENIED.

Lady Marjorie denied that she had ever committed misconduct with Major Clarke.

Have you ever kissed him?—No. We really never had a chance.

Has he ever hugged you?—No, you see we always met at dances.

Mr. Rawlinson, K.C. (cross-examining for Mr. Rowley) quoted from a letter Lady Marjorie wrote to her husband: "I have never lived with me," and then asked: "Was Major Clarke one of the men who asked you to live with him?"

"If you have a husband like mine, you must make him jealous somehow," replied Lady Marjorie.

Was Major Clarke one of the men who asked you?—As a matter of fact he never did.

And the other men did?—No.

Further cross-examined Lady Marjorie admitted she had been to cinemas with Major Clarke, but denied they went together in taxicabs.

At this stage Lady Marjorie complained of not feeling well, and after being given some brandy, she was allowed to leave the box.

WOMAN HANGING BY FOOT IN ELEVATOR

Workmen and Doctor Cut Way to Rescue—Not Hurt

The wife of an attendant at a block of Flats at Hove underwent a terrible ordeal.

For half an hour she was suspended by one foot, head downwards, in a lift on the premises.

The woman was Mrs. Mary Chapman, 63 years of age. She was on the point of leaving the lift when it began to descend. Mrs. Chapman fell backwards into the lift and one of her feet was caught between the floor entrance and the top of the lift.

Fortunately, some skilled constructors were working in an adjoining house, and their help was obtained and a doctor summoned.

The workmen cut a hole in the top of the lift, large enough for the doctor to enter. He got into the lift and held the woman while the workmen released her foot.

It was found that Mrs. Chapman was not badly injured. Curiously enough, she retained consciousness throughout her severe experience, but when released was suffering badly from shock and blood pressure, as well as bruises.

Public Schools in England Do Not Try To Educate, Says Writer

Gilbert Frankau told an audience at the College of Preceptors that, when he was at Eton, out of 1,000 boys 960 were incapable of writing correctly three consecutive sentences.

"No teacher had a chance with the modern child," he continued. "Look at the little beast in his home." (Laughter.) The great glory of our public and private schools was that they did not attempt to educate.

The good boy was a horror—they could not get away from it.

TANGLE OF MUTUAL WILLS IN COURT

Unusual Lawsuit for $108,000 Fails—Judge's Comment

Mr. Justice Astbury dismissed an unusual will suit in the Chancery Division.

The late Mrs. Helen Maria Oldham and her first husband, Frederick Weldon, of Queen's Gate-gardens, S.W., each made mutual wills leaving their joint property to the survivor. Mrs. Oldham survived, and on her second marriage she made a new will disposing of her fortune of £108,000 in a different way.

Mrs. Anna M. Hadwen, of Halifax, now asked the court to say that Mrs. Weldon's property to her second husband and to her own relatives, he would have made his will in a different manner.

JURY'S RIDER AND "UNWRITTEN LAW"

Think Accused Was Victim of Dead Man in Warwick Case

A Warwick Assizes jury got as near the doctrine of "the Unwritten Law" as an English jury can get when, finding Howard Ball guilty of the murder of James Rice, at Stoke, near Coventry, they added that:—

In view of the extreme and prolonged suffering of the prisoner at the hands of the deceased, they would in the strongest terms recommend him to mercy.

The Commissioner passed sentence of death, and said he would convey the recommendation to the proper quarter.

The condemned man said: "I did not have any intention of killing the man.

Rice was a widower, and Ball, with his wife and nine children, lodged with him. There were quarrels because of Rice's friendship with Ball's wife.

Giving evidence, Ball said he had gone in fear of his life for a long time, but could not seek the protection of the police, because he would have been turned into the streets with his nine children.

When he found his wife with Rice in a field he told her to go away. Thereupon Rice rushed up to him like a madman and appeared to be taking a weapon out of his pocket. In fear of his life he fired two shots wide of Rice to stop his onrush. He never intended to kill him.

Tidal Stream Under Bank of England is Cause of Much Trouble

Architects and engineers of new buildings under construction near the Bank of England are being caused much trouble by the hidden River Walbrook, which, though covered over and forgotten in the 16th century, still flows. It pours into excavations and has to be pumped out. The deep basements of new buildings near it have to be watertight tanks. Mr. F. W. Troupe, who, with Mr. Herbert Barker, is architect of the new Bank buildings, told a reporter: "The course of the Walbrook is right under the Bank of England, and may give trouble when the new building is erected.

"Until the excavations are carried out we shall not know whether it is dammed or not. The Walbrook was a tidal river—being apparently 30 to 40 feet wide at high tide—and it is still tidal.

"The water percolates up the bed gradually, and high tide of the Walbrook at Cheapside is probably about two hours later than in the Thames. There may possibly even be a high tide and low tide of the river under the Bank of England itself.

"The river is about 30 feet beneath the level of the ground at the Bank. When the new bank is constructed it may be advisable to run the stream through pipes."

KING SWOPS STAMPS WITH OLD SOLDIER

Ex-Staff-Sergeant F. W. J. Winter, of the R.A.S.C., who was badly wounded in France, and now uses a wheeled chair, described how he met the King as a fellow stamp collector and exchanged rarities with him.

The King, after shooting in Windsor Great Park, had a chat with Mr. Winter, who had propelled himself to the park from his home at Englefield Green.

"I knew the King was a stamp collector," said Mr. Winter to me, "and I asked him whether he would like a half-penny stamp with the watermark placed sideways.

The King said he would be pleased to accept it, adding that he would send me some stamps in exchange. He then shook hands with me and was driven away in his car."

Mr. Winter received from the King's equerry a letter enclosing eight stamps. They include 10s., 5s. and 2s. stamps of the Edward VII. issue.

House of Clergy Discuss the Proposed Changes in Service

Important changes, likely to lead to acute controversy, were made in the Church of England Baptism Service by the House of Clergy, sitting at Church House, Westminster. These include:

(1) Use of the chrysom (a white cloth with which the head of a newly-baptised child is to be covered);

(2) Handing of a lighted candle to the godfather.

These changes—for use in the Revised Prayer Book (Permissive Use)—were carried, the first by 98 to 77, and the second by 91 to 81.

A proposal for the use of the holy chrism (a mixture of olive oil and balm, for anointing the infant's head) was rejected by 115 to 53.

(The Chrysom was used up to the 16th century in the Church of England, then part of the Church of Rome, to prevent the holy oil from being rubbed off. The object of this decision (a that the holy oil is rejected but the white cloth is re-introduced.)

The three proposals were brought forward by the Rev. C. B. Lucas, of Peterborough Diocese, on the ground that they would add to the dignity of the service.

The ceremonies were purely symbolical, and had a clear warrant in ecclesiastical history and usage. The vesture he explained as a token of the innocency given to the child.

BAPTISM BY DOZENS.

The Dean of Bristol pointed out that they might have a dozen or even a score of infants to baptise at one time.

Look at the amount of preparation that would be required in the way of garments and lighted candles and the coaching of sponsors, all of whom were nervous to start with, and would be worse when it came to holding a lighted taper. And might not the Ecclesiastical insurance office have something to say? (Loud laughter.) The ceremony of baptism was already too complicated.

The Rev. E. Lomax thought it would only tend to confuse the minds of simple people.

Canon Wilson said the use of the white vesture would probably necessitate taking from the child all its garments. (Laughter and cries of "No, no.")

Canon T. A. Lacey said to him the indiscriminate baptism of all children brought to the Church was horrible and was nothing but the broadcasting of a sacrament.

Bishop Ingham said they were legislating for the Church the world over and there were places where the candle would blow up, where the robe would blow away and where the ointment would freeze or melt away. (Laughter.)

After the vote (as given above) the matter was referred to the Drafting Committee.

By a very large majority the House refused to alter the phrase in the Baptism Service about renouncing "the world, the flesh and the devil."

It had been proposed to substitute: "The devil, the world and the flesh, whereby is meant all selfishness and cruelty, falsehood and pride, and those other vices which degrade our human nature."

One member said many godparents took their obligations to involve little more than the presentation of a perfectly useless mug, and later on taking the child to the Zoo.

It was agreed to substitute "resurrection of the body" for "resurrection of the flesh."

Canon Guy Rogers said this was a concession to modern thought; and those who believed in the old form could still use the old Prayer Book.

WHEN THE PRINCE DROVE CHAUFFEUR

Good Story of H.R.H. Told at Banquet in London Recently

Sir John Ashley Mullens told a good story of the Prince of Wales when presiding at the 111th annual festival dinner of the London Orphan School, at the Hotel Victoria.

The Prince, he said, arrived home after a busy day in the early hours of the morning, and told his chauffeur he would require his car at 7 o'clock as he wanted to go hunting.

Detecting a glum look on the chauffeur's face, the Prince inquired the reason of it. The chauffeur replied that he would not have time to clean the car.

Thereupon the Prince replied, with a smile, "Well, bring the car round at 7.30; don't trouble to clean it. I'll drive, and you can hop inside and have a sleep." (Laughter and cheers.)

Lays 809 Bricks in One Hour and Wins Fifty Dollar Wager

In the presence of the officials of the Sheffield Builders' Exchange and the Rotherham Master Builders' Association, Chris. Hull, foreman of the housing scheme at Treeton, near Sheffield, created what is believed to be a world's record, and at the same time won a wager of £10 to 10d. by laying 809 bricks in one hour.

The wager was laid with Mr. Hull by Charles Boot, of Messrs Henry Boot and Sons, building contractors, of Sheffield, who bet was that he could not lay 700 bricks in the hour.

This feat compares strikingly with the average bricklayer's output—between 400 and 700 per day.

Standard bricks were used, the task chosen being the erection of a 9 inch outside house wall.

OFFICER'S TRAGIC DEATH.

Lieut. Evan J. S. Lloyd, Royal Artillery, was cleaning his revolver in his quarters at Larkhill, Wilts, when the weapon exploded and shot him through the heart. At the inquest yesterday a verdict of [illegible] was returned.

HAMILTON TOO PUTS PETES IN SENIOR SERIES

Opinion Around Toronto Unanimous That Peterboro Should Move Up.

A SENIOR CLUB

Decision of Team to Remain in Intermediate Regretted By Press.

Peterboro's place is in senior company, says the Toronto Telegram. They have written a letter to the Executive asking that they be given a bye in the intermediate. The Peterboro management, though not denying that they have not a senior club, claim that the matter of finance will keep them in the lower series. The Peterboro supporters are undivided on the question, and it looks as if the O.H.A. will have to decide the matter immediately. The matter of expenses in the senior rank could be shared in a pool by the O.H.A. and other clubs.

"Shorty" Burgess.

"Shorty" Burgess has become very popular with the fans at the Arena, during Peterboro games. Burgess every time he gets on the ice seems to electrify the team. Though he did not score any goal, Burgess made several nice rushes and displayed a "Babe Dye" shot that gave McAllister many interesting moments.

Coel Joe Dwyer.

Joe Dwyer is playing one sweet game of hockey in the nets for Peterboro during the S.P.A. series. He stopped many would-be goals, and robbed Mose Lount of two sweet chances. The old veteran must have his usual fall per game, and with play at the other end of the rink he lost his balance and went feet flying into the air. If Joe can't pull his "feet-first" fall during a game, something is wrong with the team.

Missed Watson.

Parkdale looked just ordinary without Harry Watson. The Olympic star was home with a cold, but many of his friends were sure that he had sighed a pro ticket or spent the day home figuring out the terms.

Bailey and Ranger worked for many good combination plays. This pair puts Peterboro's line on par with the best senior company. Mose Lount and Don Jeffrey played hard for Parkdale, and had terrible luck on many of their shots.

A Hamilton View.

The following is from the Hamilton Spectator:—

Though Peterboro defeated Parkdale Tuesday night the club has decided not to accept the O.H.A. recommendation to play in the senior series this season, but will instead drop back to the intermediate ranks and accept a bye, a group for the Petes to play in not being available without imposing some hardship on the other clubs, due to Peterboro's isolated location. The O.H.A. was notified yesterday of Peterboro's decision, which means that the intermediae runners-up of last season will not play any scheduled games until the second round commences the first week in February. The Petes will endeavour to arrange exhibition games to keep the players in condition.

The decision made by the Peterboro club is to be regretted, for the Petes have shown in games played in the S.P.A. series that they are a team strong enough for the senior series, and with a mighty good chance of winning their group or at least getting into a playoff for the right to enter the senior finals. And if they did win the group would be favored to go right on to the championship. The fans who witnessed the Petes great victory in Tuesday night's games will be greatly disappointed if Peterboro does not play senior.

Peterboro's decision means that Niagara Falls will be the added starter in the local group. This will be even better from the standpoint of the Rowing club, for it means that travelling expenses will be cut down and better gates will result here, as the Cataract city crew carries with it a large crowd of supporters to every game, and the locals will get the benefit of these.

SHOCKER DEAL WITHOUT CASH

Trade for Joe Bush and Two Rookie Pitchers Important.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—The deal by which Urban Shocker, veteran St. Louis spitball pitcher, was traded yesterday to the New York Yankees in exchange for "Bullet Joe" Bush and two rookie twirlers, not only ranks among the outstanding player transactions of the winter season but involves the tranfer of two of the American League's most prominent boxmen. Along with Bush, the Yankees sent Milton Gaston, former semi-pro star and Joseph Giard, obtained from Toledo, to the Browns. No cash was involved, according to announcement by the Yankee management.

FALKIRKS FINED.

Soccer Club Penalized for Riot at Game With Dundee.

GLASGOW, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press Cable.)—Twenty pounds — about $100—was the fine levied by the Scottish Football Association against the Falkirk Club of the first division, Scottish League, yesterday, as punishment for the riot which broke out among the Falkirk spectators on Saturday in the game with Dundee. The Falkirk executive were also ordered to press for police prosecution against the individual in the crowd who was responsible for the injury to the referee.

The game between Falkirk and Dundee last Saturday, which resulted in a 2-1 win for Dundee, was played on Falkirk grounds and was featured by several deplorable incidents. The one for which the club has been fined arose out of a play by Rose, the Dundee right half, who shot and the ball struck the referee. This official accidentally diverted the ball into the net, thus giving Dundee a counter. Disorderly scenes followed and Campbell, the Falkirk left-winger, was ordered off the field. The crowd became threatening and pelted the referee with missiles, one of which was a bottle, which the Dundee goal-keeper secured as a souvenir. Order was eventually restored and special police were stationed around the Dundee goal for the remainder of the game.

SIX CLUBS AFTER SHOCKER

Every club in the American League, except Detroit, made a bid for Shocker at the recent meeting. Cobb and Shocker do not speak as they pass, so the manager of the Tigers wasn't at all interested in the star pitcher of the Browns.

LINDSAY JUNIORS WAITING FOR ICE

Flock of Youngsters Enthusiastic for Tryout With Team.

A young army of prospective players for the Junior O.H.A. team gathered at the Council Chamber last night at the call of rally. They were quite enthused and prospects are bright for a fast team. The material is abundant and enthusiasm overflowing. It will be a case of merit to catch a place on the team and the boys will all be given a fair chance.

Messrs. F. A. Martin, H. Baker, Freemand Goodband and Ford Moynes were on hand and gave the boys a talk. Mr. Martin stressed on the point that the boys must turn out to practice and that although it would take some deciding when it came to selecting players, no player should get peeved if he did not happen to make the team for the first game. With co-operation from the players Lindsay should be able to turn out a good team.

Mr. Baker urged the boys to watch for the first announcement of a practice on the ice and also stated that all the boys would be given a fair chance to make the team.

Mr. Martin expects to have ice Monday night next and hockey practices will start immediately.

On motion of Mr. W. Clapper which was seconded by Mr. W. Scriver, Mr. Irvin Doonan was appointed manager of the hockey team and on motion of Mr. Loydd Scriver that W. Clapper be appointed assistant manager.

FOG OBSCURED RUGBY FINISH

New Zealand "All Blacks" Defeat Hampshire County Picked Team.

SCORE WAS 22-0.

PORTSMOUTH, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The New Zealand "All Blacks yesterday defeated a representative county team from Hampshire under the rugby union rules by a score of 22 points to nil.

Fifteen thousand spectators were present. For the grater part of the game the weather was clear and sunny, but in the second half a heavy fog descended making it difficult to distinguish the players. Play was keen and vigorous throughout, the Hampshire forwards, although they lacked the services of Orr-Ewing, who was injured in the first half, put up a first-rate battle.

For the first ten minutes of play, the "All Blacks" were penned into their own territory, but Donald opened the scoring with a breakaway late on in the initial period. Nepia, the "All Black" full-back, failed to convert, five minutes later Cooke dashed over and White brought out the additional points. The interval saw the score 8-0 in favor of the Antipodeans.

The second half was more open. Hampshire resumed with tremendous dash, but they were met with the keenest of tackling. The "All Blacks" did not wield an inch to the Englishmen, their marking being of the deadliest. From a scrum MacGreggor obtained possession of the leather and drooped across for the New Zealanders' third try. White failed with the goal-kick. With the game well in hand, the Antipodeans continued to press and hit up a tremendous pace. Nepia landed a penalty goal, bringing the score up to 14 to 0.

Halfway through the second half, the fog descended and made play next to impossible. A consultation was held and it was decided to continue the Game. It was impossible for the crow d to see the players.

The game ended: New Zealanders 2 goals, 1 penalty goal, 3 tries. Hampshire, nil.

SCORE WAS 5 TO 2.

Tigers and Senators Battle Eighty Minutes to No Score Game.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—St. Patricks turned in their best game of the season at the Arena last night and although they were defeated by the world's champion Canadiens by 5 goals to 2, the Irish extended habitants to the limit and were far from being disgraced in defeat. Canadiens are a great team and to be on even terms with the speedy title-holders within eight minutes of the finish is a feat that very few local fans expected from the Irish, and had it not been for exceedingly hard luck in the first and second periods the count would have been much closer.

Baldwin to Stimulate Empire Exports of Meat and Fruit.

LONDON, Dec. 18. — (Canadian Press). — It was stated unofficially last night that the idea Mr. Baldwin advanced of spending 1,000,000 pounds a year is to stimulate the Empire exports of meat and fruit to Great Britain by subsidizing the Dominion shippers who bring in consignments of meat, apples and certain other commodities in excess of guaranteed quantities. The entire question, however, has to be threshed out by a committee, to include the Diminion representatives.

HAARMANN ADMITS CRIMES

HANOVER, Germany, Dec. 17—(Associated Press).—Strong coffee cigars and aspirin tablets interrupted for an hour on Monday, the trial of Fritz Haarmann, who is accused of numerous murders. Haarmann insisted that he could not continue his testimony without the aid of stimulants.

At the beginning of the session Haarmann was apathetic, not even answering questions of his lawyer and physician. After the recess of an hour, the prisoner took the stand again. He admitted having murdered two youths, Hechgreve and Apel, but denied that he had killed a young man named Bock.

Police authorities announced that an exhaustive investigation was under way by the department to determine whether the charges of police complicity in the underworld activities of Haarmann were justified. The investigation at present is looking into the records of five police officers, but will probably be extended.

PRESENTATION TO KING.

Premier Gets Gold Watch and Chain From Liberal Association.

OTTAWA, Dec. 18. — (Canadian Press).—A beautiful token of remembrance was presented to Premier King by the Eastern Ontario Liberal Association yesterday afternoon on the occasion of the attainment of his fiftieth birthday. The presentation took the form of a gold watch and platinum chain, appropriately enscribed. The presentation was made at a luncheon of the association in the afternoon, at which the Prime Minister was the principal speaker.

PARIS HAS NEW AND NOVEL AUTO TRAFFIC RULE

PARIS, Dec. 18.—(United Press). —Under the new traffic laws of Paris one of the most important accessories of an automobile is a calendar. If a driver wants to avoid trouble he must keep constantly in mind the day of the month. On days of even numbers vehicles must park on the side of the street where the buildings bear even numbers, and on odd-numbered days the odd side of the street alone is available.

This novel regulation, recently ordered by the Prefecture of Police in the hope of easing the serious traffic congestion, is causing some remarkable street scenes and has become the latest town joke. Anybody who is wrong about anything is accused of not knowing the date. A mistake or a difficulty usually causes the remark, "You're on the wrong side, get a calendar." A reveller walking unsteadily and veering to the wrong side of the path will almost certainly be told the date, or hear a remark, "He thinks this is yesterday."

Drivers have not yet become accustomed to the traffic law, and all sorts of confusion has resulted. It appears that chauffeurs are a class that does not worry much about dates. Arguments are frequent between the chauffeur and the fare about what date it is.

FLAPPING BAD FOR OUR GIRLS SAYS AN EXPERT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18. — (United Press).—Dr. E. L. Fisk, director of the Life Extension Institute, told the American Education Conference that the flapper is shortening her life by her flapping.

Mortality and health statistics prove, he said, that women between the ages of seventeen and thirty-two are now retarding extension of the span of life.

"The average lifetime has been increased in the last 300 years from twenty-one to fifty-eight years," he said, "Most of this gain is due to saving of life under five years of age.

"The present weak spot in the line is among the female of the ... is the age group from seventeen to thirty-two. These young women do not show as good a health record as their brothers. The death rate at this age period is substantially higher among young women.

"Whether or not the dislocation, as it were, of the young female from the old-time environment is not bringing a greater strain than she can bear."

ENGLAND TO BUILD MAMMOTH AIRSHIP

By JOHN GUNTHER

LONDON, Dec. 18.— (United Press).—"The American 'Los Angeles' is a baby airship." The gallant American craft is dwarfed to comparative insignificance by the two mammoth Leviathians of the air which Great Britain is to start building next July—mammoth airships to become the twin flagships, perhaps, of the new British air navy.

One of these gigantic dirigibles —each of a gas capacity exceeding 5,000,000 cubic feet—is known as the R-100, the other as the R-101.

To expedite the work so that the trial voyages may be made as soon as possible, voyages to Egypt or Australia or possibly New York, the construction of the ships has been carefully subdivided, the R-100 being designed by a private firm in Howden ,Yorkshire, the R-101 by the air ministry itself as Cardington.

So far actual construction cannot begin because no sheds big enough to house these great monsters has ever been built.

Both the R-100 and the R-101, to be designed as sister ships, will be as nearly identical as practicable, according to information furnished by the Air Ministry. Each will exceed in displacement and length far and away any other other known air vessel.

The R-101, it has already officially been announced, will be 720 feet in length, 140 feet in height, 130 feet in diameter, and will be driven by seven engines of 600 horse power each, burning crude fuel oil instead of petrol. The displacement—5,000,000 cubic feet—is not considered excessive in view of the magnitude of the other dimensions. It is expected the specification for the R-100 will be closely similar.

If the airships are to be used for commercial purposes, accomodation can be provided each for 100 passengers separate sleeping accommodation being in the form of two-berth cabins on a separate deck from the living and smoking quarters. The cruising radius will be practically unlimited, with a 2,500 mile trip to Egypt a mere weekend jaunt.

The following will be the journey times of the R-101 on her empire flights:

Egypt—2 1-2 days.
India—5 or 6 days.
Australia—10 days.
Cape Town 5 1-4 days.
Canada—3 days.

In case commercial use brings it to New York, it is thought the engines of the R-101 may make the 3,000 mile trip across the Atlantic in slightly in excess of 48 hours.

Naturally, an immense amount of subsidary work is necessary before actual construction on these vessels can begin. First of all there is the matter of sheds—adequate housing for the mammoths as they are being built and permanent hangars for them when completed. Two large sheds are now under construction at Howden, while at Cardington the present huge shed is be erected in India and possibly a third one at some intermediary point.

When it is completed the Cardington shed will be 812 feet long. If the Wrigley tower in Chicago should topple over, this shed would house it in comfort, with plenty of space to spare. It could hold upwards of 100,000 people, so that most of the entire population of say, Fall River, Mass. could easily find entrance. Over 3,500 tons of steel have so far been used in its construction.

There is again the matter of mooring masts.

One of these masts, 180 to 200 feet high, is to be erected shortly at Cardington, one in India, and, as in the case of the sheds, possibly another at some middle point probably Egypt. The masts will be of steel lattice, equipped with elevators and pipe lines for fuel.

Details about the twin giants came wit hthe official announcement of the air ministry in regard to the R-101. Sir Samuel Hoare, the present Air Minister devealed the substance of his plans.

FOURTH MAN IN THE BANK CASE

James G. Sutherland, Manager of Peerless Silver Co., Arrested in Hamilton.

TORONTO, December 18. — A fourth man in connection with the alleged theft of $18,000 from the University-Dundas Branch of the Provincial Savings Offices was arrested in Hamilton yesterday, in the person of James G. Sutherland, the manager of the Peerless Silver Co. He was bailed out around 11 o'clock last night. Bail amounted to $10,000.

Sutherland is the person for whom two officials of the Provincial Savings Offices at preesnt in custody upon charges of theft, allegedly cashed cheques for which there were no funds. The predicament in which this placed the bankers is given by them as the cause of their further defalcations, which were connected with a timber deal in which they hoped to retrieve the money thus lost. Sutherland's share in the affair is said to involve a sum of from $5000 to $6000.

Fred G. Smith, arested on Monday night, was released on bail of $10,000 yesterday, but F. H. Armitage, an official of the Frontenac Lumber Co., is still confined to the Toronto jail. Ferdon Herron is out on bail.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

The eternal triangle, with a new twist, is the theme of the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the middle two days of this week. "The Dark Swan," filmed from Ernest Pascal's novel of the same name, is an interesting picture, having for its main element the character portrayal of two opposing types of women. The cast is excellent. Monte Blue does the rather unlikable man in the case, Lewis Dike, who falls in love first with the brown-hued Cornelia Quinn, a girl tion marks that harassed authors and producers use when they are not just sure of how to end a story or picture.

It is an entertaining production, and illustrates thoroughly the life of a certain type of New Yorker, searching for pleasure. The characterizations are splendid. Although Cornelia's re-actions to various types of emotion are drawn out at times longer than is quite necessary, the whole thing moves with an interesting swing. There is an emphasis on certain mannerisms that shows a trend on the part of the director, Millard Webb, to create character impressions by the use of repetition. For instance, Eve, the light-minded sister, is constantly occupied, even at serious moments, with the disposal of her dark,bobbed locks, and when she isn't fluffing up her hair, she is eating something.

The comedy is one of those ridiculously funny creations that stars Lloyd Hamilton, with his dignified strut, his small hat and his speckled bow tie. The comedian has stolen some of Harold Lloyd's thunder in one of his scenes, where a white duck gets into a subway mixup, but otherwise, all the fun is his own. In "Crushed," he appears as a man surrounded by confounding circumstances, and comes through them in a manner all his own.

AT THE REGENT.

FIRST FLIGHT THROWS SCARE THAT'S REAL.

Douglas MacLean in "Going Up" Does Some Sensational Flying

Those who have flown in an airplane, those who have yet to make their first flight, and those who have vowed they'll never risk their necks in one will find an overflowing measure of mirth in "Going Up," Douglas MacLean's screen adaptation of the New York musical comedy success, which opens at the Regent theatre today.

The funniest moments of "Going Up" come as they should at the finish when Mr. MacLean, posing as the celebrated aviator author, is forced to fly a machine against a famous French ace. Yes, you guessed it, a girl's heart and hand are at stake. There are many other parts of the screen comedy that are almost equally hilarious. Mr. MacLean goes through every laughable stage of anguish before he finally sails into the air and his agonizing expressions furnish enough hilarity to last a week. "Going Up" confirms the opinion formed on his previous efforts that Douglas MacLean is one of the best light comedians in the movies.

The flying scenes that both open and close the story are unusually thrilling and the settings and general atmosphere entirely satisfactory.

AT THE ROYAL.

GIBSON'S BIG SMILE SPARKLES AT ROYAL.

Rides Pony Down Broadway, Then Stables It In Hotel.

There's a chuckle for the glum and laughter in plenty for the light-hearted in "Broadway or Bust," the new Hoot Gibson comedy which opens to-night at the Royal Theatre.

Gibson's droll humor permeates the film like a broad grin, creating the kind of atmosphere one likes to bask in on a rainy, cheerless evening.

The story, written by Edward Sedgwick, who directed the picture, and Raymond L. Schrock, reflects the experiences of a pair of cowboys who crave to see Broadway and whose dreams were fulfilled by one of them "coming into a sudden fortune."

Hoot dominates the film as Dave Holles, the cowboy who sells his ranch for a fortune. There's a neat love story between Holles and a pretty girl, played by Ruth Dwyer.

The kick of the film is the sequence in which the boys ride up to the "Fitz" Hotel on horseback and engage a suite of rooms for themselves and their saddle horses. The hotel's publicity man plays the matter heavily, and the boys are invited out with the Blue Book squadron.

ARTICLE No. 11

If the average player were asked what part of the game of auction appeals to him the most, he would undoubtedly reply: "The play of the hands." It is remarkable that this is true, for the bidding is infinitely more important than the play and yet the majority of auction players take much more interest in the play. You often hear the expression: "If I could only play the cards like so and so" but never, "if I could only bid my hands like so and so." This attitude is probably due to the fact that the play of the hands is a concrete proposition while the bidding is more or less an abstract one. Whatever the reason, auction players everywhere admire the good player more than the good bidder and are continually striving to improve their play. What makes the good player and why does one show so much more ability in this line than his fellow players? The difference between good and bad play is attention, constant attention, continuous attention. Don't ascribe your bad play to lack of memory. You cannot forget what you never knew. The most irritating errors occur through want of attention. The good player, the one you admire, is probably no better than you, but the attention he pays to the game is probably 100 per cent while yours is 25 per cent or less. The first thing to learn if you wish to become a good player is to notice what cards are played. Don't play along until about the middle of the hand and suddenly wake up to the fact that you don't know what has been played. Without that knowledge you are obliged to guess, and guess work always is unsatisfactory. Cultivate your attention. Don't raise a card, and your play of the hands will soon improve a hundred per cent. Remember, the difference between good and bad play is attention—attention—attention, continuous attention.

Auction players should understand thoroughly the value of a redouble when your partner's no-trump bid has been doubled. This redouble is undoubtedly the strongest defense to the informatory double that has yet been invented. Suppose your partner deals and bids one no-trump, second hand doubles and you also hold a no-trump. In what way can you give the information except by the redouble? The redouble should inform your partner that you also have a no-trump and that the doubler is undecided in between two good hands. From now on you should play for penalties.

The following hand was played the other night in a big match game and illustrates perfectly the redouble and its great possibilities.

Hearts — K, 10, 3
Clubs — Q, 7, 3
Diamonds — K, J, 4
Spades — K, Q, J, 7

Hearts — J, 8, 4
Clubs — A, J, 8, 4

Spades — A, 8, 5

A B
Z

Hearts — 9, 6, 5
Clubs — 6, 5, 2
Diamonds — 10, 9, 2
Spades — 10, 9, 6, 2

Hearts — A, Q, 7, 2
Clubs — K, 10, 9
Diamonds — Q, 8, 6, 5
Spades — 4, 3

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump, A doubled and Y, with a no-trump hand, redoubled. This redouble told Z that his partner had a big hand and to play for penalties. B bid two spades, Z and A passed and Y doubled and all passed. The contract was defeated 400 points while, if Y had bid two no-trump, he and his partner would have scored only three odd. Quite a difference, but nothing unusual in cases where the redouble is sound. Be on the lookout for such hands.

The following hand was played at one of the New York card clubs the other night and caused considerable discussion as to the proper biddling of B's hand:

Hearts — 10, 6
Clubs — 7, 4, 2
Diamonds — 9, 2
Spades — K, Q, 10, 9, 8, 7

Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one diamond, A one heart, Y four diamonds, B and Z passed and A bid four hearts. Y and B passed, Z doubled and A and Y passed. Should B bid four spades over the double or pass? An analysis of this hand will be given in the next article.

Problem No. 5

THOUSANDS ATTEND THE FUNERAL OF S. GOMPERS

Fifty Mounted Police Called To Clear Streets—Sermon Broadcasted.

NEW YORK, December 18, Canadian Press. — Impressive funeral services were held to-day for Samuel Gompers at the Elks Club, after which the body was taken by automobile to Tarrytown, for interment, in the historic Sleepy Hollow cemetery.

The great assembly hall, draped in mourning purple of the order, was crowded to capacity with co-workers and friends of the late President of the American Federation of Labor. Fifteen hundred persons, unable to gain admittance to the hall, assembled in the hall across the street, and heard the funeral service by radio. Other thousands stood reverently in nearby streets. The simple Jewish ritual for the dead was intoned by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

Fifty mounted police had to be called to clear a way, so the auto cortege could start on it way to Tarrytown.

GOVERNMENT CONDEMNED FOR "GREATEST CRIME"

Hon. E. C. Drury Says Scales of Justice Should be Evenly Balanced.

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—(Canadian Press).—Nothing has occurred since the U.F.O. went out of power in 1923 to reflect in any way on the Progressive party, according to Hon. E. C. Drury, former Premier, who was the chief speaker at the annual dinner of the Toronto Progressives last night.

Certain events which had happened in the meantime had given him greater pain, said Mr. Drury, than anything else in his life. "But an individual whom we had a right to trust was alone responsible," he pointed out, "and unfortunately did not involve the Government, party nor party funds."

"Our successors are now on trial for a far greater offence," he continued.

"The simplest and most primeval form of government is the holding evenly of the scales of justice and when the government does not hold the scales even it is a blow at law and civilization. Until we know that the sword of justice is going to fall on the men of one political party as of another, the present Government of Ontario stands condemned of the greatest crime of which any government can be guilty."

Farmers Urge That All Bootleggers Be Jailed—Teach Temperance in Schools.

TORONTO, Dec. 19—No effort was made at the United Farmers of Ontario convention Thursday to change the personal of their officers. W. A. Amos was re-elected president and Harold Currie of Strathroy re-elected vice-president without opposition.

It had been expected that members favorable to Premier Drury and his Progressive party might try to gain control of the U. F. O. but the re-election of the old officers leaves that organization in control of the Morrisonites. Today the elections for the board of the Farmers' Sun, the U.F.O. organ, will take place. Bruce McNiven, Victoria county; C. C. E. Merkley, Dundas County; Neil McKay, Bruce county; G. A. Bothwell, Grey County; T. H. Binney, Grey County; J. G. Whitmore and R. H. Baker were nominated for vice-president but withdrew. Mr. Currie said that the U. F. O. principles had always been his guiding star, and always would be.

Brewery Licenses.

Among other resolutions passed was one that the King Government be requested to revoke the licenses and permits which have been recently granted to distilleries and breweries in Ontario. Walter Clarke, Petrolia, said it was a crying shame for Canada to allow export of liquors to United States when that country had made the sale of liquor illegal. He declared that if export to some countries was legal, the government should see that the liquor actually went to these places and was not sold in Ontario or United States. Another resolution calling for the abolition of the prescription for the six ounce bottle of liquor was sent back to the resolutions committee for redrafting, the members feeling that there was no use abolishing the six ounce bottle if quarter prescriptions were still allowed. The meeting refused to pass a resolution condemning the Farmers' Sun for printing the advertisements of the Moderation League in the recent referendum campaign in Ontario. A resolution to ask the Ontario Government to punish all people convicted of bootlegging with a jail sentence was passed.

Teach Temperance.

A resolution that the teaching on scientific temperance be restored to the Ontario school curriculum and that temperance be taught all new comers to the country was passed. A resolution that a longer period of residence in Canada than that now required before aliens be allowed the franchise was struck out of the resolution after F. H. Sangster Stoffville had put up a spirited defence of the foreigner.

Mr. Sangster denied emphatically that the foreigner was the biggest wrong-door in the province and speaking of those who were opposed to the O. T. A. he asked:—"Is J. A. Currie, an alien; Is Jim McCausland or Howard Ferguson, an alien. I think not" He added that the big wet majority in Toronto wasn't all given by foreigners either.

Gasoline Tax.

A resolution that the Ontario Government instruct the Hydro commission to approach a flat rate for Hydro commission to approach a flat rate for Hydro power and that Farmers be given representation on the Hydro commission was also passed. The meeting also went on record as favoring a tax on gasoline with proper restrictions. A resolution that all stock yards be under a system of public ownership was also passed. The convention also went on record as opposing any increase to Ontario cabinet ministers or members of the Provincial Assembly and also demanding a cut in the indemnities of members of the Federal Parliament.

FRITZ HAARMAN WAS SENTENCED

Murderer and His Accomplice Will Be Beheaded —Germany Relieved.

HANOVER, Dec. 19.— (United Press.)—Fritz Haarman, demoniacal murderer of 24 youths, and Hans Grans, his accomplice, who procured many of the victims, were sentenced to death by beheading today. The sentence will be carried out almost immediately.

A jury to-day found Haarman guilty of 24 cases of murder, whereupon it "sentenced him to death 24 times," as well as to "life-long deprivation of his civil rights."

In three cases out of the 24 murders of which he was accused, Haarman was found not guilty.

Grans, who was alternately branded with the murderer as an accomplice and in the next breath, declared innocent, was found guilty in one instance of instigation to murder. He was sentenced to be beheaded and to "twelve years' imprisonment for complicity.

The end of the Haarman trial, most of the details of which have been unfit to print, came as a relief to this city as well as all Germany, where people whose curiosity at first was stimulated by the unusual murders, were quickly overcome with revulsion and horror by the disclosures.

The verdict was a foregone conclusion, Haarman having confessed and implicated Grans. The murderer killed the boys in his hovel by the River Leine, by tearing open their throats with his sharp teeth. He and Grans sold the victims' "clothing."

When the jury verdict was announced, Haarman stood up and said: "I accept the verdict fully and freely.

Yesterday he had asked that he be beheaded in a public square with all Hanover present and moving picture machines to record the execution.

Cordons of stalwart policemen surrounded the prisoner when the jury came in, because the States Attorney had been informed by relatives of the victims that they had planned to assassinate Haarman "to prevent the possibility of a pardon."

SAYS A CYNIC

By Cynthia Grey

We hear a lot about the "new woman" but never a word about the new man. For men are just the same birds that they were two thousand years ago.

And Socrates, the wise, used to go out and sit on the front stoop and look henpecked when his overworked wife razzed him a biet, so all the neighbors could pity him. And isn't that exactly what your neighbor's husband does sometimes?

And dear old Euripides said "A woman should be bounded by the street door," or as we hear it to-day —"Woman's place is the home."

GOES TO PALESTINE.

General Sir George MacMunn Succeeds Sir Herbert Samuel.

This is one of those fellow who live and breath England wherever they may be and seldom are in England. He's Gen. Sir George MacMunn who for the past four years has been quartermaster general for the British armies in India and now becomes British high commissioner for the Palestine succeeding Sir Herbert Samuel who resigned to return to London and its jolly fogs.

COMMONS MEETS ON FEBRUARY 5

Probably Last Session Preceding General Election Next Year.

SENATE REFORM

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—(By Canadian Press).—Parliament opens on Thursday, February 5, for a session which will probably last well into the summer months and with a subsequent general election in the balance.

Since last session, the standing of the parties has changed but little. Elated with byelection results, the liberals feel, however, that their strategical position in the country has improved much beyond the actual party gain in West Hastings and that the Government can meet its fourth session with confidence.

The coming session promises to be historic. Premier King on a number of occasions has announced the intention of the Government to bring down a constitutional amendment to limit the veto powers of the senate, just as the Parliament Act of Great Britain limited the veto power of the House of Lords.

But such a constitutional amendment will only be brought about—such is the general expectation—after a long and bitter fight. In both houses, opponents are expected to fight it on the ground that there should be no amendment of the confederation agreement embodied in the British North America act without prior consent of the federating provinces.

And apart from the promised battle over the Senate's powers, the Bill of fare promises a wealth of contention. The decision of the railway commission in the Crow's Pass case is likely to result in legislative proposals that will be sharply contested. The Australian trade treaty necessitates parliamentary action that will give rise to some lively cross-fire. The Japanese amendments to the Geneva protocol on disarmament are expected to occasion some keen criticism, particularly from British Columbia members.

GOUGH NON-SUIT MOTION FAILED; TRIAL GOES ON

Accused Director of Home Bank Said He Had Believed in M. J. Haney.

THIRTEENTH DAY

Thirty-Five Witnesses Have Been Heard in Longest of Home Bank Cases.

TORONTO, Dec. 19—The motion of W. N. Tilley, K.C., for non-suit of the Crown's case against his client, R. P. Gough, Home Bank director, was dismissed by Judge Coatsworth yesterday. The Gough trial has now been running thirteen days. Thirty-five witnesses have been examined and 298 exhibits fyled.

Mr. Tilley argued that Gough had not been connected with the annual statement complained of as false, he was not at the meeting when it was submitted, and the Crown had not even proved that he was in the province at the time. It was the directors individually, not collectively, who were responsible for that statement.

"No overt acts have been proved, and a man cannot be condemned on inference," argued Mr. Tilley. "A man cannot be convicted of a crime in Ontario without the Crown at least showing that he was in the province at the time."

"Deliberately Concealing."

Mr. Tilley affirmed his belief that J. Cooper Mason and H. J. Daly, the general manager and the president of the bank, were deliberately concealing things from Gough.

It was to be inferred from the evidence that Daly was seeking to buy up control of the Home Bank. Many large loans had been made which had never come before the directors for approval before the money had been advanced. These loans were not mentioned in the minutes, despite the rule of the bank which required all loans of more than $5,000 to come before the board. Two of these loans which had not been properly passed totalled over $500,000.

Mr. Tilley pointed out that J. Cooper Mason was at the head of the executive forces of the bank, and H. J. Daly was at the head of the directors; and that these two men were working together in concert—intriguing in deal after deal—arranging bogus miputes, and deceiving the directors, time after time, in matters which, had the directors known, might have turned out differently.

No Security For Loan.

An instance was that of the manner in which $110,000 was loaned to the Western Canada Company without security. Originally in this instance the bank loaned $130,000 to a broker wherewith to buy Victory Bonds. The bonds in turn were pledged with the bank for $110,000, which was advanced to Western Canada with security.

Deal after deal of similar character was dissected by Mr. Tilley, showing how Mason and Daly manipulated things to their own interests. He charged particularly that "the men who were keeping the records of that bank were putting through transactions that we prove elsewhere were irregular and improper, and the records that are produced cannot surely be used against innocent directors who were sitting on the board with them."

No Reason For Suspicion.

Dealing with the monthly statement, which was also the basis of a charge against his client, Mr Tilley pointed out that this statement was actually prepared by the chief accountant; carried up to the directors—every item listed under its supposedly proper heading; then certain office figures were added in, and the statement was approved and signed. What reason would the directors have to suspect the accuracy of those figures? Or, suspecting them, to hold up the statement for investigation?

D. L. McCarthy, K.C., Crown prosecutor, in reply, contended that a case had been made against Gough. He pointed out that the by-laws, rules and regulations of the bank provided a most complete system by which all the informations in the branches came into head office. These were, so to speak, he said, three funnels for the inpouring of that information: First, the credit department; 2, the accountants' branch, and, 3, "a funnel which seems to have been partially choked at times," the inspection department, which was a check on the

TESTIMONY FOR POLICE DENIES SCANDAL TALES

Chief Belanger's Secretary Rebuts Woman's Charge of Giving Chief Money.

ENDS ON TUESDAY

Constables Swear Lieutenant Did Not Drink in Station Nor Play Cards.

MONTREAL Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Denial that Rose David, alleged keeper of a disorderly house, had ever given money to Chief of Police Pierre Belanger, was made Thursday by Joseph Lavallee, police department secretary, at the enquiry into Montreal police affairs proceeding under Mr. Justice Coderre. Mr. Lavellee recalled a visit that this woman had made to the chiefs' office, but she had come to complain against police activities because, she said, her house was not disorderly. The chief, according to the witness, had replied that if she were keeping a respectable house she did not have to worry.

Lieut. Euclide Gregoire, head of the mortality squad, gave evidence regarding raids he had made on Rose David's house. He suggested that on one occasion when only the woman herself had been found in th place that perhaps shehad been "tipped-off" by a chauffeur, who had previously driven a couple of officers up to the place, the latter's duty being to scout the situation prior to the raid.

Gregoric's efidence was corroborated by the two officers in question.

Yesterday afternoon's session opened with the testimony of Captain Arthur Maranda, police instructor, who detailed the preliminary course given candidates for the police force. This extended over the period of a month and included instruction in criminal law the city by-laws, physical training, pistol-pracitce, military drill and other subjects.

Interest Abates.

Public interest in the police probe reached a low ebb yesterday morning for there was no startling evidence given although it was important for the policemen concerned that there should be placed on record declarations that denied the imputation of drunkeness that had been made against them.

Mr. Justice Coderre announced that all evidence must be in by next Tuesday.

The evidence had to do with the accusation against Lieut. Demers that he played for money in the police station and had been drunk there. Constable E. Bocade told the commission that Lieut. Demers had given orders against the playing of cards for money and since his regime no cards had been played for money in the station in such a manner that the lieutenant couldn't have been aware of it.

Constable Oscar Primeau stated that he was the man named by Constable Chantelois as having played cards with him for money, to the knowledge of Lieut. Demers. He denied it was possible for the lieutenant to know what was going on, as when the lieutenant came in during a game, the stakes were covered up with caps, pieces of paper and pieces of wood. The games were very small ones, mainly casino at five and ten cents a game.

Celebrated Elections.

Constable Conrad Mailloux explained the proceedings on the evening of the Federal elections of 1921, when gin had been drunk during the course of a celebration at the station. Witness believed that the majority of the men in the station were satisfied with the election results and there had been a little celebration. Chantelois had brought in three flasks of gin and had uncorked a couple of them in the guardroom. Witness swore that never at any time that night to his knowledge had Lieut. Demers been drunk.

To Mr. Lanctot witness stated that some eighteen months ago he had lent Lieut. Demers $300. The money and interest had all been paid up. Witness did not know of any other men in the station who had lent the officer money.

GIVE GLASSES.

The giving of glasses at Christmas, is becoming more popular every year, they are useful and always appreciated. Our plan is to make any style that you order, and fit them with temporary lenses, then after the holidays to examine the patients eyes and fit the correct lenses without further charge. See W. H. THE RED FACTION RULE FOR FRANCE

Communists Preparing for a Decisive Battle in France.

(By John O'Brien, United News Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Dec. 19.— Communists acting under alleged directions from the third Internationale in Mocow and a combination of Conservatives and Catholics are rounding their adherents in preparation for a decisive battle. The radical Socialist Government of Premier Herriot is trying to maintain peace between the two opposing extremes of political thought and at the same time defeat the purposes of both. The issue is the introduction of a Communist regime into France.

The recognition of the Moscow Government by France, closely followed by the arrival of an Embassy staff said to include picked propagandists has caused startling activity among French Communists the Soviet Union Embassy staff however, is careful to declare that it will respect the Moscow promise to refrain from meddling in French affairs.

Although the current Red activity is directed against the capitalist regime as a whole the French Communists have taken as a pretext for their campaign the growth of the Catholic organizations under the guidance of the 24 French Cardinals, the increasing membership of the "Camelots Du Roi" (Henchmen of the King) and the appearance of a new organization called the "League of the Republic" of which former Premier Millerand is honorary president.

"Fascism is here. The Protectorate is in danger, cries the Humanite, official organ of the Communist Party, in launching a campaign for immediate action, against the reactionarie."

The Humanite demands:

1. Dissolution of the "Camelots Du Roi."
2. Dismissal of all army officers belonging to the monarchal organization known as "Action Francaise."
3. Constitution of a revolutionary tribunal to judge adherents of so called Fascist Society, Profiteers and opponents of the recognition of the Diplomatic Soviet Union.
4. Seizure of all banks and factories and their sequestration for the benefit of the working class, with control by workers representatives.
5. Organization of all workers in a "National and International Syndicate."

BIBLE QUOTED BY SEDUCER OF GIRL

George Lane of Cavan Township, Sentenced to Four Years in Prison.

(Special to The Examiner)

COBOURG, Dec 18.—In sentencing George J. Lane to four years in Kingston Penitentiary on a serious charge, Judge G. M. Cameron said: "You are charged with having had during the month of April, 1924, at the Township of Cavan, carnal knowledge of a girl under the age of fourteen years not being your wife. You were arraigned, tried and found guilty and it is my duty to impose such a sentence a I think will meet the ends of justice."

The judge referred to previous convicitions against the prisoner in April of last year, of having entered four different premises with attempt to steal, for which he received suspended sentence. This had not had a salutary effect.

"You were employed," Judge Cameron said, " as a farm laborer by the father of this girl and had been in his employ for some three years."

Judge Cameron said it appeared that for several months Lane had endeavored to induce the child to submit to his wishes. He had tried to justify his action to quoting verses from the Bible, and to influence her young and untutored mind.

"You, a man of 27 years, accomplished her ruin, and it is my duty to see that you receive punishment to fit the crime." Judge Cameron referred to the prisoner's apparent hard-heartedness and callousness during the trial. In the witness' box it was disgraceful and digusting. He had endeavoured under oath to blacken the girl's character.

Judge Cameron said there were too many such cares coming up, and stated his contention of trying to stamp out such cases in Northumberland and Durham. He sentenced Lane to Kingston penitentiary for a period of four years.

GERMAN DEADLOCK.

Chancellor Marx Unable to Form Ministry Thursday.

BERLIN, Dec. 19.—The parliamentary situation, up to a late hour last evening, apparently still was in a state of hopeless chaos and Chancellor Marx could not see any prospect of evolving a workable coalition government out of the present party line-up.

Following the authorization of President Ebert to make a thorough and final survey of the situation in a last attempt to form a ministry which would command the necessary majority in the Reichstag, the chancellor held a number of conferences with the major parties and late in the afternoon motored to the president's office to apprise the executive of his futile search for a solution to the existing deadlock.

BURIAL OF SAM GOMPERS UNDER MASONIC RITES

Funeral of Late Labor Leader From New York to Tarrytown.

SIMPLE SERVICE

Body Lies in Asphalt Sarcophagus Presented by Baltimore Federation of Labor.

TARRPTOWN, N. Y., Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press)—Samuel Gompers was buried Thursday, on a little knoll in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery.

His body was laid to rest in company with some of the most noted personages in the history of the United States, in a spot famous in tradition and history. About his grave were the simple markers or massive mausoleums of Washington Irving, Andrew Carnegie, William Rockefeller, Carl Schurz, and of the Dupuys, the VanDorns, the McCoombs, the Van Cortlandts, the Beekmans, the Delavans and the Bocks of earlier generations.

After a two-hour service at the Elks Club in New York City, where the body of Mr. Gompers lay in state, a funeral train of scores of automobiles brought his body here. Preceded by an honorary escort of motorcycle police from the metropolis the cortege made the journey in two hours, passing through many suburban hamlets where streets were lined with those who stood with doffed hats.

At The Graveside.

A misty rain was falling as the silence among the hundreds who waited at the grave was broken by the chapel bell tolling "Nearer My God to Thee", and the van of the cortege entered the grounds. There followed limousines bearing Mr. Gompers' widow, his sons and daughters, his brothers and grand children, his associate officials of the American Federation of Labor, delegations of labor union chiefs of all trades, gathered from far and near, and Free Masons of St. Cecile Lodge of New York having charge of rites at the grave.

The impressive ceremonies lasted but a few moments. As the bronze casket was lowered into the pit of evergreens, banked with huge floral wreaths, the Masons sang "Lead Kindly Light."

They chanted the 'Twenty-Third Psalm and sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." A sheep-skin apron fluttered into the grave, and sprigs of symbolic evergreen from the lapels of Masons followed. The chaplain uttered a few word—"He had discovered the secret of peace without which there is no understanding; now the laborers' task is o'er."

FALL PLANTING IN U. S. MUCH HEAVIER

Winter Wheat Area Increase 42,317,000 More Than 1923.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—Higher prices stimulated winter wheat and rye plantings this fall, the department of agriculture stated Thursday in announcing that the winter wheat area is 42,31,000 acres, or 6.5 per cent more than that planted last fall.

The late fall permitted heavier planting in some sections but in some parts of the country excessive rains, droughts and late maturity of other crops reduced sowings. The condition of winter wheat December 1 was 81.0 per cent of a normal, or seven points below last year, and 4.6 points below the ten-year average.

The movement toward larger sowings was stronger in the great surplus producing region of the north central states and in Texas than in any other large section. Drought decreased the acreage that would have been planted in states west of the Rocky Mountains, except in Oregon.

MARRIED

Two cannot live as cheaply as one. But marriage is a good investment. It furnishes the incentive that makes most people earn more and save more.

Analysis of incomes confirms this. Married men between ages of 28 and 48, are found to have from 17 to 38 per cent more taxable wealth than bachelors of the same age. This is the average.

REV. HAROLD YOUNG TO PREACH SERMON

Programme Committee of Bay of Quinte Conference Held a Meeting.

The Programme Committee of the Bay of Quinte Conference met at the Bridge street church, Belleville, on Thursday, with the president of Conference, Rev. J. S. I. Wilson, B.A., B. D., in the chair, and the Rev. A. McLauchlin, B.A., B.D., as secretary. The other members were:

Rev. Dr. F. E. Malott, pastor of the Conference Church, W. S. Gordon, Tweed, president of the Laymen's Association, and Messrs. F. E. O'Flynn, K.C., W.C. Reid and H. W. Ackerman, of Belleville.

The conference will meet in Belleville on June 4th, and will conclude the day before the first session of the council of the new United Church.

Of interest to Peterboro readers is the choice of Rev. W. Harold Young, M.A., B.D., to preach the Conference Sunday evening sermon. George St. Church, Peterboro, and Bridge Street Church, Belleville, have been historic spots in Union history. In the latter the first General Conference of Canadian Methodism was held after complete organization in 1831. The last Methodist Union was consummated there in 1883, while the final vote was influenced by the last session of the Toronto Conference, held in the George street church in 1882, when it was said, "As goes Toronto Conference so goes the day." And it did. Toronto conference voted 137 to 37 for Union. Again on this, the last great public service of the old Bay of Quinte Conference, the two churches are brought together again, and the last official sermon before entering the still larger union will be preached by the George street past ..

Of great interest, to the preachers, will be the "Stationing Committee," meeting on June 1st, when for the last time it will function as part of the itinerative system inaugurated by John Wesley. There will also be a public gathering in connection with the new Albert College, and a laymen's banquet.

CHEESE OUTPUT WORTH $355,967 FROM 25 FACTORIES IN DISTRICT UNDER R. W. WARD'S SUPERVISION

Milk Supplied by 1,099 Patrons Owning 8,575 Cows During Past Season—Total of 24,565,491 Pounds of Milk Delivered—Dairy Meeting at Warsaw.

G. A. GILLESPIE RE-APPOINTED DIRECTOR

G. G. Publow Warns Farmers That They Are Primarily Responsible for Quality of Cheese—World Competition Demands High Standard of Cheese.

The annual District Dairy Meeting for the County of Peterboro, held under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, and the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario, took place yesterday afternoon in the town hall at Warsaw, and was characterized by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, the director for the district, who presided, as one of the best meetings he had ever attended.

Special speakers for the occasion were G. G. Publow, of Kingston, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, and J. L. Irwin, Dominion Dairy Produce Grader. Mr. R. W. Ward, Dairy Instructor for Peterboro District, also gave his annual report.

The nomination for the Director for the District resulted in the unanimous choice, without opposition, of G. A. Gillespie.

There were about 50 members of the farming and cheese-making industries of the District in attendance, including a large quota from Warsaw, and several representatives from Lakefield and Norwood. G. A. Brethen, M.P., for East Peterboro, was among the latter.

Mr. Publow's Appeal.

G. G. Publow, in his address, made a strong appeal to the indifferent farmer and the indifferent cheese-maker for co-operation in the effort being made by the better type of both to raise the standard of the cheese made in this district, which it was said, has fallen below that which it attained some years ago. Only two factories were named with a credit of 100 per cent. in their cheese making activities. Three had percentages well over the ninety mark, but the majority were much lower, one factory grading only a little over 30 per cent.

Causes given by the three special speakers of the afternoon for the falling off in this district of a high standard in cheese making were the selling of cheese in a green condition, the use of impure water, and the practice of returning unpasteurized whey in their cans to the farmers.

G. A. Gillespie, opening the meeting, reviewed general conditions of the year, referred to the stricter grading regulations put into force, and their result, and the probability of still stricter regulations being made shortly to bring Canadian cheese up to the standard set by severe competition with other countries in the markets of the world.

G. G. Publow referred to the gratifying result of figures submitted that showed the total of under-grades made this year as being lessened by almost 7 per cent. from last year's figures. He said that the cheese-making industry had become national and also international, in its scope, and that co-operation of the farmers and of the cheese makers was needed in carrying out the regulations set by the government in the manufacture of this product.

Responsibility on Farmer.

He said that the farmer, more than anyone else, was responsible for the quality of Canadian cheese, because no matter how skilled the maker he was unable to get good results with indifferent raw material. This year had been particularly favorable to the making of good cheese, because every month had seen green grass underfoot, and the comparatively cool weather had been favorable to its good condition.

"The obligation of the farmer is to supply the cheese-maker with milk in a fit condition to make the best possible cheese," said Mr. Publow, going on to give some information as to the proper constituents of the milk. It was not safe, he asserted, to accept milk, for instance, that had a greater acid content than two-tenths of one per cent. With more than this amount, the milk would be over-ripe for cheese making.

If the milk drawn from the cow were never exposed to air it would not turn thick or sour and might be kept for any length of time. Exposure to the air caused bacteria, which Mr. Publow referred to as "little plants or organisms," to breed therein. These bacteria would multiply and expand unless their growth was retarded by careful attention to clean and sanitary conditions, an abundance of pure air and a cool temperature. Cheese made from milk in which there is undesirable fermentation will not keep, but cheese made from pure milk will go on improving until it is ripe, and will stay sound under fair conditions.

The most serious condition is the one that attacks the casein in the milk. This condition is known as a liquefier, and comes from decayed material in the cans. "When you find white whey running out of your curd, that is casein going out of the milk. The whey should be clear."

Another enemy to clean milk was road-dust. "Don't leave the milk-cans uncovered on the roadside. One or two cans of milk like that in a vat can cause serious loss."

Improve Factories.

"Some of our cheese factories also are not a credit to the business," said Mr. Publow. "Something must be done to keep up the good name of Ontario cheese. We have competition that is keen and it is going to be keener. When we put our cheese in competition with that from other parts of the empire as was done at the special exhibition held in London recently, we can easily win. But what we have to do is to get the indifferent ones to measure up to the standard of our best."

Mr. Publow referred to the regulations in some of the cheese factories at Belleville that no person could supply milk to them unless they had a covered stand and a cooling plant, and to the old rule in use in Peterboro district that none of the factories could return whey in the cans. He also spoke of having been in factories where the June make of cheese was off the shelves in early July and was corroborated in this statement by Mr. Ward, who said too much green cheese was put on the market, and who also spoke of the detrimental effect on flavor of cheese in the practice of returning unpasteurized whey in the cans. Another fact referred to by Mr. Ward was the use in many cheese factories of water that was not up to the standard of purity necessary.

Mr. Publow thought that a change in marketing systems would be beneficial to the trade, and thought that a central selling station, in Peterboro, for instance, would be a good thing. Cheese might be brought in to the city and graded before sale, and defects in it could be pointed out to better advantage to the maker. "Montreal is a long way off."

This idea of a centralized selling depot was supported by Mr. Gillespie, who said that a meeting was being called in Peterboro for Saturday of this week, when the revival of the former cheese board would be considered.

Factories Numbered.

J. L. Irwin of Belleville, Dominion Dairy Producer Grader, spoke of the improvement made during the past year in cheese making, even with the closer grading regulations put into effect. This year a registered number for the factories was used with splendid results. It eliminated the practise of some factories in changing their shipping brand each week. The Department of Agriculture this year asked the graders to put the grades on the boxes. In 1923 some of the factories claimed that merchants were selling No. 2 cheese as No. 1, thereby making exorbitant profits. The merchants now say that it will be difficult to sell lower grades if they are stamped, but the system removes suspicion from the buyer and the importer.

Figures were quoted by Mr. Irwin as to the increase in No. 1 cheese graded this year in Ontario over last season. In 1924, with stricter grading regulations, an increase in No. 1s was recorded of 6.63 per cent., with an increase in the total of boxes of 183,020. The 1923 total was 1,272,514, while that of 1924 was 1,455,534.

Flavor Defects.

Speaking of some of the defects in cheese, Mr. Irwin said that over 95 per cent. of the seconds and thirds were so placed on account of their flavor, which was variously recorded as being rancid, fruity of turnipy. This question of using turnips seemed to be a familiar one to the meeting. Mr. Irwin scored it, saying that a turnipy flavor caused a cut of a cent a pound in cheese, and that without this defect some of the factories would reach 100 per cent. in their grading.

Complaints from the Old Country had also been received of Canadian cheese being affected by a gasoline flavor, due in several cases to the operation of a gasoline engine in the factory or to a gasoline engine being used in the operation of milking machines.

Little fault could be found with texture. Open and weak conditions were noticeable in June owing to the change from cool to warm weather.

In the color line there was a wonderful improvement over 1923, and in finish also there had been an improvement. "But improvement can still be made. The demand for an attractive and well finished cheese is becoming very keen."

In boxing, Peterboro section showed laxity. Poor material, improperly nailed, was noticeable, and many of the boxes received at Montreal contained five or six pieces in the head, whereas the railway commission had set three pieces as the standard.

Mr. Ward's Report.

R. W. Ward, Dairy Instructor for Peterboro District, gave some interesting figures as to the progress made in this section for the eight-month period from April 1st to November 30th.

In this time Mr. Ward travelled 8597¼ miles, and had 25 cheese factories under his supervision, situated in the counties of Peterboro, Victoria and Durham.

Supplying milk to these factories were 1099 patrons and 8575 cows, an average of 44 patrons and 343 cows to each factory. As no reports were available from the Daisy D., the Oakdale and the East Emily factories, the report covered the section less these three factories. Milk delivered amounted to 24,566,491 pounds, with 2,204,009 3-4 pounds of cheese made, realizing for the cheese the sum of $355,967.46, an average price of a little over 16c a pound. In twenty of these factories, the money is divided by straight fat basis and five by fat plus 2. The average pounds of milk taken to make one pound of cheese, for the white section, was 11 and 14-100, and the average per cow was 3121 pounds.

Whey butter amounting to 18,852 pounds was made, and there was realized for the same $5179.70. For whey cream, $4239.37 was realized, making total receipts for butter and cream $9419.07.

The total amount spent on improvements to factories was $7465.00.

There were 594 call visits made and 60 day visits, 1333 butter fat tests made, 126 curd or fermentation tests, 212 calls made at farms, and 10 meetings attended. Patrons visited, met and conversed with 1112.

Samples of water collected and tested at the Laboratory of the Provincial Board of Health, Peterboro, totalled 45; the reports showing 29 good, 3 fair, 7 doubtful, 5 poor, and 1 very poor.

The average butter fat of 1229 samples of milk submitted was 3.36, which is fairly representative of the section.

The average loss of fat in the whey was .20, the lowest in Mr. Ward's time as instructor, and attributable to the cool weather.

Mr. Ward noticed with regret the habit of some of the factories in this section of having whey returned in the milk cans. "I believe that one of the contributing factors to your success in former years was due to the fact that no whey was handled in your milk cans. When the whey is returned in this way, the whey tank should be emptied clean every day, and conductors and tanks kept perfectly clean. The whey should be properly pasteurized and it would be better if it went into the cans at a temperature of one hundred and fifty degrees or over."

Cleanliness Essential.

Clean and sterile conditions surrounding the use of milking machines was another absolute requisite. Milk delivered to the factories in the best possible condition, clean and cool, and factories properly constructed and equipped, with pure water supply and perfect sanitary conditions, within and without, manned by efficient people, were further recommendations.

"The producers of milk have the greatest financial interest in this business, and their interest in their product should not relax until it is consumed by the consumer. The grading of dairy products is without doubt right, and I believe is being carried out by efficient men in the best manner possible, but I trust the day is not far distant when all the raw material, milk and cream will be graded, and to my mind is the only thing that will eliminate the careless, indifferent patron, who militates so seriously against the making of the finest cheese and butter."

Three main factors in the meeting of competition in the British markets, which will force us to more economical production, were enumerated by Mr. Ward as being increased production per cow, sound raw material and larger factories, with nothing but the finest cheese and butter.

Causes for the making of much under-grade cheese in this section this season were considered by Mr. Ward to be (1) Small factories. "As a rule, our best makers are not found in the small factories." (2) Unsanitary conditions of some factories, in a few cases impure water supply; (3) in some cases, makers have not given the attention they should to the business; (4) in some cases makers are not amenable to advice and instruction; (5) unsound raw material.

Laws Rigidly Enforced.

Mr. Ward said that he had been advised that the dairy laws of this province will be rigidly enforced in the future, particularly with regard to sanitation and sanitary conditions and pure water supply. He had so advised all proprietors and owners of cheese factories to this effect on his last visit this season, "and I feel sure that public opinion will give the Government strong support in this decision."

At the conclusion of the addresses, when an informal discussion formed the final business of the meeting Mr. E. Hawthorne, of Warsaw, moved that, as this meeting had been so successful and well attended, all annual meetings of the Eastern Ontario dairy district be held there in future, but found some opposition from other quarters that also claimed the honor, and the resolution did not go to a vote.

GOUGH NON-SUIT MOTION FAILED

Had Fingers on Affairs.

By having such a system, had not the directors put themselves in the position of having their fingers on the affairs of the bank, he asked.

Dealing with the question of wilfulness, Mr. McCarthy said: "When a man undertakes, or is required by law to state as an absolute or positive fact that which he does not know to be true, or as to which he has no knowledge at all, such a statement, if false, is fraudulent."

Bank Was Tottering.

"Mr. Gough," continued the Crown Prosecutor, "joined this bank when it was in a tottering condition, if not actually insolvent. He had not been on the board many months before the McHaffie incident arose. Mr. McHaffie, in February, 1918, addressed a letter to Mr. Gough in which he called his attention to the facts that Toronto office had not been inspected, and that there were large accounts on which interest was being capitalized and carried into profits. This was followed up by a letter from Mr. Gough to Mr. Haney in May, 1918, and at the same date a letter from Daly to Haney. And I again accept Mr. Gough's appreciation of his duties as a director in that letter. In that he agrees with the duties imposed on him by the Bank Act."

In that letter Mr. McCarthy pointed out, Gough had complained about Haney's speculations; that Haney as chief executive, had made large investments and entered into large stock transactions, which were never brought before the board, or known by it. It was to look after just such matters as these that the shareholders elected directors, and the directors were never asked to turn over their duties to any officer. "It is our duty to give them the protection they think they have," the letter said.

Duty of Director.

"That is exactly my conception of the duty of a director," said Mr. McCarthy. But, he continued, notwithstanding Mr. Gough's conception of his duties, it was six years before the by-laws, rules and regulations were amended requiring, among other things, that the branches he inspected regularly, and reports made, and that Toronto office balance sheet be brought before the directors. Even when passed, they were not carried out, and no director ever protested. If these regulations had been carried out the Daly and Mason transactions could never have occurred behind the scenes.

Mr. Tilley had blackened Daly and Mason, and by the same stick was endeavoring to paint Mr. Gough white, declared Mr. McCarthy, adding that all the big loans which had ruined the bank occurred after the accused had become a director.

"I don't want Your Honor to forget that Mr. Gough was vice-president," said Mr. McCarthy. "Even if the statement were innocently signed, it is for Your Honor to say whether he is not guilty of negligence having in mind the purpose for which it was made.

"He attended over 100 meetings in the six years and if at any of these meetings he would have taken a look at the daily statement book he would have seen that the large overdrafts were carried in Toronto and Montreal, and that in two years the Toronto overdraft totalled about $2,000,000.

Gough on Stand.

With the dismissal of his motion, Mr. Tilley put Mr. Gough on the stand.

Mr. Gough began his evidence by telling of his business career.

"I was a large borrower" he said, adding that at times his borrowings went up to $1,000,000.

"From the Home Bank?"—"No. I have been accused of not doing enough business with the bank when I was a director of it."

He explained that the reason was that the bank was then not large enough to deal in large amounts.

Then he related how M. J. Haney came to him and asked him to go on the board.

"At that time I had a lot of irons in the fire and was fairly busy on my own affairs."

"But I felt it an honor to be asked to become a director and I joined the board."

Haney had told him he wanted him on the bank board to help with a merchandising proposition that he wanted to work out. Later this turned out to be the Murray-Kay Company.

He had not seen when he came on the board the correspondence with the financial department regarding some of the large accounts of the bank.

"It was not shown to you"—"No, not at that time."

In fact there were some letters he did not know about until they came out before the Royal Commission.

Gough said that the letters of protest to Haney about unauthorized loans were brought before the board by Daly and himself.

"Daly read his letter and made Mr. Haney feel very badly and I tried to soften mine down a little, not to be so loquacious, but he got the letter just the same," said Gough with a smile.

He had known Haney as a boy in Peterboro but lost sight of him again until he heard of his business success.

"He had a great reputation as an organizer," he said. "Haney was a man of ability and I believed in him but I did not believe in letting him have too much of his own way."

CHRISTMAS TREES.

The usual tirade setting forth the economic waste and loss represented by the damage done to Canadian forest wealth by the cutting of Christmas trees is going the rounds.

It always seems more or less like shadow-boxing this undue worry over the harm inflicted by the Christmas tree harvest.

It may be true that in some sections of the country there is considerable damage done in this way, but, after all, the total loss must be small compared with the pleasure the trees give to thousands of youngsters.

As a matter of fact, one forest fire causes much greater loss of timber than all the Christmas tree cutting that is done from one end of the country to the other.

When our forest resources are being but inadequately protected against fire, when we permit our pulpwood to be exported to build up industries outside of Canada, when we have only begun to dabble in the science of reforestation, and when lumber companies have been allowed to carelessly ravish our richest areas of timber, it seems just a little nonsensical to get excited about the cutting of small trees, many of them of no commercial value, for the purpose of brightening the lives of Canadian boys and girls.

Until the big leaks are stopped there is little sense in worrying about spilling a few drops over the side.

MILITARY TRAINING.

The United Farmers of Ontario meeting in convention in Toronto solemnly placed themselves on record as disapproving military training in the schools, and protesting against any expenditure for such purposes by either Federal or Provincial Governments.

Apparently there is some fear that the cadet corps of Canada may precipitate another war, if their training is allowed to continue.

Our U. F. O. friends surely have not considered this question very carefully or they would know that there is nothing in the cadet training in Canada's school to develop a militaristic spirit in the most spirited pupil.

Beyond doing something to give boys a more soldierly deportment, to teach them to throw back their shoulders and hold their heads erect, and to impart to them some idea of discipline, the cadet movement does not go.

It does not make soldiers out of our school boys nor very rarely does it give them any desire to become soldiers.

It is a physical training with some beneficial effects upon character at the same time, is thoroughly innocuous, and it would be just about as logical to suggest that physical culture in the school would turn out a nation of prize-fighters or that the turkey shoots so popular in the country develops a desire on the part of the participants to go and shoot somebody, as to condemn the cadet movement as militaristic.

The U. F. O. should train its gun upon bigger game.

A FINANCIAL CONTROLLER.

The promise made by Premier Ferguson last year that an expert financial man would be appointed as controller of finance for the Province has at least been implemented by the selection of F. Martin Turnbull of Montreal for the position.

The most surprising feature about the appointment is that the initial salary is to be $6,000 per year.

When the announcement was made of the intention of the Government to establish a financial controller it was naturally assumed that the remuneration for the position would have to be made sufficiently high to tempt men of the proper qualifications undoubtedly well paid in high positions of trust with private firms.

If Mr. Ferguson has succeeded in securing a capable official at the salary mentioned he has completely fooled the very many people who declared that the Province would have to pay very handsomely to obtain a financial expert qualified to accept the responsibilities of this most important office.

The new Deputy-Treasurer and Controller of Finance is a chartered accountant and has had considerable experience in the world of finance. There is a wide field of service opened out to him in the office to which he is appointed, and there is no doubting the fact that a capable controller can prove of great value to the people of this Province.

Ontario generally will hope that Mr. Turnbull makes a complete success of his position.

MR. DRURY'S CHARGE.

Ex-Premier Drury in an address to Toronto Progressives on Wednesday night flayed the Ferguson Government for its failure to probe the financial transactions of the Province just prior to the advent of the U. F. O. administration with the same vigor as it did those dealings that affected Peter Smith.

It must be admitted tha the Government has left itself open to such an attack and to the charge as voiced by Mr. Drury that "until we know that the sword of justice is going to fall on men of one political party as of another, the present Government of Ontario stands condemned of the greatest crime of which any Government can be guilty."

There are details in connection with the dealings of the Home Bank with the predecessors in office of the Farmers' Government that demand an explanation.

Enough has been revealed to justify a demand from the people for the whole truth about these transactions and if no sincere attempt is made to uncover that truth the Government will have difficulty in shaking off the indictment made by Mr. Drury.

To clean-up one section of the Home Bank matter and to punish those convicted of being implicated and at the same time to leave the early part of the same transactions shrouded with mystery, is a course that cannot be approved by citizens generally, regardless of their political affiliations.

If there was—to use the Globe's description—a troll gate operating before Peter Smith was called to the treasury, the men in charge of it should be put on trial as was the U. F. O. treasury.

Nothing less than that will satisfy the demand for an even-handed administration of justice.

A CANADA FORWARD POLICY.

If Canada is to become a great and prosperous nation means must be found for retaining within her borders a much larger proportion than heretofore of her own natural increase and of those who come to her shores intending to settle here.

* * * *

There are today in United States over 3,000,000 native born Canadians or children born to them, and still living there. Another group, composed of those who emigrated first to Canada but later made a second migration to United States, represents, with children born there and still living, another 1,000,000 people.

Even these figures do not tell the whole story of loss of population to the neighboring republic. They make no allowance for those of Canadian descent whose parents, as well as themselves, were born in United States.

How much the retention of our own people would mean in growth of population is suggested by the fact that over 70 per cent. of the net growth of United States during the half century from 1870 to 1920 was due to natural increase. The net gain in immigration was only 19,000,000 out of a total increase of 66,000,000.

* * * *

While agriculture is now and must be for long Canada's basic industry, we cannot build up and retain a large population through encouragement of agriculture alone. If we are to keep within our borders even the children of our farm homes, not to mention those of our towns and cities, we must provide a variety of occupational interest, opportunity and employment.

Even in old Ontario there has been and is a steady drift of young people from the farm. That drift is more pronounced in periods of agricultural depression, but it is in evidence in times of agricultural prosperity also. Many young people of the farm simply have not the bent or the inclination for farm life. The urge within them is towards the professions or trade and commerce and they are going to satisfy that urge. The same is true of the young people of our towns and cities, but among them the proportion determined upon entering business or professional life is, of course, much larger.

Heretofore, except in temporary periods of industrial development, Canada has not been able to provide opportunity and employment for all who sought these in business or professional life. Therefore, large numbers have left the country of their birth or adoption to find a satisfaction for their ambitions in the wider variety of employment offered by the neighboring republic. Canada, in turn, has imported merchandise from that and other countries the manufacture of which has given employment to hundreds of thousands of their citizens and has provided maintenance for their families.

From the standpoint of development possibilities there are three classes of industries in Canada as in most other countries. There are those for which Canada possesses peculiar natural advantages. There are others for which, subject to the limitation of her present population, she has approximately the same advantage as other countries from which we are importing or could import the products of such industries. There are others again for the sound establishment of which there is no prospect because of natural limitations.

A soundly based Canada Forward Policy would make a clear distinction between the last mentioned class and the other two. It would provide for the gradual curtailment and ultimate elimination of tariff protection for industries, which by their character or the source of their raw material or peculiar natural advantages of their competitors in other countries cannot be made approximately self-sustaining even with a considerable growth in population. But the same policy would provide for the other two classes such encouragement and assistance by tariff protection and otherwise as might be essential to their development from time to time and stage to stage to the point at which they would become self-sustaining. That is necessary if, in our period of early industrial growth and limited home market, we are to provide the diversity of vocational interest, opportunity and employment which alone can stop the drift of population to United States.

* * * *

The tariff is not an Alberta problem nor one of the West alone. It is a national problem and it should be considered from a national point of view.

Canada comprises within its stretch of 4,000 miles a variety of natural resources and occupational interest. Each section—geographical and occupational—has certain natural or other advantages inherent in it as part of its national birthright. That birthright imposes responsibilities as well as advantages and one of these is to regard the interests of Canada as a whole as paramount to those of any one section of any one group at any given time.

It is on that basis and that alone that national unity may be maintained and promoted. There is no part of Canada and no occupational group within it whose best interests would not be served by an all-round development of this country. To bring that about there must be a mutual and reciprocal spirit of give and take and co-operation among the different geographical and occupational divisions of our people.

Under a soundly based Canada Forward Policy there would be a scientific balancing of encouragement and assistance to these various divisions with a view to promoting the interests of each to the largest extent consistent with the promotion of anall-round development of our broader Dominion-wide interest. This the Journal sincerely believes would involve the encouragement of industry hand in hand with the encouragement of agriculture.—Edmonton Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

They claim a Chicago man stole $2,000,000. And that's almost enough to keep up a broken-down auto.

A THOUGHT.

CITIZENSHIP.

Citizenship in a country is more than merely the fact you were born there; it is more than the privilege to vote; it is more than a mere word. It carries more weight than the boast of being a native son, more responsibility than is manifested when you attend a partriotic celebration; more effort than standing when "God Save the King" is sung or cheering when the Union Jack is unfurled.

To be a citizen means more than a happening of birth; more than the choice of a home to live; more than the swearing of allegiance to a government.

Citizenship means service. That nation whose citizens serve its interests most faithfully, whose citizens are most patriotic— that nation is one that is respected and given high rank among the nations of the world.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Dec. 18.—There was practically nothing doing at the market to-day. There was only about 40 fresh cattle in, but there were over a thousand stale cattle, which will probably all have to be carried over until next week, and very few of them wanted then. The market has been over-supplied this week with common cattle, while real choice quality has been none too plentiful. Prices for the latter have held steady and well taken care of by the packers, but medium and common cattle are off about 50c for the week.

In the export section about 1,000 have been taken by the Roger & Maybee and the H. P. Kennedy firms. Both firms will be in the market for a few export cattle next week.

Hogs are steady to firm, and will probably continue so through the holidays.

Prices in the various sections are as follows:

Export cattle, choice and heavy steers $7.25 to $8; bulls, $4.50 to $5.00; cows $4.50 to $5..

Choice butchers, $6.50 to $7; medium, $5.75 to $6.25; common, $3.50 to $4; baby beeves, $8.50 to $10.

Choice fat cows, $3.50 to $4.50.

Stockers and feeders — Choice shortkeep feeders, 1,000 to 1,200 lbs $5.50 to $6; stores, 900 to 1,000 lbs., $5 to $5.50; choice stockers, 830 to 950 lbs., $4.25to $4.75; light western stock, $3.50 to $3.75, choice western $4.50 to $5.

Calves steady.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Don't let constipation make you an invalid —relieve it with Kellogg's Bran

Few people realize how dangerous is constipation until this dread disease tears down their health. Did you know that more than forty serious diseases can be traced to constipation?

Keep your health, or restore it, with Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled. It brings relief in mild and chronic cases of constipation. It is effective because it is ALL bran. That is why it is recommended so highly by doctors. They know that only ALL bran can bring 100 per cent results. Part bran is, at best, only a halfway measure.

If eaten regularly, Kellogg's Bran will bring permanent relief—even in the most chronic case. It is guaranteed to do so. If it fails, your grocer will return your money.

Because it is ALL bran it sweeps, cleans and purifies the intestine. Like nature, it acts naturally. It makes the intestine function regularly.

Eat it every day—two tablespoonfuls—in chronic cases, with every meal. Eat it with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over other cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Enjoy it in those wonderful recipes given on every package.

The flavor of Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is delicious. It is crisp, nut-like. Quite different from ordinary brans, which are so unpalatable. Kellogg's Bran is made in Toronto, Canada and served by the leading hotels and clubs everywhere. Sold by all grocers.

BRICKLAYERS

The number of bricks laid by the average bricklayer varies in different cities, all the way from 96 an hour in Indianapolis to 241 in Birmingham. So states a report by U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Bricklayers haven't any monopoly in this direction. The individual work of salesmen, clerks, reporters and followers of nearly every other line in any town varies quiet as much, or more.

CHURCH UNION AT MILLBROOK

Both Sides of the Question Aired at Meeting in Grace Church.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 19.—An important meeting in the interests of church union was held in Grace Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening, and as local feeling has run rather high in the matter, in order to have the question fairly presented, speakers on both side were secured Rev. M. A. Bremner, of Cobourg, spoke for the unionist party, and Rev. Mr. Paterson, of Norval, for the anti-unionists.

Rev. G. S. Gervan occupied the chair, and explained that by previous arrangement the first speaker would be allowed fifty minutes, the second one hour, and ten minutes then given for reply. To avoid unduly prolonging the gathering no questions would be allowed, and if any were asked no reply would be given.. The audience was also requested to refrain from any applause for either speaker

The hymn, "Faith of our Fathers," made a fitting opening for the meeting, and Rev. Mr. Bremner took the platform immediately following a brief prayer offered by the chairman

After referring to his appreciation of the high honor of being invited to speak on such an important occasion, Mr. Bremner gave a short history of the church union movement from the time it was first suggested in 1899, through its various stages up to the present time. His personal conversion to its righteousness and necessity was brought about when serving a pastorate in Bracebridge to which he was inducted in 1902. Having a general oversight of that section of Muskoka he found small hamlets, sometimes of one hundred people, served by three churches, with three ministers, and all receiving help from the home mission funds of their respective denominations. One fair-sized, self-sustaining congregation would have prevented this pathetic waste of men and money, and this instance could be multiplied by three or four hundred throughout the country. To change things where such a situation prevailed was the aim when in 1904 certain negotiations started which have since culminated in the Act to unite the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches of the Dominion.

On every occasion, the speaker reminded his hearers, when the vote on church union was taken in the General Assembly it passed by practically the same proportion each time, namely four to one; and this was also true of the vote in synods, presbyteries, and sessions. On the basis of these votes, in 1916, the General Assembly committed the Presbyterian church definitely to union so that it has not been a matter of doubt since that time.

Analysing the Union Bill passed by Parliament in July of this year, the point was noted that "it is affirmed by free and independent action of the churches themselves," the Legislature is claiming any responsibility for bringing about the union. Going into union means that a church is in no way departing from the faith of its father; nor does it lose its indentity, forfeit its property, discard its church history, traditions, or any part of its heritage from the past. All three go in as a church, an there is a proviso that congregations may take a vote any time between December 10, of this year, and June 10, 1925, whether or not they will enter the United Church. This vote, locally, will be taken on December 30th.

If a church votes itself out of the union it may retain its local church property, and receive a share of the general property of the church. It may be an independent church, or join with others who also elect to stay out. But the vote is not for, or against church union—that is an established fact—it affects the local congregation only. Each church takes its mission fields into the union with it, hence any congregation voting to stay out not only cuts itself off from the mother church of which up to that time it has been a congregation, but also cuts itself off from the great home and foreign mission activities which Presbyterianism supports. It separates itself, too, from the great national enterprise which the church has undertaken for the Christianisation of Canada and the world. Can a church give as good value to the community, and the Dominion, by cutting loose from the denomination which is going on in this great work

But if a church finds the vote favorably to union? Every branch of the work will go on as now. The same trustees will still hold the property in trust either for the church locally ,or for the United Church of Canada; the same session and board of managers will continue to function, the order of service will be the same, the same Book of Praise will be used, the Sunday School, Young Peoples' Society, and other organizations will be conducted in the same way—no change is implied, or intended.

Again the United Church will have no power to compel any local congregation to unite with any other local congregation unless this be its own wish. The session will be elected in the same way as now, elders will be ordained in the same way, and congregations will have the same right as now to call on their own ministers.

Differences of opinion on this matter of union, the speaker believed, has been greatly accentuated, the unity of the members of the Body of Christ being an ideal situation, which on the whole, is generally desired. "It is quite impossible for us to get too close together, or to co-operate too fully. "We believe that Jesus meant what He said when He prayed, "that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and Thou in Me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me, and hast loved them as Thou hast sent Me, and has loved them as Thou hast loved Me."

Where then is the point of divergence? Dealing with the statement often made that this matter of union has not been gone about in the right way, it was pointed out that from the inception of the Presbyterian church in the 16th century the same form of government has prevailed—the session elected by the people; the presbyteries composed of an equal number of ministers and elders; the synods and the General Assembly with an equal number of ministers and laymen. And this form of government has been found to be sound, democratic, Scriptural; it has worked, hence it has been perpetuated. This union question is the only occasion in connection with which this form of church government has been found fault with. The anti-unionists refuse to submit and say "the people are the church." Certainly, but the people have always expressed themselves through the session, presbyteries, synods, and the General Assembly, and the Presbyterian church has not departed one iota from the constitutional form of government in any of the negotiations since 1900.

To the objection that "union is largely a ministers' movement," the speaker stated that he was in attendance at the General Assembly which met at Owen Sound, when out of two hundred and forty-two elders, all the peoples' representatives and drawn from all manner of occupation, from Halifax to Vancouver. one hundred and eighty-eight voted in favor of the union, and only fifty-four against.

Time being called, a hymn, "The Church's One Foundation", was sung, and Rev. Mr. Paterson addressed the gathering. In his introductory remarks he congratulated the church on taking this manner of facing the question, as from personal experience he had found churches in other localities refusing an open platform discussion such as was being carried out on the present occasion.

Some essential differences, he believed, would be noted in his resume of the action of the General Assembly in connection with church union, from that of the previous speaker. The Assembly, he claimed, had pledged itself not to bring about union "unless with the unanimous consent of the entire membership of the church", and there had been a gross breach of faith in its failure to keep this promise. Opposition to the movement had been growing increasingly active through the years for the anti-unionists insist that "the Presbyterian church is not constitutionally competent to vote the church out of being." What sheer downright folly to say that the uniting churches will each preserve its individual identity when union is consummated. When three streams merge into one, there may be added volume and power, but there is no separate identity and life."

The interests of the people, the speaker insisted, have not been in any way safeguarded, and the union is being built upon broken promises, and broken faith with the congregations. Analysing some of the votes taken, Mr. Paterson believed the balance of favor rested with the anti-unionists, claiming that the quite considerable number who failed to register any vote might be taken as opposed to the union movement altogether

"A church and its property go together, so if you put the whole Presbyterian church in as a unit, all its property goes in also" This statement, insisted upon by the speaker as the correct view, led him to the conclusion that non-concurring churches would lose their property, "theft' being the word used to describe such action.

The honesty and fairness of some of the leaders on the side of union was questioned in connection with their attitude to the Westminster Confession of Faith which was read extensively. This they pledged to "teach, maintain and defend", but some of them, at least, it was claimed, have actually subjected certain articles in it to ridicule, and have signed it "with mental reservations."

The bill to unite the three churches was characterized as "iniquitous", and to the question, why did it pass? came the answer, "solely through the tremendous pressure brought to bear upon the members of Parliament by Methodists and Presbyterians. My own member was beseiged to give his support to putting the bill through."

"There is no warrant in Scripture for compressing different denominations into a single union. There is no prayer for organic union, our Lord's words "that they may all be one," having reference to spiritual unity. Unholy coercion in the church has led to dissension and bitterness. That organic union is the way to spiritual unity was never before heard of. St. Paul, in writing to the Ephesians, in speaking of unity of life not of external, organic union; he is referring to the Spirit of God, not to ecclesiastical authority."

Reference was made by Mr. Paterson to the three great churches of history, the Roman, the Church of England, and the Church of Scotland, which had been split by God himself, when they had become corrupt, an He would bring them back again into fellowship with their Divine Leader. The fact that there is no uniformity in Nature, but diversity in unity, was also pointed out.

"I am a Calvinist from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet", said the speaker in referring to the creed of the new church as "a colorless thing, neither Presbyterian, nor Methodist, Christian Scientist, Mormon, or Russellite could accept it."

The manner of calling a minister in the United Church was commented upon unfavorably, and the powers of the Settlement Committee regarded as arbitrary. An example of misleading information being given by the union committee in connection with the "Wee Free Church of Scotland" was being read by the speaker when time was called and he reluctantly left his address unfinished.

In his ten-minute reply Mr. Bremner used the time in answering the main points put forward by Mr. Paterson, prefacing his remarks by saying, "I would not like to take upon myself, in referring to anti-unionists, some of the things said here tonight."

The Confession of Faith he had not expected to hear referred to, but rather facts advanced as to how remaining out of the union would definitely affect the local congregation. However, the Westminster Confession of Faith was a document drawn up by men who had no monopoly of divine inspiration more than the men who drew up the Basis of Union. Three thousand churches in Canada have now gone into union believing the General Assembly of the Prebyterian church can be trusted to fulfill its word.

Rev. Mr. Wilks, "who belongs to us all", as the chairman stated, closed the meeting with the benediction.

BOY'S BODY WAS FOUND YESTERDAY

Fort William Cleared Up By Search Party—Died in Storm.

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press).—The body of Ernie Elvish, seven years old, was found yesterday afternoon after a determined search lasting since he disappeared Monday evening. An army of determined searchers, to the number of about four hundred, tramped through the woods. The body was found under drifted snow at a point in the bush about two miles and a half from the city. The parents had strong hopes up to Tuesday night that the boy would be found alive, but since then have been reconciled to the belief that he had succumbed. All they have hoped for during the long hours of Wednesday and Thursday was that the body might be recovered.

FARMERS MAKE MONEY IN SHOOTING MATCHES

Better Than Marketing Fowl So Bailieboro Reports.

BAILIEBORO, Dec. 18.—There have been quite a number of shooting matches in this vicinity recently. The farmers claim that they can make much more money out of their fowl by holding shooting matches, than they can by marketing their geese, ducks and turkeys, at the exceeding low price that poultry are selling at this season.

Shooting matches have been held by Messrs H. Clements and Sons, B. Owden, Wm. Bradshaw, Herb Dawson. The sports of this vicinity have been doing considerable fox hunting this fall.

Foxes Numerous.

The foxes are very numerous, and many of the farmers complain of the Renard family having visited their farm yards and carrying away their poultry.

Already quite a number have been trapped and shot. This is the first winter for four or five years that they have been plentiful, and during e past three weeks the weather has been good for chasing them.

The hides are only now beginning to get prime.

Snow Covers Lake.

Saturday's snow spoilt the chances for good skating on Rice Lake. Previous to the storm there was a glassy surface over the entire lake, and had it not been for the recent snow and sleet, the late frosts would have made it safe enough to make excellent skating.

The only hope that skaters have of being able to use the lake, is that the weather will turn soft, and flood the lake over again.

Judge Cameron is reported to be doing nicely and it is not thought his injury is of a serious character.

MARCUS TAUSTER GETS TWO YEARS

Taken From North Bay to New York and Convicted on a Charge of Conspiracy.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press). — Marcus Tauster, forty-seven-year-old banker, who was recently brought here from North Bay, Canada, to answer an indictment charging perjury, was sentenced to from two to four years in Sing-Sing by Judge Collins in the General Sessions yesterday.

Tauster was a partner in the defunct Private Banking House of Garfunkel and Tauster. He was charged with having made false statements of solvency in connection with the bank.

A day after the failure of the bank Tauster fled to North Bay, Canada, and established himself in business. His wife and two children had gone there to live with him when the police learned of his whereabouts.

Judge Collins, in pronouncing sentence, said the enormity of his crime demanded a warning to others, although there are mitigating phases in Tauster's favor.

CANADA'S HOPES ARE OVERTURNED

Preference Proposals of Baldwin Government Omit Important Foods.

DETAILS OBSCURE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press).—Under the new preference proposals of the Baldwin Government, as interpreted here, the Canadian products chiefly benefiting will be sugar and tobacco, and to a certain extent Canadian wines. Full details of the proposals are not yet available, but the plan apparently is to put into effect such of the Imperial Conference preference offers as do not involve the levying of new duties, but to drop those which would necessitate the imposition of new duties on foodstuffs. If this interpretation is correct, the offer of new preferential duties on canned salmon, canned lobster, crayfish and crabs, on green apples and honey—the articles of the Imperial Conference offer in which Canada was most interested, will go by the board.

The father was opposed to Dick's getting married at all aud the young folks keep it a secret and change their name from Preston to Brown. Suzanne and Worth Carew came along on their wheels and Suzanne knows them, and they confess to her of their marriage and asked her to keep the secret. Arthur Howard happens along. As he is in love with Letty, Dick tells him Suzanne is Mrs. Brown, intending to keep Letty out of sight till he has gone, but he finds her and makes love to her, making Dick very much puzzled how to keep her away as he has said Suzanne is his wife.

After a while along comes his Dad Abel Preston, and Dick tells him he is staying with Mr. Brown and Dad thinks Letty is Mrs. Brown. Worth Carew comes back again as he is in love with Suzanne and finds her as he thinks Mrs. Brown and he is heart-broken.

The colored cook and gardener are much distressed that Mr. Preston is Mr. Brown or Preston and the cook says she will leave but wants her wages from Dick, who has no money as his Dad has not sent him any lately.

All the play covered in one part of a day had more action, more romance, more real life, more droll situations than could be packed in a good sized novel. Between the second and third act, the gentlemen of the company sang behind the scenes, (while Letty was alone in the room) "Seeing Nelly Home" which sounded very nice to the audience.

Freda, the heiress was hunting, Arthur Howard who had made love to her and then came away. In her broken French she took her part well as she looked for the "two-legged viper" and was bound to make him marry her. One has to see the play to enjoy it to the full and every one did his and her parts exceptionally well. The Assembly Hall was well filled. This play will be given on Thursday and Friday nights also. The members of the company are to be congratulated on the splendid way they put the play on. It was humorous all the way through.

An orchestra of three pieces by Francis Peckett, piano, Grant Morrison, "Yuke" and Geo. Frederick drum, etc., furnished music before the play started and also between acts, which made it pleasant during the waits.

FINE MUSIC AND A GREAT PROGRAM

At the Royal—Hoot Gibson is a Prime Favorite in "Broadway or Bust."

Hoot Gibson is always a drawing card, and yesterday when he appeared at the Royal in Broadway it was no exception. Last night's audience enjoyed Hoot and the balance of the programme in vigorous style, and crowded houses are expected for to-night and to-morrow.

The new six-piece orchestra is giving an exceptionally good musical programme each evening.

ACCESSORIES

A Season of Furs, Feathers and Pretty Glass.

In this feathery furry season almost no detail in dress escapes the touch of ostrich or fur of some sort. Oftenest the feather is combined with rhinestones, silver or gilt, in a most bizzare fashion. An evening gown of white chiffon over a slip of flesh-tinted satin is covered with crescent-shaped motifs of rhinestones, each with a tuft of white ostrich fringing the lower edge. These motifs are the only note of elaboration in the dress, the ostrich being added in a narrow fringe at the bottom.

An accessory of dress is the new round garter, which also shows its touch of feather and fur trimming. Some of the newest and showiest have quite large rosettes, each with a jeweled ornament buckle or button fringed with the soft ostrich. Others have bits of fur, ermine, seal, rabbit squirrel dyed in natural colors, set with a bright ornament.

Some very expensive garter ornaments are made with real jewels or finely carved medallions, the price being gauged only by the demand, which has thus far included the setting of diamonds, pearls and other genuinely valuable stones. A lot of these fur or feather motifs are introduced in various ways and add chic to almost any costume.

A distinct novelty is the dress trimmings by the yard, made of antique gimp in silver or gold bordered on each side with one of the fashionable furs. The idea appears to have its origin in the Russian type of dress trimming and is very effective on day-time gowns and coats.

The humble chunk of glass is modeled into a thousand different trinkets for womens' adornment, and its popularity knows no abatement. More and more space is given to the display of "crystal" necklaces, chokers, bracelets, pendants earrings, pins, brooches, enough to create envy in the heart of a Zulu queen. Some of these are genuine rock crystal cut like diamonds, in round beads oblongs and cubes and others, tons of them, are just glass.

Among the newest of these baubles are some chokers and even long chains, composd of "beads" so large that the weight must be a serious consideration. The colors grow more enchanting as the newest fancies are shown, and the greens and blues of the sea and sky are reflected in the glinting crystal, alternating with disks of emerald, aquamarine, ruby, amethyst, sapphire.

One amusing thing about these near jewels is that the designers of real jewelry are copying the imitation and priceless pearls are strung in chokers and other styles of necklaces that so closely resemble their cheap prototype as to puzzle any one other than a connoisseur.

Two or three novelties are so obvious as to have a value modish and commercial, all their own. The large blue, pink and violet pearls, for instance the like of which was never found in the sea are exceedingly popular and often becoming.

Another fashionable gewgaw is the pendant earring, which grows longer with each new importation of designs. Those of the genuine diamond-cut or polished crystal are like tiny waterfalls. Some most delicate in design have a series of small crystal beads on a slender chain finished with a crystal ball, almost touching the shoulder.

So many fascinating things are now made of semi-precious jewels or just glass that the real stones have lost their prestige. Even hat ornaments are made thus and are shown in many pretty styles. Many of the smart little beaver hats are distinguished by just a bright pin, of onyx set with rhinestones, or jade with brilliants, or coral with silver all of which are included in a display lately brought from Paris.

Brilliants and ordinary rhinestones are much used and some of the designs in these, such as mercury wings, arrows, medallions are popular.

CORRIGAN

"Yes, I have come," she said in a low voice. "I have stolen away from hell—to rest in Paradise, for just a little while. I think he will kill me soon; but, while I live, I must see you sometimes. I am still English," she continued, wistfully, "and he—is just Chinese! Oh! Donald, I stayed too long over there, and just when I might have managed to forget—I met you." Her face brightened suddenly and she laughed through her tears. "There! The devil is gone! He is a devil, Donald, the prince of devils—and so I have crawled on my knees to master of my destinies, to beg to be kind—and comfort me. I will just laugh a little together pray that nobody saw me leave, some will watch me return." She knelt by her side and pressed to her hand.

He did not notice that the dog barking again, nor did they see Corrigan's great form until he stood before them, in tunic and breeches, his hat in his hand, his malacca tucked under his arm.

The girl uttered a little scream and White rose awkwardly to face his employer.

Corrigan's heart was the biggest part of him. He hooked a chair toward him with his toe, bowed politely to Mrs. Lai-Ho and asked the amazed assistant for a smoke. White muttered an introduction and brought over a small bamboo table. There were cigarettes upon it, a square bottle and a couple of glasses.

Corrigan lit up carefully, throwing the match out into the night.

"You two poor devils!" he said suddenly. He rested a heavy hand on White's shoulder. "Tell us all about it, old son. The story's older than the hills, laddie, but this one's likely to have a pretty tough conclusion!"

White opened a bottle of soda water.

"Corrigan," he declared warmly, for ceremony was the one thing Corrigan could not stand, "you're the best pal a fellow ever had. I'm damn sorry I didn't tell you about all this before; but I was fool enough to think you wouldn't understand."

"I shouldn't have," said the other, "without seeing Mrs. Lai-Ho." He turned to the girl. "You have taught me something to-night, that yesterday I wouldn't have believed. Living in these remote fringes of civilization, working all da among the very lowest types of your ople, one forgets, if one has ever own, that there are others so dif that it is difficult to imagine th ne of the same race. I came in he put an end to what I believed to mere liaison; I beg, your pardon ly, I find I've stumbled up romance." He surveyed the gl end of his cigarette. "White," he inued, "I know you'll listen to me, because I believe you respect my opinion. These meetings must stop. This lady's husband came to see me to-day. He knows everything. I won't bore you with all the things he implied to me, but they were unpleasant in the extreme, I can assure you."

The girl's eyes opened wide.

"My husband knows?" she demanded fearfully, her hands to her ears.

Corrigan nodded.

"You must admit that your daylight signalling was, to say the least of it, indiscreet. I promised him I would nip the affair in the bud—before his return from Labuan in ten days."

The girl swayed softly to and fro, her hands still pressed to her head.

"If he knows that I have been here," she whispered, "it will be the end!"

"He must never know," said White hoarsely.

"Now, look here," broke in Corrigan. "You've got to grit your teeth, both of you, and put up with it. Give up these signals, meetings, every mortal thing, and be patient. A man with a carcase like our hodorable friend's can't last forever."

The girl shook her head sadly.

"I know you are right, Mr. Corrigan. We are following a course that can only have one ending. Our turn may come, as you have said, but the fires of our romance will have burned out with our youth."

"It does sound pretty hopeless," added her lover, gloomily. "It's all so confoundedly rotten, I'd run away with you, but I'm bound to remain here. If I did clear out, we'd have precious little to live on."

Corrigan pushed a glass toward him.

"Come on," he shouted. "Stiffen your lip! This is life, my lad. I've been through it and you're only getting it in your turn. When I get an idea into my head, it's usually come there for some reason. Now, I've a notion there will be a way out.

He rose and held out his hand to Miss Heng.

"If I can do anything to help you both," he assured her, "you can be certain I'll do it."

He slapped his assistant on the back, picked up his hat and cane, and went down the veranda steps whistling a tune he had heard when he was last on leave.

He was about to cross the stretch of single track, when an unusual sound coming from the bend to his right caused him to halt. He listened intently. The dull, rumbling noise drew nearer and he recognized the sound of a trolley on its way from the coast town. Presently the thing came in sight, a four-wheeled affair, propelled by a cluster of coolies. Seated on a cushion, his red umbrella folded at his feet, his fat hands folded over his chest, dozed Lai-Ho.

It occurred to Corrigan that the other did not seem the least bit pleased to see him and, for the first time, it dawned upon him that no steamer left Jesselton for Labuan that week. The well of Chinese cunning has no bottom! Corrigan was beginning to understand things! It stands to the great man's credit that he succeeded in keeping Mr. Lai-Ho in polite conversation for a little over an hour, so long, in fact, that it left very little doubt in the planter's mind that the Chinaman's wayward wife had been given ample time to get home!

As he watched the magnate's trolley lumbering out of sight, Corrigan shook his head.

"I shouldn't be the least surprised" he reflected, "if that yellow blackguard had some inkling as to what was is the wind—and has had young White's bungalow under close observation for some time past."

He strolled to the water's edge to admire the rippling surface, burnished by a rising moon. It was close upon midnight when he retraced his steps toward the bungalow. Half way up the slope he overtook a strange coolie going in the same direction. He caught him by the shoulder and swung him round.

To the uninitiated all coolies look alike, but to Corrigan, who knew every man in his employ, this creature's face was strange.

"Where are you going?" he demanded in Malay.

"Sana," replied the man, which was not helpful.

Corrigan aided his memory with his malacca. There was too much veiled insolence in the coolie's tone to suit the planter.

"Who employs you?"

"Lai-Ho," replied the man, with some hesitation.

"Bi-la," and he let him go.

There was only one reason why the rubber-king's men should have invaded Corrigan's territory at that time of night. The planter, therefore, proceeded to the coolie lines on his side of the estate, roused a reliable Chinaman, and sent him off to keep a watchful eye on his neighbor—and report progress from time to time.

* * * * *

White woke from a fevered sleep to find two shadowy forms bending over him. Before he could raise himself to a sitting position, a cloth was clapped over his mouth and he was borne, struggling, into the night. There were more men outside and he could hear no sign of his dog. The orientals who held him were possessed of enormous strength and presently he felt things being wound tightly round his wrists and ankles. He was thrust into a sort of hammock suspended from a pole and knew that he was being carried down the slope. As the journey continued, half-stifled as he was by the cloth over his face, he lost all sense of direction. The more he endeavored to free himself, the more the cruel thongs bit into his flesh. He marvelled at the grim efficiency of the plan for his abduction, and wondered what sort of end the dishonored Lai-Ho had selected for him. The fact that he could not smoke irritated him beyond measure. He remembered that his glasses were reposing on the table by his bed and cursed the magnate heartily. If he ever got clear of his captors, it would be a miracle; but it would be something still more extraordinary if, having escaped, he could find his way back!

He must have dozed, for the pikul jerked suddenly to a standstill and the bump as he was lowered unceremoniously to the ground brought White back to consciousness. The cloth was removed and the assistant looked up into the evil, bloated face of Lai-Ho.

"There will be a vacancy on the Orang-Puteh Kabun to-day," he announced pleasantly, his eyes scarcely visible through the slits.

White, still worrying over those rimless glasses, felt decidedly handicapped. He remembered, to his disgust, that he was still in that somewhat scanty form of night attire affected by Borneo settlers, but not usually offered for sale by the leading drapers.

"You don't happen to have a cigarette about you, do you?" he inquired with great earnestness.

Lai-Ho shook his head.

"I am afraid I must ask you to be patient for a little while. I can assure you it will not be long."

White's was one of those great spirits that are most cheerful when up again it! Corrigan had no time for men who lacked grit. The younger of his two assistants had been in tight corners in a good many portions of the earth, but he was bound to admit that this was the tightest.

"May I ask what time the execution is to take place?" he demanded with a coolness that puzzled the oriental.

"Yours will be the second," came the enigmatical reply.

White was more than ordinarily dense. He had by no means recovered from the effects of the journey from his comfortable bed to the clearing hewn from the virgin jungle in which he now lay.

"Ah!" he commented brightly. "One of your charming little festivals! Are there many competitors, may I ask?"

He glanced aside to where four enormous coolies were digging with feverish energy.

Lai-Ho turned on his heel.

"There will be two executions," he returned coldly. "It is our custom to destroy unfaithful wives with their lovers!" He strode to where the work was in progress.

White's blood seemed to run cold in his veins. Perspiration oozed from every pore. He struggled like a madman with his bonds, cursing Lai-Ho at the top of his voice. Presently he grew calmer, conscious only of the acute rawness of the wounds the thongs had made. He called to the rubber king.

"Mr. Lai-Ho!"

The Chinaman came slowly back to him.

"Murder me in what fiendish way you will, but be just to your wife. Remember her European upbringing, the freedom of our girls as compared with yours. Believe me, she has done nothing, nothing whatever." He paused, gasping for breath.

"You will excuse me, I know,' said Lai-Ho, wrinkling up his enormous face: "but I cannot believe you, Mr. White."

"God Lord, man!" the Englishman cried hoarsely. "I te" you it's true. I can't do more than that. If Mr. Corrigan were here, he would tell you she same."

"Mr. Colligan is not here," declared the oriental with an air of finality. There came a sound of footsteps in the forest and, as White stared helplessly in the direction from which the sound came, he saw her. Her hands were tied behind her back, but her feet were free. She came with little, halting steps into the opening, two brown-skinned bearers at her heels. She screamed when she caught sight of White, and ran toward him. Lai-Ho caught her arm and threw her to the ground.

He shouted something in a dialect the Englishman did not understand. The bearers lifted her and carried her to where coolies rested on their long-handled spades. Writhing in agony White saw her thrust bodily into the earth, until only her head appeared above the surface; watched the soil stamped in over her fair neck; and then, as his eyes seemed to bulge from their sockets, he saw a man, whose muscles stood out in knots, passing his thumb along the blade of a sword.

The figure came suddenly erect, placed both hands over the hilt, and looked toward his master for the word of command.

White closed his eyes, then opened them again quickly.

Two shots rang out in close succession.

Lai-Ho fell heavily on his face in the springy turf; the executioner spun round like a great top, tripped on his weapon and dropped.

The coolies of the rubber king fled in panic, scattering before the grim form of Corrigan and his guide.

White stared at him, believing that his brain had gone. Something snapped in his head—and he lost consciousness.

He came to himself with the taste of raw spirit in his mouth, and a feeling of acute dampness on his face and neck. He blinked up into the lustrous eyes of a girl in a quaintly flowered jacket of blue silk, whose lips hovered tantalizingly above him.

She nodded back at the form of Corrigan, towering in the background.

"He found the way out, Donald, dear," she said simply.

Still incredulous, he passed his hands over her arms. Suddenly he realized that his bonds had gone. He struggled painfully to his knees.

"I say, Corrigan," he blurted out. "I'm deucedly sorry to have got you into this mess. There'll be no end of a row about this!"

Corrigan held his head to one side and wrinkled his forehead like a clown.

"Don't worry your head about that, my boy," he said. "That's my pigeon. There's a little girl not a hundred miles away who's been aching for a kiss for fifteen minutes—and I'm dying for my breakfast!"

DOCTORS SEEK ONE STANDARD

Proposal That Licentiates of Dominion Medical Council Be Accepted by Provincial Boards.

QUEBEC OPPOSES

OTTAWA, Dec. 19.—Standardization of licensure of medical men in Canada, through a national medical council and a national college of medicine, was the principal topic of discussion in the convention of medical men which opened here Thursday.

Expectations that the subject would furnish meat for much discussion were realized and at adjournment last night a special committee representative of all the provinces went into private meeting to discuss a paper read during the day by Dr. J. M. MacCallum, of Toronto. This paper favors the recognition by provincial medical licensing boards of the Dominion Medical Council. It was the basis for a three-hour discussion and will probably result in some definite proposal by the committee on which the convention can register its vote.

Only the Quebec delegates were definitely opposed to its adoption, they stating that the Provincial Council of Quebec would retain its right to choose its own medical licenciates, or at least to prescribe the standard of the final examination.

Britain's Example

Proponents of the change emphasized the fact that Great Britain maintained a high standard of medical proficiency under a single licensing board, while Canada had nine boards, one of them a Dominion board. British Columbia has no separate provincial system of medical licenses, but accepts Dominion licenses. Asked if British Columbia would also "extend reciprocity to Great Britain" in the matter of medical licenses, one British Columbia delegate replied: "they would not hear of it." This was the only reference so far to the British reciprocal arrangement which was expected to come up for more extended discussion.

The conference of the medical services in Canada, arranged by the Canadian Medical Association and encouraged by the Federal Department of Health, is the first gathering of the kind. It is meeting in the Parliament Buildings and has brought together about a hundred doctors, one of them a woman, and several non-medical members of the Dominion council of health, two of these being women.

FIRM NAME CHANGE ONE OF CONVENIENCE

No Change in Ownership or Policy of Canada's Biggest "One Man" Concern

By supplementary letters patent, issued at Quebec, the name of the largest independent tobacco manufacturers in Canada has been changed from "W. C. Macdonald Registered Incorporated," to "W. C. Macdonald Incorporated."

The dropping of the word "Registered" involves no change in the ownership or policy of the company, being merely a simplification of the name, but it recalls one of the most interesting features of the industrial history of Canada.

W. C. Macdonald Incorporated is not only of the most unique enterprises in Canada, but it is the largest individually-owned industrial concern in the Dominion and is advertised as the "largest independent tobacco manufacturers in the British Empire."

Founded in 1858 by the late Sir William Macdonald, the greatest educational philanthropist in Canada's history, the House of Macdonald has grown to its present dominating size as a "one-man" institution. No other manufacturing concern in Canada owned by a single individual, has even attained its size or proportion, and it is questioned whether there is today in the whole British Empire another manufacturing business of the size of W. C. Macdonald Incorporated, which is owned absolutely outright by one man, as is the case of Mr. Walter M. Stewart, present sole owner of the business.

When, at the death of Sir William, the control of the business passed into the hands of Mr. Stewart and his brother, the provincial laws made it necessary to add the "Registered" to the name of W. C. Macdonald, by which the business had been known for more than half a century. Later, when a provincial incorporation was made, the firm name was established as "W. C. Macdonald Reg'd., Incorporated." For the past several years, the company has been known by this title, but the full title was felt to be too cumbersome, hence the simplification which has just been announced.

TESTED HOME MADE DRINKS

Black Currant Acid.

Take 5 oz. tartaric acid, pour over it 2 quarts of boiling water, let it stand until cool. Have 10 quarts of black currants, well mashed, and pour the acid over it; let it stand 2 or 3 days, stirring every day. Then squeeze through a coarse towel and put 1 lb. granulated sugar to every pint of juice and stir until sugar is dissolved. Bottle and tie a piece of butter-muslin over each bottle while it is uncorked. Allow it to stand a week or two, then cork it. When ready for use, fill one-third of tumbler with crushed ice and the acid, and about two-thirds with water.

Tea Cup.

Have 2 quarts, more or less, of tea ready. Place a large plate of strawberries in a punch bowl, with plenty of sugar. Add the tea after half an hour. (Or use a pineapple as fruit, if in season). Add to taste sodawater or white wine.

Raspberry Vinegar.

Put 1 lb. of fine large fresh fruit into a large bowl; pour upon it 1 quart of best white wine vinegar. Next day strain the liquor on to a fresh pound of raspberries, and on the following day repeat the same process with a fresh pound of fruit. Do not squeeze the fruit, only drain the liquor off as dry as you can. The last time of straining pass it through a linen bag, previously wet with vinegar to prevent waste. Put this in a stone jar with 1 lb. of sugar to every pint of juice. Stir until well dissolved, then put the jar into a kettle of water on the stove, where the water will boil, until the vinegar becomes scalding hot. When cold, bottle it. Be careful not to use any glazed or metal vessel.

To serve: Take 2 oz. raspberry vinegar, 1 tablespoonful sugar, and fill up in an 8 oz. glass with soda water.

Black Grape Acid.

Take 5 oz. tartaric acid, pour over it 2 quarts of boiling water, let it stand until cool. Have 10 quarts of black outdoor grapes, well mashed, and pour the acid over it; let it stand two or three days in a stone jar, stirring every day. Then squeeze through a coarse hair sieve, and put 1 lb. granulated sugar to every quart of juice and stir until sugar is dissolved. Bottle and tie a piece of butter-muslin over each bottle while it is uncorked. Allow it to stand a week or two, then cork it. When ready for use, fill one-third of tumbler with crushed ice and the acid, and about two-thirds with water.

Fresh Currant Water.

Take a quart of fresh currants, and squeeze them through a sieve; add 2 large spoonfuls of powder sugar and 1 lemon, the rest water. Strain it through a sieve, and it will be ready for use. This might also be made with currant jelly if the fresh currants are not procurable.

Fruit Punch.

Ingredients: 1 tablespoonful tea, 1 lb. sugar, 3 oranges, 5 bananas, 2 quarts boiling water, 6 lemons, 1 pineapple, 1 pint strawberries.

Steep the tea in the boiling water for 10 minutes, then strain and add the sugar, stirring until thoroughly dissolved. Then grate the rinds of the lemons and extract the juice. Cut the oranges into slices. Shred the pineapple with a fork and slice the bananas very thin. Pick off the stems of the strawberries. When the tea is cold, add all the fruit, and let it stand in the ice-chest for several hours. Place a cube of ice in the punch bowl, pouring the mixture round it. If desired, 1 cup of maraschino or other cherries may be added. Serve in punch glasses.

Orangeade.

Squeeze the juice of 8 oranges and 2 lemons, and put aside. Take 3 cups of water and 2 cups of sugar, and boil them together for 10 minutes. When cold, add the above fruit juice. Put as much as is agreeable to the taste into glasses of crushed ice and serve.

Ginger Nectar.

Mix a tablespoonful of sugar with half a teaspoonful of best giner. Pour half cupful of boiling water on to it, then allow it to boil for 1 minute. When cold, add half a cupful of iced water. Put into this half a teaspoonful of carbonate of soda, and drink while effervescing.

Egg Malted Milk.

Take 1 tablespoonful of malted milk powder and 1½ tablespoonfuls of crushed fruits, 1 egg, 20 drops of acid phosphate, 1 tablespoonful of pounded ice, three-quarters cup of iced water. First mix the milk powder with crushed fruit, then add the egg when well beaten. Drop in the acid phosphate; strain and add the iced water or cold carbonated water and ice, with a grating of nutmeg over the top.

Milk Sherbet.

Make a strong lemonade, say with 5 lemons and 3 cups of sugar to 2 quarts of water. Add the grated rind of a lemon. Now pour on a quart of milk. This makes a little over 3 quarts.

Tea Punch.

Pour boiling lemonade over tea-leaves, in the quantity required, and sweeten to taste. When cold, strain it and serve in tall glasses of crushed ice and slices of lemon.

Boston Cream.

Take 4 quarts of cold water, 4 lbs. of white sugar; make this into a syrup. When cold, add 4 oz. tartaric acid, half oz. essence of lemon, and the whites of 6 eggs, beaten stiff. Bottle in air-tight jars. Pour about an inch of this mixture in a glass of cold water, which will form a delicious and refreshing drink.

CHLORINE GAS WILL NOT CURE

City Health Department Abandons Army Treatment as Worthless.

FOUND DANGEROUS

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—The chlorine gas treatment for colds, whooping cough and certain other respiratory diseases, which has been developed by scientists of the Chemical Warfare Service of the United States Army and heralded in many popular articles and scientific articles as a great success, was an unqualified failure in the experience of the Health Department of New York City, according to an official report the other day.

The Health Department opened chlorine clinics in this city to investigate the claims which were made by Lieut.-Col. Edward B. Vedder and Captain Harold P. Sawyer of the Army Medical Corps Association. In these clinics 671 patients were treated. In Riverside Hospital the chlorine was used for whooping cough. The Health Department failed to obtain favorable results and reported alarmingly bad results in two cases of asthma. The report, which was made by Dr. Louis I. Harris, Director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said:

"The two chlorine clinics established by the Commissioner were in full operation on June 1 and were continued until Aug. 1, 1924. The device employed at one of the clinics was of the type illustrated in the paper published by Vedder and Sawyer. In order to more thoroughly test the merits of the claims made for chlorine gas treatment, a different type of apparatus was employed in our second clinic. It was claimed that the latter automatically controlled the amount of chlorine released. It was our good fortune to have Col. Vedder visit the Chelsea clinic on two distinct occasions to observe and to comment on our work. We profitted greatly by his suggestions. Through the valuable co-operation of the engineers representing the respective companies which loaned us the machines for liberating chlorine gas, we maintained a concentration which complied as nearly as possible with the requirements set forth by Vedder and Sawyer.

"The hold which this method of treatment had obtained on the popular mind and the publicity which the newspapers were good enough to give our work brought 706 applicants for treatment. A number of these were rejected upon examination as being cases that did not fall within the classification advised by Vedder and Sawyer. With few exceptions, the cases that were admitted were first examined by medical members of the staff of our respective clinics to establish a diagnosis, and to record the facts which furnish our basis for judgment of the results. We were careful to exclude from this treatment cases of hay fever and tuberculosis. Our experience in treating thirteen individuals who had asthma gave us cause for alarm in at least two instances, and led us to the conclusion that it was dangerous and that it would be therefore unwise to admit other cases. Similar reasons determined our exclusion of cases of pulmonary tuberculosis.

"Shortly after our experimental work was begun, we instituted a follow-up method in order to ascertain from each of the patients who had been treated, whether they had been cured or in any way benefited, so that we might be able to make as accurate an appraisal as possible of the merits of the treatment. We received 506 letters from the 671 patients who suffered from respiratory disease whom we had treated. We also received thirty-five reports from persons suffering from asthma, hay fever, sinusitis or deafness. There were also eighteen cases of whooping cough treated. The total number reported upon was 559 cases.

"For obvious public health reasons we entered upon this test with enthusiasm and hope that it would yield successful results. However, the clinics were closed on Aug. 1, because popular interest in the treatment had practically ceased. It is contended by some that the public is demanding chlorine treatment, and this argument is urged as an excuse for buying apparatus with which to give the treatment. We have found no such popular demand; nor do we believe that a mere demand of the people should lead us to give a treatment for which, as yet, there has been no scientific warrant. Vedder and Sawyer claimed most excellent results notwithstanding the fact that most of their patients had but a single treatment. In our service a very decided majority had received two or more treatments on successive days. Whereas Vedder and Sawyer reported 71.4 per cent. of their patients cured, we found only 6.5 per cent. of our 506 patients cured. We cannot attach very much importance to the 53 per cent. of cases that reported improvement.

"If the studies of other observers should bring forth results that approximate the percentage of cures claimed by Vedder and Sawyer, the latter will richly deserve applause and commendation, nor will we be tardy in acclaiming their achievement. So far as we have gone we regret that we have not been able to confirm the results reported by Vedder and Sawyer. On the contrary, we deem their claims to be unjustfied and deprecate the large and unwarranted claims which have appeared in some places and which have been inspired by those interested in the sale of devices for administering this treatment.

"We were, of course, particularly interested in the report on the effects of the treatment in nine cases of whooping cough, on the basis of which Vedder and Sawyer gave it as their opinion that chlorine gas is distinctly curative in this disease. Aside from two undoubted cures, they found that one or two treatments caused vomiting, to cease and reduced the paroxysms greatly in force and number.

"Eighteen cases of whooping cough under care at the Riverside Hospital of the Department of Health were studied together with twelve central cases. Twenty treatments of one hour duration each were given at daily intervals to these eighteen cases. There was no appreciable difference noted after the first five treatments. Thereafter, the frequency of the paroxysms abated slowly from an average of twenty-five per day per case to an average of twelve a day at the end of twenty treatments.

"However, the frequency and force of paroxysms diminished in practically equal measure among the twelve control cases that were under observation On the basis of a larger experience than that on which Vedder and Sawyer made their claims, we must conclude that the treatment was entirely without effect in whooping cough.

"Surprising enough, three out of eight cases of sinusitis claimed improvement, as did also three out of thirteen cases of asthma that were under our care. Remission in symptoms is not infrequent in these diseased. Three of our asthma cases became decidedly worse under treatment. We would emphatically caution against the use of this gas in asthma. Of ten cases of hay fever that we treated, two became worse, none was improved. Four persons suffered from deafness pleaded to be allowed to take the treatment; none was improved and one felt worse after treatment.

"The Commissioner of Health will not permit his medical staff to relax in their watchfulness as to the results obtained by others who may study this subject. Until and unless others can properly verify the claims of Vedder and Sawyer, we are constrained by our experience, to refuse our endorsement."

THE COUGH OR COLD That Settles on the Lungs Is Hard to Get Rid of

These are the kin dthat are dangerous; the kind that weaken the lungs, the kind that allow the germs of consumption to get a foothold in the system.

Mr. John E. Luloff, Golden Lake, Ont., writes:—"Last year I had a cold, and a cough which seemed to stick on my chest. I tried different preparations, but they did not seem to help me any. I was advised, by a friend, to try and when I had taken a few doses I began to feel that it was doing me good, so I kept at it and inside of a week I was relieved of my trouble."

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past 35 years; you don't experiment when you buy it; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FABLES ON HEALT

"Getting to be chilblain weather", sighed Mr. Mann of Anytown, rubbing his feet as he came home through the first sleety day.

"Well," said Mrs. Mann, "I'd better be fixing up some of that home-made chilblain stuff."

There is nothing more annoying than this trouble in winter and there are a number of easily prepared remedies that generally are effective.

Thus some people take equal parts of white vinegar, turpentine and an egg, shaking them together in a bottle. Rub this on gently.

Many declare this to be a sure cure; alive oil, spirits of turpentine, aqua ammonia and one-fourth of an ounce of peppermint. Mix this and anoint every night and morning.

Also keep the feet dry and try to avoid sudden changes of temperature.

SMOKERS.

Jail sentences or fines are dealt out to nearly 100 men arrested in New York City for smoking in factory and other buildings in violation of fire-prevention laws.

The man who thinks prohibition of tobacco would be impossible might ponder this incident. If smoking in factories can be stopped, so can smoking in homes or anywhere else.

PATIENTS WORK IN FACTORY WHILE REGAINING HEALTH

Plant Run by Committee for Jewish Tuberculous Enables Convalescents to Labor Such Hours as Their Recovery Warrants.

A factory, recently formally opened after several years of operation, is operated wholly by convalescent tuberculosis patients, who earn part of their support while regaining their health. It is one of the activities of the Committee for the Care of the Jewish Tubercular, of which Fred M. Stein is the Chairman.

On week days, in New York, when the machines are whirring, it presents a gay and colorful picture. The materials over which the operatives bend—it is a needle shop—are many hued. Baskets are piled high with goods that would make any woman stop and look. On a long table a bolt of cloth is being stretched out and carefully laid layer upon layer to await the cutter's electric knife, while the finished product, or at least samples of it, hangs in a press at one end of the room, ready for exhibition. There are garments, white ones, blue ones, pink and yellow ones, and there are smocks and jackets, too, but that is getting a leap ahead of the story.

In this factory of good cheer work is run on a novel basis. It is a prescription. If there is a time clock—and it is to be presumed that there is one—it is for the purpose of keeping the employe at his job a limited amount of time instead of full time.

The hundred men and women occupied in the "health" factory—located in the upper regions of the Bronx, where sunshine and fresh air are not at a premium—are passing through a stage of what might be termed industrial convalescence. Under supervision of doctor and nurse they are gradually fitting themselves to become again a part of the normal social structure. They are bridging over the months that it takes for the average patient who has been discharged from a hospital to regain his vitality so that he may shoulder the responsibility of a full-time job without injury to himself.

The originator of the idea was Mr Stein. About fourteen years ago he retired from active business to devote his entire leisure to his hobby, social service. He already knew much of the problems bred in city tenements, for he had been closely as ociated with the Federated Hebrew Charities and was a director of the Montefiore Hospital. His attention was attracted to the ill fate of the discharged patient, particularly to the tuberculous. Many were confirmed hypochondriacs; others, in the attempt to support their families, returned to their old jobs, which in most cases were injurious to their health. Most of these unfortunates, through no fault of their own, usually broke down in a comparatively short time, finding themselves at the point from which they started, or worse.

Job Adds to Confidence.

He appealed for help and found it forthcoming from a group of men representing the Free Synogogue, the United Hebrew Charities and the Montefiore Hospital. Sufficient funds were provided to carry on the work he desired to do for three years. Statistics were gathered which showed that 50 per cent. of the discharged tuberculous patients who returned to the tenement had a relapse within from six months to a year and a half if they attempted to work at an eight-hour-a-day job.

The first three years' work of the Committee for the Care of the Jewish Tuberculous drew to a close with a definite plan in view. The factory became a fact. In the meantime the committee had not confined its efforts to the discharged patient only; it had been concerned with the reconstruction of the family unit. It had established its own clinic to look after the health of every member from the grandmother to the baby. The committee assumed paternal rights over the home it was reconstructing. Financial support was supplied when necessary. If the flat occupied by those for whom it was caring was unwholesome they were packed up bodily and moved to better quarters. Such ones of the family as were without employment were helped to find suitable places.

In many instances the patient who has come under the care of the committee is or had been the breadwinner for his family. His inability to carry his normal responsibilities has broken his spirit. Thus it becomes of vital importance to restore his self-respect and his faith in his ability to earn. If, up to the time he enters the workshop, his family has been receiving a regular weekly allowance, a portion equal to his wage is deducted from the toal sum, so that he is made to realize that the fruit of his labor is contributing to the support of his wife and children. His weekly pay envelope is divided into two portions, part his cash earnings, the equivalent of the standard wage for tasks performed, the remainder representing the subsidy provided for his family income.

Guard Against Infection.

The committee of men back of the organization has seen to it that every precaution was taken to guard against infection. When the factory received an order for blouses for the army, naval and military medical specialists inspected it and pronounced that hygienically the plant was perfect.

Mention has been made of the fact that at the start operatives are employed from two to three hours a day. If at the end of a week they show that they can stand a longer session without injury their time allotment is increased. This method is followed until a full day is reached. The worker is kept on at that rate for at least six months and never more than a year. The average duration of employment in the "health" factory is three years.

The factory was constructed at a cost of $150,000, $100,000 of which was donated by the United Building Fund, a portion of the remaining $50,000 by private donations. There is still $30,000 to be raised, according to Mr. Stein. In 1923 the factory sales amounted to about $140,000 and the wages paid to about $40,000. The committee expended in subsidies to keep up the family income some $23,000.

"In the undertaking we have carried on up to the present time we have concerned ourselves only with the tuberculous," said Mr. Stein. "We tackled the most difficult problem at the start and have proven that it can be successfully carried out. I hope soon to turn our attention to the cardiacs—those suffering from heart disease. Then we might branch out to the mentally deficient and to those afflicted with chronic diseases, for whom we could arrange permanent employment. I am convinced that we could help many of life's handicapped back to a normal self-respecting existence."

M. Stein's venture has obtained the support of organized labor. All work is paid by the piece at slightly above the union scale.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

ALL EARTHQUAKES LAID TO LEAKAGE OF OCEAN

Theory Explains Also the Great Moutain Ridges Along the Pacific and the Corresponding Deeps Close to Shore, Says Captain See.

Nature's well-guarded secret explaining the terrible earth convulsions that intervals rock parts of our globe is at last been discovered, according Captain Thomas J. J. See, Professor Mathematics in the Navy and overnment Astronomer at the Mare land naval base.

Captain See declares that the ocean eakage theory of earthquakes, of which e is said to be the originator, is virtually proved. With the discovery he is not able to go far, however, toward a system for predicting the time and location of earthquakes or for counteracting their effects beyond advising that only strong steel and concrete reinforced buildings be erected in areas subject to their frequent visitation.

In an address before the Commonwealth Club in San Francisco, Captain See asserted that observations conducted by him in the last eighteen years had supplied confirmatory data for the theory of ocean leakage which he advanced after the San Francisco earthquake in 1906. That theory, in brief, is that a seepage of water through the ocean bed into faults or softer portions of the earth's crust, coming into contact with the heated interior of the earth, is converted into steam or causes the molten lava to expand, with the result that readjustments occur beneath the crust, the effect being a trembling of the earth on the surface. The same process, Captain See says, has formed the great mountain chains and the high plateaus about the ocean border, as in the famous World Ridge which surrounds the Pacific and Indian Oceans.

Old Notions Corrected.

At the time of the great California disaster of 1906, says the naval astronomer, earthquakes were improperly divided into two classes, "volcanic" and "tectonis," without any recognized connection between these two classes of phenomena, the volcanic activity being associated with the explosive power of steam and the tectonic erroneously assigned to the shrinkage of the earth.

The only difference between tectonic and volcanic earthquakes, he asserts, is that in the volcanic a vent already exists for the escape of vapor into the atmosphere, while in the tectonic the forces are relieved by adjustment of the blocks of the earth's crust without a visible eruption. While this makes a difference in the appearance of the two classes of earthquakes, the cause is said to be everywhere the same, namely, ocean leakage.

The theory impressed itself on Capt. See in his observations of the Andes range of mountains. He noticed, in 1906, that the Andes resembled a mighty wall along the ocean border, while exactly parallel was a great depth in the ocean along the west coast of South America, as if the mountains had been lifted by some giant excavator from the depths of the sea and placed on the edge of the land. It was natural to ask whether that was not the very thing that had occurred, and to seek the methods employed by the excavator—Nature.

Captain See quotes the remark of Humboldt of long ago that "the Andes form the grandest mountain system in the world: 4,400 miles long, everywhere high and impressive and exactly parallel to the seashore, as if laid down by a mapmaker." Accordingly, if any mountain system of the world could be expected to disclose by its location the process of formation, Captain See assumed that it would be the Andes.

He remarks that while the Himalaya Mountains are higher, they are shorter, not more than 1,500 miles long, less simple in themselves and in their location in respect to the sea. He assumes that though the sea is now more distant and not parallel to the Himalayas, it was once closer and parallel, "when deep sea trenches occupied the present valleys of the Ganges and Bumapatra Rivers, and likewise the valley of the Indus to the west."

In seeking to explain the origin of the Andes, Captain See made a study of the seismic sea waves frequently observed along the west coast of South America as a possible indication of the movement of lava beneath the crust of the globe. This proof of the movement of lava he judged to be necessary for getting at the real cause of earthquakes and definitely referring it to ocean leakage.

The great earthquakes and seismic sea waves in the disasters ot Arica, 1868, and Iquique, 1877, are cited. In both instances the cities were shaken down by terrible commotions lasting four or five minutes, and some twenty minutes after the earthquake the sea was observed to be draining away, withdrawing slowly from the land, so that ships anchored in six or seven fathoms of water rested on the bottom, helpless to move. Half an hour later the sea returned as a mighty wave, fifty or sixty feet high, sweeping everything before it.

Land Pushed Up.

From these observations and his studies along other lines, Captain See gives his conclusions as follows:

"In the expulsion of lava from under the sea it pushes generally toward the continent, because steam saturates the lava under the sea, but not under the land; and in this agitation for the readjustment of the underlying molten rock the crust opens along cracks and the blocks of the earth's crust are so displayed that a fault moves, maybe, several hundred feet vertically.

"Sometimes the coast is uplifted visibly—as in the great Chilean earthquakes of 1822 and 1835, the latter disturbance being only a few years before Darwin's voyage in the Beagle, 1838; and as occurred at Yakutat Bay, Alaska, 1899, where the coast was uplifted for 100 miles, as the maximum 47 1-3 feet, so that photographs could be taken of the barnacles still sticking to the rocks at this elevation above the sea level.

"Under the deep sea, however, the movement of the blocks of the crust often is downward, for the support is undermined when the lava surges toward the land, and thus a section of the sea bottom as large as a county or a small State may sink several hundred feet, and thereby depress the sea level over the sunken area.

"This sinking of the sea bottom causes the water to rush in on all sides, to fill up the surface depression; the level at the neighboring seashore is lowered at the neighboring seashore is lowered by this draining away of the sea, leaving ships stranded and helpless. When the onrushing water meets at the centre of the depression, the sea level is raised into a mound several hundred feet high, which slowly collapses, and thus sends a mighty wave ashore to wash the stranded ships inland.

"The sea, once set in oscillation by this mighty process, may again withdraw from the shore, and return in the form of waves, a second, a third or a fourth time, until the disturbance is gradually destroyed by friction. This undoubtedly is the true explanation of the type of seism's sea waves observed at Africa, 1868, at Iquique, 1877,and at Yakutat Bay, Alaska, 1899.

"The theory thus outlined is verified by the very deep holes in the sea bottom west of Africa, and by the deep trench in the sea bottom just south of the Aleutian Islands and east of Japan, in which places the earthquakes and the sea waves are very terrible.

Nature at Work.

"In the Aleutian Islands we have obviously a mountain chain in formation, with the islands as peaks projecting their heads above water. The trench south of the Aleutians is more than 4,000 fathoms deep; it is sinking into a beautiful valley, and after long geological ages the south side of this trench will be folded up to give another range of mountains parallel to the Aleutian chain. Accordingly, in time, the North Pacific Ocean will have two mighty mountain chains folded parallel, near the shore, and with a deep valley between them.

"Not long after I published this explanation of the formation of mountains in parallel ranges in the Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia, 1906-08, I vongratulatory letter from the celebrated Italian astronomer, Professor G. V. Schiaparelli of Milan, who wrote that he had never before been able to understand the process by which mountains were formed in parallel ranges, as so often occurs in the Andes.

"Here is further proof of the mighty process operating throughout our globe, west coast of South America—we have the giant range of the Andes and the Andean Plateau.

"Then go on up the west coast of North America, where we find the Rocky Mountains and the Sierras parallel to the sea, and the great Western plateau, connected with the North American mountain system.

"We then go down the east coast of Asia and follow the western extension parallel to the Indian Ocean, and finally go down the east coast of Africa. Thus we traverse the highest mountains and plateaus of the globe—the Himalayas and the great Plateau of Tibet in Asia, and the high mountains and tablelands of East Africa, corresponding to the east of the Pacific already described.

"It is thus a most impressive fact in the constitution of the globe that the shoe, is called the World Ridge. It is the highest part of the earth, and it everywhere surrounds the Pacific Ocean, which is the Water Hemisphere.

"The formation of mountains by ocean leakage is confirmed by other considerations. It is well known that marine shells are found in the Andes at an elevation of 15,000 feet; the rocks in which they exist have therefore been elevated since these strata were in the sea bottom: and the only forces to produce such uplifts are the earthquake forces, which actually are found to produce such uplifts as were observed after the great earthquakes in Chile (1822, and at Yakutat Bay, Alaska (1899) and at many other places.

"The dinosaurs, brontosaurs and other reptiles of similar type once existed in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah in great numbers. It is recognized that they lived in lagoons and swamps, in fresh or brackish water, and thus along the edge of the sea, not in plateaus, where their fossils are now found.

"The American Museum of Natural History, New York, under expeditions conducted by Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews in the plateau of Mongolia, in the Desert of Gobi, found about two dozen fossil dinosaur eggs. They were at a distance of 1,500 or 2,000 miles from the sea shore, Mis shows that the sea has receded since the age of the dinosaurs.

"Thus, as North America has been broadened westward and been uplifted into mountains and plateaus by the Pacific Ocean, so also the continent of Asia has been broadened eastward and uplifted into the present mountains of the Himalayas and the plateaus of Tibet and Mongolia by the Pacific and Indian Oceans. The continent has been uplifted and the oceans narrowed with the lapse of millions of years.

"All active volcanoes are within about 100 miles of the sea. If further inland volcanoes gradually die out, evidently for lack of sufficient water to keep the active eruptions going."

FABLES ON HEALTH

Most people, if they are in normal health, want to eat.

But few could tell you just what food does, and if they knew what this body engine had to accomplish they might be a little more careful of how they used it.

Now the life engines are given food, much as other engines get fuel and for two reasons: To repair the tissues and to furnish a source of energy. In the case of the growing youths it acts for growth as well as for repair.

The body is constantly producing heat, like all engines. Energy is its final output.

Now food already contains chemical energy which holds the atoms together. When taken into the body the processes are such that some of this energy is stored and released in the form of work, movement heat, etc.

Anything taken into the body that cannot thus be utilized is valueless, and hence does not constitute food. And it is the duty of the individual to give himself those foods that have energy creating value.

DALY SECURED CONTROL STOCK

Trial of R. P. Gough Continued To-day—Why Haney Resigned.

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press). —R. P. Gough, who was vice-president and director of the defunct Home Bank which failed in August, 1923, again took the stand in his own defence in the County Criminal Court this morning, where he is being tried on charges of making and concurring in false statements of the bank's financial affairs to the Dominion Government. He was taken through the maize of the bank's entanglements by W. N. Tilley, his counsel. Many bank transactions he endeavored to justify and others he declared he knew nothing about until there had been investigations after the failure. Gough explained the inside reason for the retirement of M. J. Haney as president and his succession by the late H. J. Daly. According to Gough, the late Mr. Daly succeeded in getting the controlling interest in the stock of the bank, and Haney finding this out, resigned. "Daly was gunning for Haney," said Gough emphatically.

R. P. Gough, before Judge Emerson Coatsworth, this morning told the court about his connection with the British Columbia Timber Limits owned by the institution on the Malahat Limit. Mr. Gough said he had consulted experts and became convinced the limits were worth 25 per cent. more than the value placed on them. The Home Bank director then dealt with the Frost account, stating that unpaid interest was not taken into the bank profits. He was not aware that the interest on the Western Canada Pulp and Paper Company was taken into the profits until after the bank's suspension. Regarding the New Orleans Railway, he understood that $25,000 a year was being taken into the bank's profits and the rest was being sent back to the railway for betterments.

The Pellatt loan was under consideration when he joined the board Mr. Gough declared.

Mr. Gough thought the bank was justified in taking interest on this account into profits. The figures showed, he stated that much of the interest had been paid as well as a large portion of the principal, and that was his justification for his willingness to allow interest to be placed into the profits.

"Did you know General Mason was speculating with the Pellatt firms?" Gough was asked.

"No, I did not," was the reply.

Gough said Barnard cheques which had been dishonored had been brought to his attention. The board was immediately called together. "There were wigs on the green," declared the witness. "I wanted Barnard's resignation, and even suggested other means. Barnard was asked to leave room."

Mr. Gough testified that he was told his attitude was wrong. Z. A. Lash, K.C., advised keeping Barnard on the board and taking all the securities he could provide and making him work out the problem. Witness said he then changed his attitude and came to the same viewpoint as the other directors.

CHARLES COOK ELECTED HEAD KIWANIS CLUB

Jack Marshall and Executive Given Hearty Vote of Thanks for 1924 Work.

NEW OFFICERS.

Dr. John Craig is Vice-President and John A. McKone District Trustee.

Cigars were the order of the hour at Kiwanis luncheon today when the presidential election result was announced. The treat was on Charlie Cook.

And when the box of Havanas reached Joseph Wearing, a non-smoker, the newly-elected president positively refused to supply a chocolate bar instead.

There were forty-two members present for the annual election, and the following officers were chosen:

President—Charlie Cook.
Vice-President—Dr. John J. Craig.
District Trustee—John A. McKone.
Treasurer—Jack Jeffries.
Secretary—Hugh Niven.
Executive—J. Wells Fraser; Walter Oke; Joseph Johns; Isaac McNabb, Dr. Ed. Wood; Joseph Wearing, and Dr. G. R. Scott.
Auditors — Charlie Cummer and Carl Brown.

Votes of Thanks.

Lloyd Hamilton, who anticipates heavy fines under the new president's strict regime, moved a vote of thanks to the retiring president and executive, and supported by Jack McNabb. Dr. Ed. Wood, a member of last year's Executive, passed the bouquet to the President, Jack Marshall, and to Charlie Cook, chairman of the executive.

The scrutineers, J. J. Turner, Walter Stock and Charlie Cummer, were given a vote of thanks for their work.

Christmas Cheer.

J. Wells Fraser suggested that co-operation should be sought between the several organizations supplying Christmas needs and gifts to needy families, in order that there should be no over-lapping or omissions.

President Jack Marshall explained that the aim of Kiwanis Club will be to pick up the loose ends at Christmas, helping where other organizations have missed, and that Kiwanis main efforts will be directed towards giving help later in the winter.

Welcome Back Members.

A hearty welcome was extended to Kiwanians, John W. Meyers and Herb. Gilmour, who have been absent from the luncheon through illness. John Meyers expressed in feeling tones his appreciation of the kindnesses shown by the club during his illness and convalescence.

Rotarian Fred. Colwell of Sherbrooke, Que., was welcomed, and entertained the club in singing and impersonations.

PETES DECIDE TO STAY SENIOR

The Peterboro Hockey Club players definitely decided this afternoon to remain in the Senior series of the O.H.A., and will be grouped with Parkdale, Aura Lee, Varsity and Hamilton Rowing Club. The club will also operate Intermediate and Junior teams, the former having a bye in the first round.

WHY SOME STORES OPEN IN EVENING

By-laws Regulate Certain Classes and Are Enforced by the Police.

Many persons have enquired why it is that some stores are open late in the evenings at this season while others close at the usual hour, and The Examiner to-day obtained an explanation from the Police Department. Under the bylaws invoked or acquiesced in by the merchant themselves, shoe stores, grocery stores, hardware stores and drygoods stores must close at stated times under penalties; butcher shops have a private agreement as to hours; and novelty stores are not bound by any by-law or agreement.

The bylaws permit the stores to defer their regulation remaining open on the four evenings preceding Christmas, so that any store in the city may do business on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week up to a late hour.

In the meantime there are several stores in the city in which the main business is dealing in novelties, and these have been open legally this week.

SEASONG'S REETINGS

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co's telegram blank for this Christmas shows a very ornate upper section. Over a third of the top is devoted to an ornamental design that is centred with two joined hemispheres, the golden five-pointed star of Christmas shedding its rays on both. On either side are tall, snow-encrusted telegraph posts, joined by gilded wires. At the left a train runs through a winter scene and on the left are snow topped fir trees. Branches of holly in bright reds and greens form a decoration, with "Season's Greetings" in large gilt letters at the bottom of the design.

There is a Brunswick to suit every purse. The three models shown above, despite their low prices, are fully equipped with the famous Brunswick Method of Reproduction which gives the finest, natural tones from all records.

Each one has the All-Wood Oval Horn, the 3-in-1 Ultona and the Brunswick-built silent motor.

Each one is built entirely in the Brunswick Cabinet Shops by skilled Brunswick craftsmen with all that painstaking care for which Brunswick craftsmen have been noted these 80 years.

Yes—you CAN afford to give your family the gift of all the world's music as only the Brunswick can play it.

One of the many reasons for the Brunswick's outstanding popularity today is, that notwithstanding its manifest superiority, it costs no more than ordinary phonographs.

Voice Of The People

THE HIDDEN TREASURES AND WHAT THEY ARE.

The Thief of Bagdad, by Ahmed Abdullah, is, no doubt, the most classis story seen in print and screen of to-day, and must have awakened in the younger generation the tremendous truth which the writer so dramatically with his creative imagination painted. That little treasure box which is hidden in a cloak of invisibility, and is at the bottom of that dark sea of misery, is nothing else but the key or reason why all those souls are in misery. And just the same as children in school are in misery if they don't know what they should. So are the grown-ups, or big children, in misery if they don't know why. There have been thousands like the Thief of Bagdad, that found that treasure and the peace farmer found it too. Our preachers got lost in that garden of peace, or sea of misery, and failed to come back. And those poisonous monsters, that brave men have conquered, are still here. They are those invisible powers like class hatred, conceit, etc. And the sword those men used is the sword of the naked truth. Not only can any mother's little boy climb to the equal of a motor king, oil king, lard king, etc., but he can climb to the equal of a king of humanity of reason, like a Christ.

It is quite easy for any pupil to learn more than his school teacher knows, and the same with the grown-ups, to know more than their preacher knows. Just as soon as you let God teach you you will start to climb. That magic rope that comes so handy for climbing out of trouble is not only a popular contrivance of the Far East; it works, too, in the Far West. It is a kind of an organization with some of them higher up, and when one of that organization falls into trouble, those higher up throw down that rope so he can climb out. That magic chrystal or the eye of that goddess, is nothing else but the description of what some people call God's eye, and some call evil eye. And any man can possess that if he wants to. If he trains his eye to see a little bit beyond the first appearance, and once you have that ability, that strips everything of its mask or cloak. You live in a new world, everything looks different, and you will naturally call those that cannot see quite so far narrow-minded.

That flying mat is nothing else but your bed. You do not need to be a kind magician to make that mat work and you can do all kinds of travelling among strange lands and strange people. You can do all this while your body is getting overhauled for the struggles of to-morrow. And that magical fruit that can bring life or death is nothing else but he same cure that Christ gave to his patients. It's the cure for your mind. If your mind is not properly balanced or deranged, your body will show the effects of it. And most diseases start in your mind. Physically, our medical men are a wonderful success, but spiritually or mentally they are not. Of course, that is not their profession; it is the preachers that cure the mind or spirit.

Christ knew those weeds which the people had in their hearts. Hatred, jealousy, etc., grow like burdocks, and poison not only the mind but their body too. And to keep those weeds down you can develop the antidote something stronger, and that is love. If a man's mind is not evenly balanced he is unreasonable, or like the doctors say, if one man kills another, partly insane. That is right enough. But if a man is really sane—in other words, has a perfectly balanced mind—there are a whole lot of other things that he would not do either. When people are not quite sure if a thing is right, they say time will tell. Well, time has told over and over again. And it would be pretty near time to take more interest in the general public instead of taking more interest out of the general public. Everything you buy, either an automobile or food or cloth, represents a certain amount of honest labour, the honest labour that it took to produce or manufacture, distribute and sell. But the price you pay, and what the article really costs untill it is retailed, don't compare reasonably. Unreasonable people and unreasonable prices compare far better. And unreasonable people have unreasonable laws too. If the majority of people were reasonable you could save billions of dollars which are wasted with the present system. Just as soon as you quit to protect the sharks and instead protect the sheep with your law, will your dollar come back to the gold or old-time standard. Honest labour means capital, and crooked labor means golden calve. Honest labor builds a country up; crooked labor destroys a country. Those political warriors that were using all kinds of the black arts and were real specialists in raising class hatred and other evils, while they were leading their country step by step backwards till they got them in the present state, cannot boast enough of the ability of statesmanship, even if they were highly respectable and educated men. A little knowledge is dangerous, and just enough knowledge to make a fat living of other people is hardly enough in this world. If they knew a little more they would not do that. It is no use to struggle against the mighty hand of God. The big Christ mass is going to come anyway with a majority of reasonable people. We have been singing "Oh, Kingdom Come" long enough. Now it is coming in reality. With every man a king and every woman a queen.

Let your heart boil up with passion
Let your fists grow hard like steel,
And then, with love, control your fire,
and control your forces too.
Christ, he had tremendous passions
and tremendous powers too;
But with love he ruled his passions,
and His might He ruled so, too.
Fearless grew that king of passion, and his heart grew big and strong.
Not with fear, so will he guide you,
if you take his willing hand;
And will show you all the secrets which are in this wonderland.
One minute he could be gentle, and then again be hard like steel.
On the stars there stands in writing:
You shall hope, believe and like him.

To all the boys, my Christmas gift is: Conquer yourself, because no matter trade, profession or art you choose to make your own, you will only hen become a real master or king of that profession, when you have succeeded in conquering all your selfish desires The better you succeed the nearer you come to the Master. Remember that you are all princes and there is a mighty royal blood flowing in your veins and you all can and shall become real kings. Learn to make your fists be master, earn to saving an axe or pen, learn to do like all the masters. Learn to do a thing and learn it right. Learn to saving the mightiest weapon for your need in this world. Learn to drink a cup of bitter then you'll get the sugar too. Learn to ride that white big stallion; learn to rule the black one too. If your teachers tell you you are not learning, or he cannot teach you, your mind registers all the same. If the people don't understand you, it's only because they don't know a diamond until it is polished. And to the girls my Christmas gift is: Remember that you are all princesses and the same royal blood that God gives man is flowing and boiling in your hearts Let your spirit be your advisor. Don't be afraid when your prince asks you to step in his chariot, drawn by his wild horses of passions, because with you and your children in the chariot, he will learn to drive less reckless and become more fearless. And if that chariot is going at a terrifying speed, just stay with him when he is fearless; he won't fail you. Life is full of thrills and hidden treasures, and if you don't get the thrills or find those treasures it is only because you look on the wrong place. Explore yourself, and learn who and what you are yourself and that hidden treasure you carry around so unconsciously.

If you think right, that is silver. If you do it, that is gold.

What a pity, Admed Ahdnllah that you can't make dreams come true. But a white man that is different—he can think, and work it too. When that white winged, beautiful stallion brought us back to mother earth, I was ploughing among stones and found that little silver box full of those hard-earned seeds. And now I am making them work. There are some of those seeds in The Examiner to-day, and you can put them on your Christmas tree.

Sow those seeds and let them soak in;
Give them time to sprout and grow.
Then you'll see how all those princes
Raises big and white like snow.

A Royal Christmas I wish you all:
God will help, and help you all.

BAND WILL GREET JOLLY OLD SANTA

Bandmaster Robinson Will Have Salvation Army Band on Hand To-morrow Evening.

When Bandmaster George Robinsón of the Salvation Army Band read in yesterday's Evening Examiner that Santa Claus would visit Peterborough on Saturday, he immediately said he would be there with the band to head the procession down George street. He felt that so auspicious an occasion, with Santa being welcomed to the city by the Mayor, should not be passed over lightly.

The old boy in his fur-trimmed red coat will make his appearance at the Y.M.C.A., where the bright lights start, about half past six to-morrow evening. The Salvation Army band will be waiting there with His Worship Mayor Turner, and after Santa has been welcomed to the city the procession will move down George street. As the jolly old man who is so fond of doing kind deeds for others has not often received so great a welcome it is expected that he will be greatly pleased with the thoughtfulness of the bandmaster.

Boys and girls will be well advised to have supper early so that they may see this visitor, who usually steals in quietly but is this time to be given a right royal welcome.

STIRLING AND THE DISTRICT

Council Will Pass a Snow By-law—Election Gossip.

STIRLING, Dec. 19.—At the meeting of the Council this week the members were all present. Among other matters discussed was the snow by-law, and it was decided if the Council has the power to pass laws to make people shovel snow, it is their intention to do so. This means that the citizens will have to clean their walks. The financial statement prepared by the treasurer, Mr. T. G. Clute, was read, and the finances of the village were found to be in a good condition. The collector, Dr. M. W. Sine, made his report, which showed that of the total taxes for 1924 of over $19,000, there was only $511 uncollected to date.

There were some rumours that there would be an election for the Reeveship and possibly for other seats around the Council board, but such rumours have died away, and matters are quiet in that respect.

Factory Meetings.

The cheese factories in this section have begun holding their annual meetings, and next week will see the most of them over, and those interested will have been made happy for another season.

Mr. J. S. Marshall, the local cheese-box manufacturer, gave a successful banquet to his customers—the cheese-makers of the district—and his employees at his home on James Street last week.

Members of the village Council, also the Rev. Mr. Barrett, Messrs. J. D. Mills, manager of the local branch of the Montreal Bank, Mr. H. C. Martin, A. Donnell and Mr. Cornfoot, box manufacturer of Ingersoll, were guests as well.

The usual toasts were proposed and honoured, which showed that some of those present could not only make first class cheese but are speakers worthy of notice as well.

Mr. Marshall, in his address, stated that 5,000,000 pounds of cheese, valued at $750,000, had been turned out within a radius of 15 miles of Stirling this year. His box factory had made nearly 47,000 boxes during the season, which was considerably more than the previous record.

W.M.S.

The annual meeting of the W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Church was held at the home of Mrs. Harper Rollins. There was a good attendance, and the reports presented showed that good work had been done during the past year. Over $200 had been contributed by the members; the amount was slightly less than last year.

Mrs. Delia Cook.

The many friends of Mrs. Delia Cook were shocked when word came of her sudden passing in Bellcville Hospital, where she had been for the past ten weeks and was to have been brought home in a few days. The funeral was from her late residence last Friday.

Mrs. Dan Derry attended the funeral of her mother, Mrs. Van Meer, in Trenton one day last week.

Mr. Robert Good, who had lived in Rawdon Township all his life, passed away on Sunday morning. He had been a sufferer from rheumatism and heart trouble for several years. The funeral service was held at his late residence and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Barrett of the Methodist Church. The service at the burial was conducted by the Stirling Lodge, No. 239, I.O.O.F., of which he had been a member for over 30 years.

He leaves a widow, one son, William, at home, and three daughters, Mrs. David Thrasher, 3nd Con., Sidney; Mrs. Edgar Morrow, River Valley, Sidney; and Mrs. J. B. Thompson, near Stirling.

Mrs. George Bailey received a telephone message on Wednesday informing her of the death of her brother at North Port, Prince Edward County. He had undergone an operation for appendicitis.

Rev. Mr. Robertson, of Weston, was the preacher at St. Andrew's last Sunday and gave two heart-searching sermons.

Mr. James Watson, of Madoc, and Miss Helena Morton, third daughter of Mr. John S. Morton, surprised their friends by taking a trip to Tweed last Friday to be married, after which they left to spend their honeymoon in Toronto.

Mr. James Dounan visited his daughter, Mrs. Alfred Reid, in Trenton recently.

Mr. Charles Martin, Detroit, was in town attending the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Cook.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Green and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. McGee spent Sunday in Belleville visiting friends.

Miss Effie Kennedy, of Colborne, is staying with her sister, Mrs. Fred McKee, until after Christmas.

RECESS OF HOUSE STARTED TO-DAY

Action of Government May Cause Assassination or Terrorism.

LONDON, December 19. — The house of commons in accordance with the programme, began its holiday recess to-day, adjourning this afternoon until February 10.

During the proceedings preceding the adjournment, the question of the policy being pursued with regard to the emergency powers exercised in Bengal under vice-regal ordinance promulgated in October, was raised by John Scurr, the Labor member for Stepney, who said that the action of the government would encourage assassination or terrorism and anti-British feeling. He urged the Secretary for India to bring influence to bear on the government of India, a wiser course. Earl Winterton, under-secretary for India, replying to the member, while agreeing with him that the question was one of great importance, said Mr. Scurr was entirely mistaken in his judgment of the matter, and did not sufficiently realize the gravity of the situation confronting the Indian government, when the ordinance supplementing the ordinary criminal law was promulgated. The policy had been fully accepted by the Secretary of State in the Labor government, Earl Winterton declared. The member's charges were utterly baseless, the under-secretary insisted, and just the kind of a statement which might have far-reaching consequences in India.

Earl Winterton insisted the ordinance offered the only way in which the government could rigorously repress the methods of terrorism and murder with bomb and revolver.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir: In view of the fact that references have been made recently to prophetic utterances regarding the coming United Church of Canada, I am sure that your readers would be interested in an editorial by my late husband, Dr. J. A. Macdonald, which appeared in the Globe nearly twenty years ago:

"Church Union in Canada."

"The union of the Presbyterians, the Methodists and the Congregationalists in one organic Canadian church is within sight. It may take five years, it may take ten, but a movement is under way which logically, inevitably, purposefully, will lead those three great and historic branches of Protestantism in Canada into one organized church, with a common creed, a common name, and a common purpose. What the man in the street calls the logic of events what the man in the Church calls the leading of Divine Providence, has made the organic union of those three churches to appear first desirable and now practicable; and the same forces, sooner or alter—sooner it may be than even some of its advocates advocate—will carry it forward to its magnificent consummation. The growth of the evangelic spirit within the Churches, and the pressure of the religious and missionary problems from without, have combined to make union at once the truest statesmanship, the highest duty and the most imperative necessity, if the drift and current of materialism and irreligion are to be stemmed.

"This week's conference on Church Union, in which more than one hundred chosen representatives of the highest courts of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches met to take counsel and carry on negotiations, was one of the most epoch-making meetings ever held in Toronto. The official statement of that conference, published in the Globe to-day, is the most remarkable eccelsiastical document issued in Protestant Christendom since the reformation. Never before did the official representatives of three different denominations—different in their origins, in their traditions, and in their creedal documents—meet together in authoritative and deliberate council, and find in doctrine, in policy, in institutions, or in spirit no insuperable obstacle to organic union. That is the significant thing, the unprecedented thing, the marvellously inspiring thing.

"Close observation of the temper and quality of the discussions in this conference, both in the denominational sections and in the joint committee, and careful study of the draft statement which embodies the outlines upon which there was found general agreement, suggest not only the practicability of union, but also some of the characteristics which will mark the United Church. We venture to indicate the following features:

"(1) It will be a Church with a Creed. It will believe something Its belief will be positive, definite, vital. There will be no surrender of anything now held as essential in doctrine by any one of the three churches. The draft statement does not contain all that it is any man's privilege to believe, but it does contain all that any Presbyterian or Methodist or Congregationalist is under obligation to subscribe. . . Whatever may be its final form, the united Church will have a positive, evangelical, vital Creed.

"(2) It will be a Church democratic in its government. There will be no clerical domination. In the governing bodies ministers and laymen will be equally represented. The rights and liberties of individual members, ministers, and congregations will be constitutionally safeguarded.

"(3) It will be a Church with an educated Ministery. To many serious and informed students of national affairs this is a feature of the highest importance. The quality and efficiency of the ministry is not only the measure of the Church's strength, but also a prime factor in the stability of the State. . .

"(4) It will be a Church at once evangelic in spirit and national in outlook. The spirit of Christian unity and Christian loyalty working within the Churches has made the divisions and competitions of the Churches not only a burden but a grief to many great souls in all parts of Christendom. In Canada the continuance of all those divisions seems less defensible than in any other country. . .

"Canada led the way in the matter of denominational reunions. Presbyterianism, divided by the secessions and disruptions in Scotland, was re-united in 1875. Methodism, beginning with the divisions in England and the United States, was re-united in 1884. And now it would seem that once again Canada is to be first in the healing of those wider breaches which the controversies of the centuries have made in the Protestantism of the world. And who knows but some day, some far-off day perhaps, the Bethlehem song of Peace and Good-will raised by the reunited faiths of Canada will lead the heartening chorus of a reunited and universal Christendom?"

The above article was published as a Christian message, December 23, 1905, and should come appropriately at this time of decision.

Grace L. MacDonald.

Editor, of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Just at this time when the Temperance people all over Ontario are forming committees to assist the Ontario Gov't. in its enforcement of the O.T.A., seems to me a very opportune time for these same committees to begin a vigorous campaign for the long delayed assistance of the Dominion Government. The Liberals of the Province have not, in the past, been consistent in their Temperance policy. Both the Mowat and Ross administrations submitted a referendum to the people, in which the Temperance forces gained a victory. But both of these Govt's. refused to make law, the expressed wish of the majority in this respect because they claimed there was not a working majority in favor of the Temperance legislation.

Now, the Temperance Liberals (and many who are that in name only) expect to demand that the Ferguson Gov't. enforce the O.T.A. to the last letter, although it was sustained in the recent plebiscite by a much smaller majority than in the cases mentioned, under Liberal rule. The Montreal Witness (which no one can accuse of being biased in favor of Premier Ferguson), says in its issue of Nov. 19th.

"In its honest endeavor to put a stop to the bootlegging operations the (Ontario) Gov't. has had a setback in a magistrates court (then follow details of a recent case at Windsor). Asked whether the Ont. Gov't. intended to introduce new legislation to deal with the situation, Attorney General Nickle said: "We cannot introduce legislation. That is a Dominion matter." When Mr. Bureau, Dominion Minister of Customs and Excise was asked whether or not any amendment to the present legislation is proposed at the coming Dominion session, Mr. Bureau replied that that was a matter upon which he was not prepared to speak, and so the matter stands.—The Witness says in concluding: "It is one more justification of the orthodox prohibition attitude that the Dominion Gov't. and Parliament are primarily responsible for the liquor evil and must be called upon to cope with it.

The time is ripe and more than ripe for Dominion Action."

Surely the Temperance people must realize that as long as the Dominion Gov't. allows the breweries of Ontario to run day and night, manufacturing liquor, so long as they allow huge quantities to be stored in so called "Export Houses" and refuse to allow the Ontario Gov't. to deal with such cases, it is practically impossible for the provincial government to enforce the O. T. A. The Dominion Gov't. legalizes the liquor business in Ontario while the Ontario Gov't. is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly in an endeavor to enforce our O. T. A.

One Conservative Government has already been sacrificed on the altar of Temperance, another is on a fair road to share this same fate. Surely it is time for the Temperance Liberals of this province to exact something from their own party. If they are sincere let them turn their attention to their own representatives and their own Liberal Government. —otherwise those opposing Prohibition will be quite justified in thinking the whole Temperance campaign a mere political ruse—And the Temperance Conservatives in the future will be justified in doing what the Temperance Liberals have done in the past—standing by their party, regardless whether they favor Temperance Legislation or not.

The Conservative party has made its sacrifices—The Ontario Government is doing its best, even at the risk of splitting the party—It's up to th Librals.

Temperance Conservative.

COLLINS FINALLY SOX MANAGER

Smartest Player in American League Has Been Repeatedly Ignored By Owner Comiskey When in Quest of New Leader for Chicago Americans.

EDDIE COLLINS

Eddie Collins has finally been named manager of the Chicago White Sox.

Why the delay, Mr. Comiskey?

Collins is conceded to be the smartest ball player in the American League. Despite this the Chicago Club has repeatedly ignored him when in quest of a new manager.

Clarence Rowland, Kid Gleason, Frank Chance and Johnny Evers were all given the preference over Collins as manager of the White Sox.

Last season during the month that Collins [illegible] Evers was ill, the White Sox played by far the best ball of the year. When Evers returned the club immediately slumped. The Sox finished last.

No doubt the success of Cobb, Speaker, Sisler and Harris as playing managers, finally induced Comiskey to give Collins his chance.

Why Comiskey delayed his appointment so long will always be one of the mysterics of baseball..

Collins came to the White Sox from the Philadelphia Athletics. Connie Mack picked him up as a collegian at Columbia University. Under Mack Collins developed into the greatest second baseman of all time.

WINNERS IN THE EXAMINER TURKEY ROLL

The roll for the Examiner turkey prize took place yesterday at the Water Street Alleys. In the 140 class they were three bowlers, McCauley, Glover and Scates who rolled 140 even Wednesday. McCauley won the bird last night when he rolled within one pin of the 140, getting 139. Scates rolled 136 and Glover 145 It was well competed for.

In the 100 class two bowlers rolled the 100 dead and they rolled off last night. The two bowlers were Zeihr and Dewhirst. Dewhirst won the turkey in this class, rolling within one pin of 100, having 99. Zeihr rolled 111.

The NUT CRACKER BY JOE WILLIAMS

GIFT SUGGESTIONS

It is hard to tell just what is appropriate for a crossword puzzle fiend. We'd suggest you give him the air.

Be guarded in selecting a remembrance for a golfer. Links sausage has nothing to do with the links.

Nothing pleases a fourth-rate prize fighter more than a big fat ham. As a sentimental touch call the ham Jess Willard.

Iron pipes are always welcomed by retired football players, who like to crack themselves on the bean and imagine they are scrimmaging again.

While we are not positive, it seems to us that any three-cushion player would be crazy about a nice fancy sewing set.

In giving a polo player a horse never bring the animal into a cultured home without first learning whether he has sowed his wild oats.

It is not considered good form to send a lady wrestler a carton of cigarets. She may prefer cigars.

Books on legal matters do not make suitable gifts and besides tennis champions know all about the courts anyway.

Baseball scouts never seem to tire of ivory. At this period of the year, however, they may prefer soap to tusks.

For adventurous divers going over Niagara Falls in tubs lilies make the best gift. Water lilies of course.

AURA LEE SENIORS PLAY PETES NEXT TUESDAY AT LOCAL ARENA

Toronto Team Were Beaten By Only One Goal in Clash With Parkdale.

FIRST PRACTICE

Hundreds of Fans Watched First Home Work-Out Last Night.

Although the Soo game here is off the fans will be glad to learn that they will have a chance to see the Petes in action at Brock Street Rink on Tuesday night next when the Aura Lee seniors of Toronto will be here. Bill Marsden has rounded up a fast young team under Aura Lee colours this season and the "play the game" squad tied Niagara Falls is the Niagara Arena and were only beaten one goal by Parkdale in the S.P.A. series. They have such sterling young players as "Shrimp" McPherson on their line up, along with experienced puck chasers such as Tracey Shaw and Jerry Deniord and will give the Petes plenty of opposition.

The reserved seat sale will be open to subscribers at Bond's Drug Store on Monday, and the general public on Tuesday, subscribers being given the option of obtaining seats first in accordance with the promise made at the time of the advance sale.

A record crowd is expected for this game .

The Petes had their first workout of the season in their own rink last night, loosening up for the final S.P.A. game with the Soo tomorrow night Everybody was out except Bert McLeod and several hundred fans watched the practice with keen interest. A great sheet of ice was proivded and the team went at top speed for 40 minutes, getting some valuable work.

They will leave for Toronto on the 3:35 C..P.R. train tomorrow afternoon for the acid test with the Soo and a bunch of fans are going up to the Queen City for the S.P.A. final. The Greyhounds, holders of the Allen Cup will be the toughest opposition the Petes have encountered yet but the blue and white lads are determined to give them a hard battle for the honours and provide a real game for the big crowd that is sure to see this important fixture.

The appointment of M. J. Rodden as referee in the S.P.A. final is satisfactory to the Petes, as it doubtless will be to the Greyhounds, as he is well known in the north. Rodden is regarded as one of the best referees in the business. He will be the fourth official under whom the Petes have played in the series, Bobby Hewiston handling the Niagara Falls game, Harold Farlow the Preston fixture and Lou E. Marsh the game with Parkdale.

TORONTO, Dec. 19.—(Canadian Press).—Peterboro sent word yesterday that they would be at full strength for the Senior S.P.A. final with the Soo Greyhounds, Allan cup holders, here to-morrow night, though it was thought at one time that Bert McLeod for business reasons, would be unable to play. They may enter the game favorites, says the Mail and Empire.

AMERICAN LEAGUE TO KEEP JOHNSON

Representatives of Clubs Don't Want Him to Resign.

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—Ban Johnson, president of the American League, is not likely to resign despite the startling manner in which the club owners of its own organization rebuked him at a meeting here yesterday for his attitude toward Commissioner Landis and deprived him of the power he has exercised in organized baseball for more than 20 years.

The American League executive remained in seclusion yesterday, but remarks of Clerk Griffith, president of the Washington Club; Thomas Shibe, president of the Philadelphia Club; Col. Jacob Ruppert, of the New York American and Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, were efficient to convey the impression that they will strongly support their league chief and do not want him to resign.

Griffith, with Shibe and Mack, called at the American League headquarters to pay their respects to Johnson. They made themselves clearly understood that they did not come to ask Johnson to resign. As Johnson failed to put in an appearance at his office and they were unsuccessful in their efforts to see him, they conveyed their views to Henry J. Killilea, a Milwaukee attorney and lifelong friend of Johnson.

French Press All Tangled On Gilbert

PARIS, Dec. 18.—(United Press). — Despite the fact that Seymour Parker Gilbert crossed the Atlantic to swing what is commonly referred to as "one of the biggest jobs in Europe," that of Agent General for Reparations Payments, no one in Paris yet seems to know what his name is Foreign names, and especially American and English names, always have been a little too much for the average Frenchman and for the French press. Such names are almost invariably mis-spelled, and not only misspelled, but juggled in such a way that even the owners of the names half the time would not recognize them.

The case of Gilbert, who came into great fame when he was selected as Agent General for Reparations Payments is no exception to this rule, it is rather a flagrant example of it.

It isn't that Gilbert is not known here. Some of his decision in the reparations problem already have caused quite a stir and the French press mentions him almost every day in one way or another. But there is yet to be recorded an instance where his name in full has been set down correctly.

"Monsieur Gilbert Parker Seymour," writes one French paper. Another great organ of public opinion will abridge somewhat and say "Monsieur Seymour Parker", or "Monsieur Gilbert Parker." Even the French Foreign Office refers to "Monsieur Gilbert Parker."

To cap the climax one of the best known French papers recently in commenting on Gilbert's decision on the 26 per cent tax on German imports, wrote of "Sir Gilbert Parker," and printed a picture of the famous but elderly author, which set off prominently Sir Gilbert's beard, whiskers and grey hair.

RICE AND COMPEAU GET CHANCE TO TURN

Kingston's Catcher and Shortstop Receive Good Offers From Pro Teams.

KINGSTON, Dec. 19. — "Lex" Rice, the crack catcher of the Kingston C.O.B.L. team last summer, will probably next season be seen in professional baseball, if he carries out his intentions. Rice has received several good offers, and may be found behind the bat in the New York - Pennsylvania League next summer.

Not only is Rice expected to leave the city, but it is also reported on good authority that "Mosey" Compeau, the sensational shortstop of the local team, will also perform in other fields next summer, most likely in professional company. Compeau is to-day one of the best shortstops who ever performed in the city; his fielding has been most spectacular always, and his hitting hard and timely. During the past season he batted .350, being the best local batter. Compeau has received a fine offer to turn professional, and is considering the offer.

If both Rice and Compeau leave the city Kingston will lose two good players who will be hard to replace.

INTERESTING REVIEW OF PRODUCE MARKETS FOR LOCAL READERS

Prices Advance on Tea and Coffee—Coffee Grown at Chatham, Ontario — Fruit Pests Cut Into Fruit Supply.

THE TURKEY CROP.

(By Jeannette).

Steadily adancing prices on teas and coffees and higher quotations on oranges and onions are the high lights in local markets just now. It is anticipated that packaged teas will take a big jump shortly, with some of the varieties now selling at 75 cents going to 90 cents and $1.00. A short crop and much increased consumption are major reasons given for the condition. After the war, the country was loaded up with tea, and there was little demand for it. Consequently, the acreage was not increased. This season weather conditions and labor troubles in India were not favorable to a good year, and on top of this, comes a world-wide demand for more tea. Germany and Russia in particular are using more tea than in years, the advance of the prohibition movement being a large factor in this condition. In Germany alone, in connection with the Young Germany Clubs, over a million young men have pledged themselves against the use of intoxicants, and are turning to the "cup that cheers and does not inebriate" as a substitute. "What is one man's meat is another man's poison" is borne out in some degree by these movements. The laudable desire of the nation that used to be sold on lager beer to try something milder in brews affects, temporarily, at least, the budget of the working man and woman in alien countries.

With coffee, the condition is just about the same. Prices are now about fifteen cents per pound higher than at this time a year ago, and consumption is also increasing of the fragrant bean. One important factor in the lesser crop of this season was the continued drouth and cold winds which materially damaged the usual big crop in the State of Sao Paulo in Brazil. World coffee requirements this year are short by about four million bags, according to experts.

An interesting report comes from Kent County, from a woman who for the past two years has been successfully producing coffee in her garden in Chatham. These plants grow about three feet high, and the beans are picked when green, before the frost has a chance to attack them. They are then allowed to dry and afterwards roasted and ground, producing, it is said, the most delicious coffee that one could wish to drink. This is only another proof of the contention that almost anything can be grown in Canada, if one takes the trouble to try.

The reason advanced for a stronger market in the "strong" onion is the fact that Western Ontario was recently cleaned up of the tearful vegetable by buyers from Cuba, who came in and took out a hundred carloads, to forestall their own late crop.

As for oranges, an increase of $1.25 a case has been made recently on some varieties, owing to a sudden decline in stocks. Oranges started coming in to Canada from the new crop much earlier than usual, commencing early in November. Japanese oranges for the Christmas trade have come in floods to Western Canada this year, the prairie provinces alone taking 130 carloads. They sell around $2 a box.

Little harassing undercurrents of life have their being in mercantile circles, as elsewhere. There are murmurs about the new fruit pest, the Mediterranean fruit fly, a good-looking, large creature with diaphanous wings, that finds a cold welcome from fruit importers. In Spain, another pest fly has been attacking the olive orchards. Worms in the walnuts are another source of irritation, and there are rumors of an invasion of French potato bugs into Germany, and of wild efforts on the part of the Teutonic merchants to check this latest evidence of French retaliation. In Ontario, dry rot in the potatoes and sprouting of the onions held in stock are further complaints.

Currants and raisins are in a strong market. The Australian agreement, ratified by both countries, has not yet gone into effect. Various arguments are advanced pro and con, in connection with this projected agreement. A well-known local wholesaler speaks in very high terms of the excellent Sultana raisin grown in the Antipodes. Higher prices are looked for in flour, but sugar quotations are expected to be lower in the latter part of January. Salmons in the Cohoe and Sockeye brands have also increased recently.

In the stores, the Advent season has brought its annual impetus to fish sales, and the Christmas time shows windows decked with all the fixings; the pink and red crackers, the rock candy and assorted creams that stay in retirements for twelve months and blossom forth for the Noel tide, the holly wreaths with their cheerful berries and the jolly Christmas cakes and puddings.

Although prices have advanced slightly during the past week, dealers are not anticipating the price of the succulent turkey to be as high as it was a few years ago. Last year turkey quotations reached a very low point owing to heavy shipments from the Western Provinces about a week previous to Christmas Day. At the present time, dealers in Toronto are paying an average of 33 cents per pound as compared with 27 cents at this time a year ago.

"Many Ontario farmers," says a Toronto despatch, "became discouraged with turkeys a few years ago. Blackhead carried off a great percentage of the young. However, farmers on the edge of the large semi-waste areas in Manitoulin Island, the Bruce Peninsula and along the southern fringe of the wooded area in Eastern Ontario are beginning to find that turkeys can be raised fairly easily. There is plenty of range and insect life. This increased interest has resulted in over 484,000 turkeys in Ontario this fall, or more than for a dozen years past. An increase of 120,000 is reported in the past twelve months alone."

"Hens and chickens also show a big increase. In 1921 there were 33,000,000 in Canada, barring British Columbia; to-day that number has increased to 40,750,000. Over a third of the hen population is located in Ontario, which leads all other provinces with 15,187,000 birds this year. Five years ago there were little better than 10,000,000 birds in Ontario. Geese seem to be holding their own, with slightly over a million birds for all Canada. There are probably more ducks now on the farm than ever before. In 1921, there were 740,000; this year there are 1,205,000."

Canada, however, is still a long way behind the Orient in the total of its feathered population. In China alone there are 350,000,000 hens, or approximately one hen for every person.

In the stores, there are new arrivals from the south to tempt the winter palate of northern residents. Hot house cucumbers from Florida at 35 and 50 cents a throw; egg plant from the flowery clime also, and tomatoes and celery and spinach and cauliflower, all the way from California. California sends pears also at a nickel apiece. Cuba contributes pineapples and from England there are luscious hothouse grapes at $1.25 a pound.

An interesting item from Vancouver tells of the discovery of a new apple by Miss Elizabeth Hall of Lulu Island, Vancouver, a lady who was trained as a nurse at Long Island College, New York City, and was formerly in charge of the Toronto V.O.N. work. "An apple core thrown thoughtlessly into a flower bed; the sprouting of a young tree, pruning at various intervals, until it was grown and bearing handsome apples, red with streaks of palest lemon-yellow and of medium size, flattened blobe; this is the history."

Various titles for the new find were tried out and found to be duplicated of names of other varieties. Finally the name of the "Lulu" apple was bestowed on the new arrival in the fruit world.

SANTA CLAUS MATINEE AT CAPITOL TOMORROW

Big Box of Candy for Every Kiddie Attending

The Capitol's annual Santa Claus matinee, held every year as a treat to the young patrons of the Capitol theatre, will take place tomorrow afternoon, when a special program will be shown, featuring Buck Jones in "Winner Take All". Every child attending will receive a great big box of luscious chocolates and bonbons. As well as Buck Jones, a triple-comedy bill, including one of Aesop's Funny Fables, a cartoon comedy and an episode of "The Hazards of Helen" are on the program. Admission is only 11c for Kiddies and 25c for adults. The matinee will start at 2.30 sharp.

If you want to see a virile, volcanic, dynamic drama of western manhood and eastern temptations, Buck Jones is there in "Winner Take All", at the Capitol today and Saturday.

This newest William Fox attraction starring the popular cowboy is all action; prize-fights, plungers, spenders, parties, and fast roadsters; the last word in luxury blended with the grim realism of the prize-ring.

This critic won't give away the crackerjack of a story from the trained typewriter of the w.k. Saturday Evening Post writer, Larry Evans. But it gives Buck Jones the greatest scope of his career for displaying old and new talents.

Buck does superbly his old western stuff that's gained him millions of admiring fans, and at the same time he flashes a brand new line, as a "busted" cowboy who battles his way to heavyweight championship honors; then is beaten by the fast pace of the Big City; loses the girl he thinks he madly loves to a millionaire; then makes a great comeback in the greatest of all screen fights with a sensational surprise knockout finish that knocks the cowboy pug through the ropes of Love's arena into the arms of the real Girl, and ends his ring career for ever and happily after.

Lovely Peggy Shaw, equally so of face and form, is the lily in the mire of metropolitan night life, and among other notable screen favorites in the cast are Edward Hearn, Lilyan Tashman, William Norton Bailey and Ben Deeley.

AT THE ROYAL.

"HOOT" MILLIONAIRE COWBOY IN NEW ROLE.

A good cowboy gone wrong offers a tonic of laughter in "Broadway or Bust," Universal's latest Hoot Gibson release, which opened at the Royal Theatre last night.

Gibson is introduced as a poverty and love stricken cowboy. His girl jilts him because an inheritance of wealth elevates her thoughts of romance to a field of a more fashionably clothed strata. Later, the cowboy has a chance to return his sweetheart's highstrung tactics by snubbing her, when his own financial ship comes in, in New York society. They patch up their quarrel before the final fadeout, but the path of their romance is strewn with laughs and a bit of adventure.

Radium is discovered on the cowboy's ranch. He sells it and with his pal, outfit from a mail order catalogue and journey to Broadway.

Gibson's whimsical personality has never prompted more chuckles and hearty laughs than it does in this production. Edward Sedgwick directed. The cast is able and put it over with gusto.

The Andy Gump comedy also causes many a laugh. In fact the entire programme is comedy. The musical accompaniment by Mrs. Foster leaves nothing to be desired. You can't go wrong on a visit to the Royal.

VALUABLE PRIZES FOR KIDDIES AT ROYAL.

AT THE REGENT.

"GOING UP" FLIES INTO HEARTS OF AUDIENCE.

Douglas MacLean As Star of New Film Keeps House in Uproar.

"Going Up," Douglas MacLean's latest screen production, flew into the Regent Theatre yesterday and flew away with about all the laughter the audience could reasonably be expected to spare in one evening. Mr. MacLean is the star of the high altitude comedy and the aviation clothes he wears fit him without a wrinkle.

Like every other screen star, Mr. MacLean appears to the best advantage when his story material is adequate and "Going Up" is the best vehicle of his career, not excepting 'The Hottentot' and 'Twenty-Three and a Half Hours' Leave.' The play is a two-time Broadway success. Originally presented as "The Aviator," by James H. Montgomery, it scored heavily on the New York stage. Later, it was set to music by Otto F. Harbach and Louis A. Hirsch and presented by Cohan & Harris as "Going Up." The musical version played for more than two years in New York and throughout the country and a year and a half in London.

Mr. MacLean as Robert Street, a young man with a distinct aversion to all things aeronautic, proves himself a skillful farceur. His capable support includes Marjorie Daw, Hallam Cooley, Edna Murphy, Hughie Mack, John Steppling, Arthur Stuart Hull, Francis McDonald and others. The film was directed by Lloyd Ingraham and is presented by Associated Exhibitors, who first introduced Harold Lloyd in a feature comedy. Arthur S. Kane surely knows how to pick his comedians.

INVESTIGATE KILLING.

Governor Arthur Hyde Ordered Attorney General to Make Investigation.

CHARLESTON, Mo., December 19. — An investigation was under way here to-day as the result of a message from Governor Arthur Hyde to Attorney General Jesse Barrett last night, following the death fo Roosevelt Grigsby, negro, aged 20, who was hanged, shot, and his body dragged through streets and burned by a mob. The outburst was prompted by an alleged attack the negro attempted to make on a whie girl.

Grigsby was arrested following his identification by a 15 year old girl as the man who stepped from the shadows of a dark street, and grappled with her, but was frightened away by a passing motorist.

STUDIO CLUB MET.

Mr. Rupert Gliddon Gave an Interesting Address.

The regular monthly meeting of the Dorothy Park Studio Club was held on Tuesday, with a good attendance of pupils. The president, Mrs. Ford Turner, occupied the chair

Before commencing the splendid programme, Mr. R. Gliddon, Hon. President of the club, congratulated Mrs. Park and her pupils on the splendid management and co-operation, which went to make the Dalton Baker recital the great success it was, and hoped in the near future that a concert on the same standing would be given, the speaker assuring the club that it would be greatly appreciated.

One of the most interesting items on the programme, was "A Talk on Instrumentation of a Symphony Orchestra," by Mr. Rupert Gliddon, the able conductor of the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra. The speaker gave an outline of what constituted an orchestra, giving the names of instruments and their numbers, and introducing to his audience the names of great orchestral conductors. He also told of some of the difficulties conductors meet with.

Those taking part in the program were Misses Frances Robertson, Gladys Mulholland, Ethelwyn Dicks, Helen Lamb, Mr. Douglas Carlisle.

A piano solo was rendered by Mr. Milbank, a pupil of Mr. Gliddon, and a flute solo given by Mr. Peterson, a member of the Peterboro Symphony Orchestra.

TURKEY CLAIMS RIGHT TO DRIVE OUT GREEKS

Permanent Court of International Justice to Meet at Hague.

GENEVA, Dec. 19. — (Canadian Press).—The Permanent Court of International Justice will meet at The Hague on January 12th to take up the Greco-Turkish questions, it was announced by the Secretariat of the League of Nations to-day. The Court will consider the status of the Greek residents of Constantinople and interpretation of the Greco-Turkish convention.

Turkey claims the right to expel thousands of Greeks from Constantinople on the ground that they had not been permanently established there for a length of time specified in the convention with Greece to permit them to continue their residence.

WEDDING BELLS

KILBORN—SPENCE

APSLEY, Dec. 19. — A wedding that created a great deal of local interest took place at St. George's Church, Apsley, on Wednesday, when Marjorie, the second daughter of the Rev and Mrs. C. A. G. Spence, became the bride of George Kilborn, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Kilborn, the ceremony being performed by the bride's father. The church which was most beautifully decorated with arches and festoons of evergreens and white roses, white and silver being the predominating tone was crowded to the doors when the bride entered on the arm of her brother, Rex, to the music of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin played by her uncle E. L. Spence. She was charmingly attired in silver beaded white silk georgette over white satin with bridal veil and wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white carnations, her only ornament being a pearl necklace the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaids, the Misses Phyllis and Cicely Spence and Myrtle Windsor were all dressed in pink with headgear of white silk maline and wore bouquet of white and pink carnations on their shoulders. The bridegroom was supported by Archie Wilson. The marriage ceremony was immediately followed by the celebration of the Holy Communion and the sacredness and solemnity of both services created a deep impression on the congregation At the conclusion Mendelsohn's wedding march was played as the party left the church.

A reception was held at St. George's Institute directly after the ceremony when about 130 guests sat down to a bounteous repast, the cuisine being entirly under the care of Mrs. James Downing and Mrs. Stanley Windsor, whose kind offices were deeply appreciated by the host and hostess.

The Rev. J. Ogden in a happy and felicitious speech proposed the health of the bride and bridegroom concluding with a charming poem composed by himself especially for the the occasion. The evening was devoted to dancing which was kept up to a late hour, the music being supplied by John Coones, A. McColl and Mrs. P. Scott. At supper time Mr. Spence sang "For you alone."

The popularity of the young couple was demonstrated by the number and quality of the wedding gifts numbering over one hundred, including $130 in cheques.

Mr. and Mrs. Kilborn left on Thursday morning to spend a short honeymoon with the former's mother at Colebrook and on their return will reside here.

HEARD SON BY RADIO.

James Milloy's Speech at Minneapolis Meeting Heard by Father Here.

Broadcasted from Minneapolis, Minn., the speech delivered by Mr. James Milloy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Milloy, Parnell Street, on Monday night was clearly and distinctly heard by his parents. Mr. Milloy was one of the principal speakers at a meeting of the North-West North Dakota Development Association.

"I heard him just as clearly and distinctly as if he were in the same room with us," said the father, "and it certainly gave me a queer sensation. That was the first speech I ever heard Jim make, and if I do say so, he made a good job of it, and got a big hand. The meeting seemed to be a booster affair for the promotion of that part of North Dakota. My only regret was that as a Peterboro and Ontario boy, it was not his home town and district he was promoting."
